A SPARRING EXHIBITION.—On Tuesday evening there was a large attendance of youths at Kerrigan's Hall, No. 22 White-street, to witness a set to with the gloves, for the benefit of a young man named HARRY AARON, who is a favorite among the youthful sports, and, as his teacher says, a remarkably promising lad, in the "manly art of self-defence." The exhibition was to have commenced at 8 o'clock, but the first two were not stripped and gloved until half an hour afterwards. At this time the Hall was well filled by those who take particular interest in pugilistic displays, and all observed good order throughout. At the hour named, the master of ceremonies, Mr. WILLIAM TOVEE, ascended the platform—erected in the centre of the Hall—and introduced young DONNELLY and SMITH, for a friendly bout. Both were quite small, and neither appeared over 16 years of age. As they raised their maulers the gloves appeared too cumbersome to be wielded with effect by arms so small—but as soon as time was called both began flourishing them in the most approved style. Both stopped very well, and, consequently, it was some time before either got a good hit home. The first blow came from Young DONNELLY, who slipped in with his left a blow on SMITH's knob, that sent him hopping to the guards. He soon rallied, however, and returned the compliment, first by a loud call upon DONNELLY's ribs with his right, and then by a well-executed upper-cut on his mug with his left. Some excellent ear warmers followed from both, and then they retired to their respective corners, to recover their wind. Three or four more rounds followed, with similar results, when they retired—DONNELLY with his ribs well tickled, and SMITH endeavoring to allay the excitement prodnced by the frequent disturbance of his nose.

The next pair introduced was YOUNG TOVEE and CHRISTOPHER HILL, about 17 years of age. They were larger than the others, and "better sport" was anticipated. As soon as time was called they shook hands and began pummeling each other in a harmless way to the infinite delight of their respective friends. They confined themselves chiefly to "Chancery Practice," in which they are considered expert for their age, with an occasional drop and upper-cut from TOVEE, which generally made a profound impression upon HILL's physical system.

The next pair was "Peter the Great" (quite small) and HOB BELL (fond of a ring.) These, it was considered, displayed quite as much science as either of the above. The feeding of both was good, and, although there were not so many blows given and received, they were generally got in handsomely, and seldom failed to bring down the house.

They were followed by SCOTTY, of Brooklyn, and Young KERRIGAN; and they by MCCARTY and JIM GAETZ, who were followed by TOEL and DUNCAN; all of whom showed considerable skill, but the most admired was the bout between Cheek HARRIS and JEMMY GALLAGHER; both men whose growth had been stopped some years previous, and who had had large experience in the methods of knocking down their fellow men, that obtain in the English ring. The hitting, dodging and stopping, were very fine. HARRIS was, perhaps, the most expert of the two, although JEMMY was not to be sneezed at. On the first round HARRIS got in a star-maker, square on JEMMY's mug, which caused him to give vent to an involuntary "ooh!" and it served him right, for he would insist upon keeping it open very wide; and when in that position it was not fair to look upon. In return he made an effectual call upon the nose of HARRIS, which he responded to by an eloquent appeal to JEMMY's right listener. JEMMY heard it, and retired to his corner to recover his wind. Time was again called, and three rounds were had with similar effect. HARRIS doing his best to develop the main opening in JEMMY's frontispiece, and JEMMY, in return, sounding the ribs of his antagonist, and paying fervent attention to his kidneys.

When they had concluded, the Master of Ceremonies remarked that the conditnon of their pockets was not equal to their skill with the gloves, and that, as a natural consequence, the smallest favors would be thankfully received. As soon as he had finished speaking, there was a shower of dimes and quarters upon the platform, which JOHNNY proceeded to gather, and while he was arriving at the aggregate, HARRIS gave some imitations of JOHNNY WALKER and other celebrated pugilists.

The exhibition closed with a set-to between BARNEY AARON (the beneficiary) and MIKE TRAINOR. The play was very fine for lads of their age, and when they had concluded Mr. TOVEE returned thanks, and the spectators dispersed as orderly as they had arrived.

SUICIDE.—A young man by the name of C. S. COOKE, about 28 years of age, and a jeweler by trade, committed suicide last Sunday at his residence in Amity-street, by taking strychnine. Deceased was formerly of Oneonta, Otsego County, where we believe his father now resides. The cause of the act was unrequited love. The annexed were found on the dressing-table of deceased:

Tell my friends that I am not afraid to die, but if they are happy, live. C. S. COOKE.

Send the photograph over the table to the address marked on the back.

My thoughts are with her and I love her to the last. Albeit we are not congenial here, we may be beyond."

Body Found.

The body of a man, apparently 25 years old, was found last evening on the beach in front of the Sea-side House. He was supposed to be a seaman, and to have been in the water about two weeks. No property but a sheath knife was found on him

The Justice of the Peace refused to hold an inquest—and the Coroner being at too great a distance—the corpse was buried on the beach by the employes of Messrs. REMSEN & JOHNSON of the Sea-side House.

B. CARROLL.

THE LATE STABBING CASE IN ATLANTIC-STREET, BROOKLYN—INVESTIGATION BEFORE THE CORONER.—Coroner REDDING yesterday commenced the inquest on investigation of the body of FRANCIS DELAMORE, who died on Monday last from a stab received in the left wrist while quarreling with JAMES DUNN, near Atlantic-street Market, about two weeks ago. The following gentlemen were sworn as jurors:

E. B. Shaw,	Nathaniel Strong,
C. H. Tugman,	James Rourke,
Wm. Grady,	Hiram R. Haskins,
Bernard Kinney,	James Deary,
Wm. McGee,	Charles T. Baldwin,
George Corwin,	James Keenan.

Wm. H. Van Dugme, M. D, sworn—I made a post-mortem examination of deceased, in company with Dr. Bauer, yesterday; he died from putrid typhoid fever, the result of mortification of the left forearm.

The incisions made in the forearm after the injury I consider were properly made and had nothing to do with the death.

Lewis Bauer, M. D., sworn—I reside corner of Baltic and Court streets; I treated deceased from last Thursday until his death, and yesterday assisted at the post-mortem examination; deceased came to my house on Thursday last, and said he had had a scuffle the Saturday previous with another person at the Atlantic Market; he had a poultice on his left arm, and the arm was much swollen to the elbow; he said that the wound had bled but slightly, and that a few hours after the occurrence he had called on Dr. Drake for surgical aid; I examined the arm, and found it considerably swollen and discolored; tissue was hard and unyielding, and in some places the arm was blue, vivid and red, especially at the back of the hand it was ashy and spotted red; there was considerable pain; he was very feverish, weak and had prostrated pulse; his tongue was coated, dryish, and he had no appetite; he had not enjoyed rest for three or four nights previous; upon examining the arm closely I felt liquid in the depth of it; a small quantity of that liquid issued from the wound, and had a very bad and mortified smell; to relieve the tension of the forearm, I made a long incision across the wound, to draw the matter from below the facia; I made a long incision on the back of the arm through the facia, but without severing any blood-vessel; this done, told him to go home to bed, keep quiet, and to live liberally, the arm to be covered with poultice, and prescribed some medicine to regulate his digestive organs; when the incision was made, found the parts below the facia already mortified, and considerable gangrenous matter, and mortified fragments of the soft parts came from the incision; near the bone found the point of a knife about 1¾ inches long and ¾ inches wide; I suppose the blade must have remained as it entered, so that it presented a very small surface, and was not discovered when first probed; the next Saturday I was called to examine the patient, and found that mortification had fully set in, and the arm was very much swollen to the shoulder; made two more incisions and one on the back of the hand—from each flowed decomposed matter, gas and mortified fragments; advised the patient to go to the German Disponeary; he did go, and everything possible was done for him there; he died on Monday about twelve o'clock; considered him in a perilous condition on Thursday; I believe that the result was principally owing to the bad state of the blood of deceased; the wound would not have seriously injured a healthy person; I do not consider the surgeon who first probed the wound to blame for not finding the blade—it was below the facia; the wound was the innocent cause of death.

Nelson S. Drake, M. D., sworn: I reside corner of Henry and Pacific streets; deceased came into my office on Saturday morning, June 13; had a pocket-handkerchief tied tightly round the arm; he said his arm was cut and bleeding, and had tied that on to stop it; unloosed the handkerchief, but there was no bleeding; sponged off the blood; found the wound was in a slanting direction, and filled with clotted blood; he said a boy had stabbed him with a knife at the market; he was sure that there was no blade in the wound, and that the knife was clean; I examined the wound carefully with a probe; it extended down slantingly about an inch, and I had no reason to suppose that it extended below the facia; the was probstopped by the facia; probed it in every direction; drew the wound together with adhesive plaster, and fledged it with lint; put on a cold water bandage and put his arm in a sling; told him to keep quiet, and particularly not to use that arm; an hour afterwards saw him driving in a cart in Hicks-street; did not see him again until Monday morning the 15th, when he came to my office; the forearm was then a little swollen; the wound was perfectly closed; ordered him to put an evaporating lotion, and keep perfectly still, as I apprehended trouble; to eat nothing but gruel and dry toast; drink nothing but cold water; he told me he lived in Classon-avenue; I told him to go home and go to bed, and to let me hear from him again within 24 hours, or sooner if necessary, but did not see or hear from him again until he was dead.

A Curious Case.

Before RODMAN B. DAWSON, Esq., Surrogate of Kings County, June 24.

This case, which was opened one week ago, was continued yesterday, when the following testimony was taken:

The present administratrix, it is alleged, married deceased, Thomas Norris, while his first wife was living and without divorce. The first wife is dead, but a daughter, Mrs. Millspaugh, applies for letters of administration.

Robert Hauxill, called by counsel for Mrs. Millspaugh, and sworn, says: I am a Sandy Hook Pilot; I reside at 93 Suffolk-street, New York; I knew Thomas Norris in his lifetime, knew him some 30 years; have seen Matilda Norris his wife; I saw her in the Summer of 1832; Thomas Norris introduced me to her on Chestnut (formerly Walnut) street, New-York; next saw her in December following, just before Christmas; I had been absent from the City in the meantime—had been to France; In December, 1832, I saw her in Rose-street—saw her at Thomas Norris' house; they kept house; this time he introduced her to me as his wife; the first time he did not; so far as I could see they were living together as husband and wife; saw her in the street afterwards; never saw her in another house afterwards; I have seen her in company with him; knew Mrs. Millspaugh, formerly Hester Norris; have seen her with her father, Thomas Norris; I saw her in Chestnut-street, New-York City: I saw a younger child—that one is now deceased; it was April; I recollect the fact of the separation; he told me he had separated with his wife; he brought the children to the house where I boarded; Hester must be now about twenty-three years old; I should suppose from her size that at that time Hester was four years old; the other child died at the house where I boarded; I think its name was Mary, but I won't be positive; I saw Mrs. Norris frequently after the separation; saw her once in Grand street, near John-street, New-York; don't know the house No 42 Jackson street, near Cherry; have seen her in Jackson street, New-York; she was in the street; I spoke to her; I asked her where she had been; she said she came from Philadelphia; she said nothing about Thomas Norris at that time; this was about four years ago; I have seen Mr. Thomas Norris and Mrs. Norris together in Jackson street, near Cherry; they were talking together on a stoop; I mean, by Mrs. Norris, the woman he introduced to me as his wife in 1832; I always supposed she was his wife; he always spoke of her as his wife to me; Mr. Norris has often spoken to me of his daughter Hester; I have no recollection of his inquiring after Hester; it is all of twelve years since I saw Mr. Norris with Mrs. Norris; I can't tell how long he lived in Monroe street; I went to see them.

Cross examined by Mr. Cooke, Counsel for Administratrix—When I saw them in Chatham-street, in 1832, it was before the marriage; they were then going to the theatre; he introduced her to me as his intended wife; he said, "Bob, this is my intended wife;" I think he called her Mary; I am hard of hearing, and was then; she did not tell me how long she had been in Philadelphia; since I saw them together in Jackson street he went a whaling; he was away between two and three years; he went in the ship Mogul; I saw him about a week or so after he got back; it was shortly after he got back that he told me he had Catharine D. Norris, the administratrix; from that time down to his death, he lived with her as his wife; the house he brought the children to, was No. 9 Chestnut-street; he said he and his wife had separated; he said, "We have separated;" I believe these were the words; he referred to Hester's mother and himself; I told him before he married the last woman, he ought to go through a course of law with the other first; he said he knew all about that; I said, if you know all about it, that's sufficient; he used to talk it over now and then; he never gave any reason for marrying this lady while the other was living; I never heard the woman above referred to called Matilda, until called so by the plaintiff's counsel; I have heard her called Mary, and knew her by no other name—I mean Hester's mother; Thomas Norris told me that Mary, his wife, was Hester's mother; I have seen this Mary Norris since the death of Thomas Norris; I saw her in the street where Mr. Norris lived the day he was buried; he did not say he had taken legal proceedings to be relieved from his first wife; this was after he returned from whaling; I knew the first wife was living at that time; I don't know whether he knew it; I had not seen his wife for a year or more.

Adjourned for one week.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—PATRICK MCNULTY was knocked down and robbed by two men, Tuesday night, on Hamilton-Avenue, Brooklyn. He yelled so lustily that Officer KINLEY of the Third Precinct was aroused and went promptly to assistance, and eventually succeeded in arresting one of the robbers who gives his name as BARNEY GREEN. He was committed to answer.

☞ RICHARD SANDERSON, of Canada, was swindled out of $175, on Tuesday, by two New-York sharpers, who employed the patent-safe game as their medium.

NEW-JERSEY.

Princeton College Commencement—The Hundredth Anniversary at that Place.

Yesterday was a day long to be remembered by the graduates and under-graduates of Princeton. It was the occasion of the One Hundredth Commencement of this College held at Princeton since its removal to its present seat in 1757. Previous to that year its sessions were held at New-Brunswick first, and afterwards at Newark. There were more graduates assembled at Princeton, yesterday, than had been there since the Centennial celebration in 1847.

The exercises commenced on Tuesday at 3½ o'clock in the afternoon. The members of the two literary societies of the institution, the American Whig, and the Cliosophic, marched in procession from the College Chapel to the First Presbyterian Church, a commodious building, in which the public exercises at Princeton are always held, situated on a plot of ground adjoining the "campus," as with classic correctness the College grounds are called. Here an address was delivered before them by Hon. WM. C. ALEXANDER, a graduate of the class of 1824, President of the Senate of New-Jersey. His theme was—"The Influence of Literary Institutions on Human Freedom." With the advance of civilization and learning the love of liberty and a sense of its proper appreciation had grown among mankind. Men of educational attainments had been the leaders in some of the greatest struggles for freedom which the world had witnessed. He instanced that English Revolution in which a graduate of Oxford was the leading spirit. He referred to that struggle for liberty in Scotland, in which graduates of Aberdeen and Glasgow were conspicuous; to the French Revolution of 1830, when the pupils of the Polytechnic School at Paris exerted such an influence, and to the Revolution in Bavaria, to which the principal impetus was given by literary men. In this country, he said, the influence of Nassau Hall, where the great principle of Constitutional liberty called for countenance and support, had been in times past by no means inconsiderable. RICHARD STOCKTON, a graduate of the first class (of six members only) which left this institution in 1748, was a signer of the Declaration of Independence. JOHN WITHERSPOON, a President of the College, was also a signer of that instrument, and one fifth of all who signed it were graduates of Princeton. At one time one-sixth of the United States Senate were Princeton men.

Mr. ALEXANDER'S Address, which was delivered in excellent voice and with great energy, closed with an exhortation in poetry to the graduating class, to imitate their elder brothers, and uphold the reputation of their Alma Mater. Upon them, as liberally educated men, would devolve the great responsibility in the coming age.

At 8 o'clock in the evening the Honorary Orations of the Junior Class commenced to be delivered in Nassau Hall, as follows:

WILLIAM L. DAYTON, Jr., New-Jersey—"San Marino, the Model Republic."

ROBERT C. HUTCHINGS, New York—"Three Sisters of the Celtic Race." Caledonia, Hibernia and Wales were the subjects of his eulogy.

HENRY A. BUTTZ, Pennsylvania—"The Meccas."

Yesterday morning at 9½ o'clock, the Faculty, Alumni, under-graduates and invited guests formed in procession at the College chapel and proceeded to the Church. The Faculty and speakers only were in their gowns. The Church was crowded to overflowing. All the villagers for miles around, as usual on such occasions, had flocked together to witness the exercises, and the friends of the two hundred students from twenty-eight different States were quite as numerous as the delightful day and the interesting occasion might have been expected to draw together. On the stage were the President of the College, Rev. JOHN MACLEAN, D. D. LL. D.; His Excellency Gov. WM. A. NEWELL, of New-Jersey, President of the Board of Trustees; Hon. WM. L. DAYTON, late candidate for the Vice-Presidency, looking exceedingly well; Rev. JOHN C. STEVENS' WILL.—The will of the late JOHN C. STEVENS, of Hoboken, New-Jersey, has been recorded in the office of the Surrogate of the County of Hudson. The first article directs the payment of all his debts and funeral expenses. He then directs a division of his real property in South Amboy into two parts. That portion on which the Brick Cottage stands he bequeaths to his two sisters, HASTEE and SOPHIA, to hold as joint tenants, without accountability, during their lives, and to the survivor of them for life, the remainder on the death of the last survivor to go to his nephew, FRANCIS CONOVER. The other portions he gives to his sister, JULIANA CONOVER, wife of THOMAS A. CONOVER, with a request that, if she desire to sell, the Camden and Amboy Railroad and Transportation Company may have the refusal of it. To his brother EDWIN A., he gives his part of what is known as the Mansion House and grounds immediately attached, on the Hill at Hoboken. He also gives him his interest in the silver and plate heretofore in use and belonging to the yacht Maria, including all cups or pieces of silver won in any regatta, excepting the piece of silver with the inscription "Wave" upon it, which he gives to his nephew, CAMBRIDGE LIVINGSTON. He gives to his cousin JULIA STOCKTON $1,000, and to his sister JULIANA CONOVER all the silver and pictures in the South Amboy mansion, except the portrait of Mrs. CRAWFORD and the miniature of Gen. CRAWFORD. Those he gives to JOHN G. LIVINGSTON, to go to his son CAMBRIDGE, at his death; and, also, excepting the portraits of his family, which he gives to his brother EDWIN. He gives to his brother-in-law THOMAS A. CONOVER, all the farm and garden implements, &c., and the products of the farm at South Amboy, including his wines and liquors. To several servants he gives $500, and to the New York Union Club, two honds for $1,000 each, made by the Club, and belonging to him. All the remainder of his property he gives, one half to the members of his own family, and one half to the relatives of his late wife. He appoints his brother, EDWIN A. STEVENS, and his nephews, CAMBRIDGE LIVINGSTON and RICHARD G. CONOVER, and their survivors, his executors. The will was executed February 4, 1857. In a codicil, dated March 6, 1857, he gives his nephew FRANCIS CONOVER, property to the amount of $21,500, in consequence of his agreement to resign his commission as Lieutenant in the United States Navy. A subsequent codicil makes some changes, but they are not material.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE.—DAVID SCOTT, auctioneer of Jersey City, sold, yesterday, a part of the property lately improved on the Jersey City shore-front, by filling in at the expense of the Jersey Associates, who held the sale. Only twenty-four lots out of the entire number were sold. They were disposed of at prices varying from $4,160 to $2,500. E. CUNARD bought three, extending from the warehouses to Hudson-street, for $11,000. The lot at the South-east corner of Hudson and York streets, was struck off for $4,160. The sale of the remainder of the lots was postponed until the improvements at the ferry are completed.

ORDINANCE CONCERNING RUNNERS.—The Jersey City Common Council has adopted an ordinance requiring, among other things, that hack and omnibus drivers and public porters who practice their business in Jersey City must be citizens of that city, and must take a licence for $10, and $1 for clerk fee must be paid. It defines all persons acting as runners or agents for hotels, carriages, transportation lines, &c., to be public porters. Nine votes in the Common Council—being a majority—is required to grant such a license. A badge must be worn by those licensed. A fine of $10 is established for disobedience to city officers. A fine of $20 is fixed for those who act without a licence. Penalties are provided for a violation of this law.

THE MAYOR'S CONTEMPT.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE DENIED

The Street Commissioner's Office.

Interesting, but not very Harmonious Testimony.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Peabody.

In the matter of the Application of Daniel D. Conover to compel the delivery to him of the Books, Papers, &c., of the Street Commissioner's Office.—At precisely 11 o'clock Mayor Wood entered the Court-room, accompanied by his counsel, and took a seat on the bench with Judge PEABODY. The Court was soon after opened, and the Mayor took the witness stand. Mr. Field resumed the examination as follows:

Q.—Was Mr Conover ejected from the Street Commissioners' Office by your order? A.—No, Sir.

Mr. Brady objected to this question.

Q.—Did Capt. Bennett act under your orders?

This was also objected to by Mr. Brady.

The Court decided that all testimony relating to the fact of the ejection of Mr. Conover from the office was admissible.

Mr. Field—Was Capt. Bennett acting under your orders?

This was objected to by Mr. Busteed, but the objection was overruled.

Mr. Field—If the Mayor will say to me that he desires to be excused because he is afraid that it will subject him to a civil or criminal prosecution. If he does not it rests entirely with me. Was Capt. Bennett acting under your orders? A.—So far as Capt. Bennett acted in protecting Mr. Turner in the discharge of his duty as Deputy Street Commissioner, and preserving the peace of that office, so that the public business could be transacted, is concerned, he did it under my direction.

Q.—Did he when he rejected Mr. Conover? A.—No. Sir, because I never considered Mr. Conover in the office to be ejected.

Q.—Then you gave him no orders to turn Mr. Conover ont of the rooms? A.—I say that I never considered him in the way, and so far as I knew, he never attempted to exercise the duties of Street Commissioner.

Q.—And you had no objection to his remaining in the rooms, of course? A.—No, Sir, so far as he behaved himself.

Q.—And so far as you know he did behave himself? A.—I had heard say, and have read in the newspapers, that he came there with some bullies and attempted to take possession.

Q.—Were any of your policemen acting under and as deputies of the Sheriff? [Objected to and ruled ont by the Court.]

Q.—When did you first know of the executions against the City, which was held by the Sheriff? A.—I think one of the deputies came into my office after the Street Commissioner's Office was in the possession of the Sheriff under the execution.

Q.—When? A.—I think it was on Monday; I speak now merely from recollection.

Q.—What time of the day? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Had you previously had an interview with the Sheriff about the matter? A.—About the execution?—No, Sir, I never heard of the existence of it.

Q.—Did you not have an interview with the Sheriff about sending a force then to keep Mr. Conover out? A.—No, Sir; my recollection is that I suggested to the Sheriff that he deputize some persons to stay there as there was a controversy about the legality of the persons called policemen.

Q.—Was not the issue of those executions arranged between you and the Sheriff for the purpose of keeping Mr. Conover out? A.—No, Sir, that intimation is entirely unnecessary.

Mr. Field—I make no intimation whatever.

The Witness—I will state further that the question involves impertinence on the part of the counsel who makes it.

Q.—Had you not any interview with the Sheriff with reference to the arrangement by which Mr. Conover should not be allowed to come into office? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Never? A.—Never.

Q.—Do you know of any such arrangement having been made by anybody?—No, Sir; nor do I suppose there was any.

Q.—Then the executions were issued in the ordinary course of business in such matters? A.—I cannot say; I am no Sheriff

Q.—But so far as you know? A.—So far as I know they were.

Q.—Then you did not know that they were to be issued? A.—I did not know that there was a judgment of the kind in existence.

Q.—For what purpose was a large body of policemen assembled in the vicinity of the Hall of Records on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the 15th, 16th and 17th inst.? A.—To keep oullies and rowdies from disturbing the business of the office, and protect the Deputy Street Commissioner and the Street Commissioner, Mr. Develin, after he was appointed, in the discharge of their duties.

Q.—Had you any intimation that any person was coming there to make any disturbance? A.—That was the general rumor.

Q.—From whom did you hear that rumor? A.—I cannot recollect the individuals, but that was the information communicated.

Q.—Who communicated it? A.—I have no recollection.

Q.—Had you an interview with anybody when Mr. Conover was in the Hall of Records in relation to anything that was to be done there? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Nor did you cause the police to be assembled? A.—No, Sir, not for that purpose.

Q.—Did you give the police any orders to assemble at the Hall of Records? A.—No. Sir, not directly.

Q.—Did you indirectly? A.—I may have advised Capt. Bennett.

Q.—What directions did you give? A.—To preserve the peace about the office of the Street Commissioner, so that Mr. Turner, and afterwards Mr. Develin, could transact their business.

Q.—Are you willing to state what was the nature of your business with the Chief of Police when you were consulted with him on Saturday?

The Witness—I desire the Court to understand that I have expressed no unwillingness to answer any question.

Mr. Field—Then, will you answer that? A.—I will; the rule of the Mayor's office is that the Chief of Police report twice each day—to the Mayor once at ten o'clock, and again at half-past one o'clock, to transact the Police business of the City; he was there in his official capacity, but the specific business I have no recollection about.

Q.—Do you know that there were any persons—any fighting-men marshaled under your police? A.—There were no such; I know that.

Q.—Were you there at the time? A.—I was not; but it was my duty to know who was there so far as the public is concerned.

Q.—Who was there beside the Police?

Mr. Brady suggested that they had better put the City Directory in evidence.

Q.—My question relates not merely to the Hall of Records, but in the vicinity of the Hall of Records in those three days? A.—I do not know who was in the Park; there was a large mass of people.

Q.—Were there not fighting men in the City Hall? A.—I was in my office.

Q.—Do you say that you know there were no fighting men gathered inside the City Hall? A.—Not so far as I know.

Q.—You saw none? A.—I saw none.

Q.—And heard none? A.—I heard none.

Q.—And you believe that there were none but policemen? A.—None but policemen and the ordinary visitors at the City Hall.

Q.—You don't consider that class of men visitors? A.—I mean to say that I was in my private office on those three days; I was there from nine o'clock in the morning until I left; of the persons who were in the Hall, and in the vicinity of the Hall of Records, of course I have no positive knowledge; both were public places and were visited by persons.

Q.—Now, Sir, I understand that so far as regards Mr. Conover's ejection from the office, (and when I say office I mean the rooms in the Hall of Records,) you gave no orders? A.—I gave no direct orders for his ejection; I desire to repeat what I said on that point, so that there may be no mistake: I told Mr. Turner that he was the Deputy Street Commissioner; that he should be protected in the discharge of his duties until there was a person properly appointed to succeed Mr. Taylor; Mr. Turner desired that he should be so protected, and called upon me, as Mayor of the City, to protect him; these officers were placed there for that purpose, so that there should be no obstruction in the discharge of the duties of his office; of what occurred I know nothing; I am told, however, that Mr. Conover was ejected; so far as I understand and believe he was never in a position to be put out, and I only know that he was put out by what he has stated.

James C. Willet was called next and testified as follows:

Mr. Field—You are Sheriff of the City and County of New-York? A.—I am, Sir.

Q.—Was Mr. Conover ejected from the Street Commissioners office by you or by your orders? A.—Not at all, Sir.

Q.—Was he ejected by any persone under your direction? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did you deputize any of the Mayor's Policemen? A.—I did not, Sir.

Q.—Did you deputize any persons at the request of the Mayor to aid you in the service? A.—I gave him twenty blank deputations and a requisition made upon me as a magistrate.

Q.—When did he make that requisition? A.—I think it was on Monday.

Q.—How early? A.—I think about 10 o'clock.

Q.—These deputations were given by you in the block? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—For what purpose? A.—To preserve the peace. The requisition upon one stated the purpose.

Q.—Did those requisitions continue in force until Mr. Conover was ejected? A.—I think they did, Sir. That is until I heard he was ejected. When I heard he was ejected I immediately went to the Street Commissioner's office and saw Capt. Bennett.

Q.—When was that? A.—I think it was on Tuesday.

Q.—Give us the time of day? A.—It was in the forenoon about ten o'clock; I asked Captain Bennett by whose authority any persons had been ejected from the office of the Street Commissioner; he told me that it was by the Mayor's; I asked him if he had—

Mr. Brady objected to the question and it was ruled out.

Q.—What did you say to Mr. Bennett? A.—I asked him if he had a special deputation from me; he replied that he had then; after the previous conversation which the Court has just ruled out I told him I should revoke that warrant, and I asked him to deliver it up to me; he said it was at home, but that he had never acted under it—that he was acting as a Captain of the Police in all he had done.

Q.—Did you levy on the books and papers in the Commissioner's Office on the execution you held? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Have you ever had them in your possession? A.—Never.

Q.—Did you ever have control of them? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Have you ever loaned them to Develin? A.—No, Sir; the only control we have is over the furniture in the office.

Q.—You levied on the furniture of the office? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—When did you receive the execution? A.—I don't know without I refer to my register.

Q.—When do you think? A.—I think it was on Monday; Mr. Vultee can testify to that; he had the executions; there was quite a crowd, and he thought that deputies should be sent to protect the property.

Q.—Previous to that time did you see the Mayor? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Was it previous to when he asked you for the deputations? A.—I think he asked for them on Monday morning.

Q.—Was anything said by the Mayor to you about an execution? A.—Nothing, Sir.

Q.—The conversation between the Mayor and yourself related to deputations? A.—Yes, Sir; he asked for a deputation, and I told him if he would give a written order I would furnish one; Vultee, my deputy, had levied upon the furniture of the Mayor's and Comptroller's offices, before this disturbance took place; he said he had not furniture enough, and so seized that in the Street Commissioner's office.

Q.—Are these executions still outstanding? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—How is it then that the furniture is given up to Mr. Develin? A.—I don't know that it is.

Q.—Was the Street Commissioner's private office kept shut by your directions? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Who put the word private over it? A.—I don't know, Sir.

Q.—Was Mr. Conover refused admission to that room? A.—He may have been; I put deputies there to prevent any parties from entering.

Q.—Did you at that time do anything to keep anybody out of that room? A.—Yes, Sir; but not Mr. Conover in particular.

Cross examined by Mr. Brady—I was not present when Mr. Vultee made the levy; it was made under his direction; on Monday morning, I think, about ten o'clock, Mr. Vultee took possession; Mr. Turner and quite a crowd were present in the office; Mr. Turner was attending to his duties; Conover sat beside the railing; I remained in the office about three minutes, and said to the crowd, "Gentlemen, you must not interfere here;" I went in again the next morning and found Captain Bennett and some ten or fifteen Policemen; Turner and Conover were also present; I went in the office twice on Monday; the second time Mr Conover was inside the railing eating his dinner; I never afterwards, at any time, saw him in that building.

Direct Examination Resumed—Mr. Conover showed me a copy of his commission from Gov. King, I told him I didn't recognize the Governor's commission, or any thing of the kind.

Capt. John W. Bennett, of the Third Ward Police, sworn: Q.—Are you a Captain in the late Municipal Police? A.—I am a Captain in the Municipal Police.

Q.—You are now acting in that body? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—You were at the Hall of Records with a Police force on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the 15th, 16th and 17th inst.? A.—Yes, Sir; in command of the Police force.

Q.—At whose order were you there? A.—By my own order.

Q.—Did not the Mayor order you to go there? A.—I received no order from the Mayor or anybody else; there were about a dozen policemen there; I did not bring them there; they were there when I came.

Q.—Why did you go there? A.—I have answered that question before, Sir; I went there because I thought proper to.

Q.—Did you receive information from anybody that led you to go there? A.—The object of my going was, that I found a crowd and several officers there; as there was no higher authority there than mine, I took command.

Q.—Did you eject Mr. Conover on Monday? A.—Yes, Sir, after remonstrating with him and telling him to go quietly; some of the officers attempted to assist me, but I told them that I could do it alone.

Q.—Were there any fighting men there? A.—I don't know what you mean by fighting men; I am not acquainted with any such; you probably know them as well as myself.

Q.—Did you see any fighting men there? A.—None, to my knowledge.

Q.—Did you eject Mr. Conover on Tuesday morning? A.—Yes, Sir, after remonstrating with him and asking him to go quietly.

Q.—Did you tell him you were acting under the orders of the Mayor? No, Sir, I don't think I did.

Q.—Did you tell one of the officers, previous to this time, to eject Mr. Conover, and, if necessary, a force of five hundred men would be placed at his disposal? A.—No, Sir, I have no recollection of saying so.

Cross-examined by Mr. Brady.—When I ejected Mr. Conover, on Monday, he was sitting at a desk in the little room next to the Street Commissioner's private office; I saw Mr. Turner give persons out of stock, but I did not see Mr. Conover give any such permits; I saw him write a note while he sat inside the railing

Mr. Charles Turner, having been sworn, testified that: He was in the Street Commissioner's office, in the Hall of Records, on Saturday, the 13th, and on the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday following; he was appointed Deputy under Mr. Taylor; he saw Captain Bennett and others eject Mr. Conover from the office on Monday, the 15th; he did not hear Mr. Conover ask under whose authority the Police were acting; he did not hear Bennett say he was acting under the orders of the Mayor and Sheriff; he heard the latter tell Captain Bennett to preserve the peace; he did not see any fighting men there; he was not acquainted with such persons; he was present on Tuesday morning when Mr. Conover was turned out of the office; he did not hear Mr. Conover ask Captain Bennett under whose authority he acted; never heard the Mayor give an order or say a word relative to putting Mr. Conover out of the office; about twelve and one-half o'clock he sent for the Mayor to come over to the Street Commissioner's office, and see him; the Mayor said that he had heard an appointment to the vacant office had been made by Gov. King, and he [Turner] replied he had heard the same thing; the Mayor told him to hold on, and keep possession, until an appointment was made by him, and confirmed by the Common Council; in the afternoon the Aldermen came to the office in a body; Alderman Wilson directed him to hold on to the office; most all of them said something to him; he first asked protection from the Mayor, and told him that there were too many about the building; the Mayor replied; if he [Turner] would keep possession of the office, he should be protected; about a dozen policemen came over with the Aldermen, and others came afterwards.

Cross-examined by Mr. Brady—I was appointed Deputy Street Commissioner on the 3d or 4th January, 1854, by Mr. Taylor; had been Deputy eight years, next January; had been employed in the office nine years, on the 1st of next August; after Mr. Taylor's death he acted as Street Commissioner, and performed all the duties until Mr. Develin took possession; no official act during that time was performed by any other person; he had possession of everything belonging to the office during that time; Mr. Develin has since performed the duties; Mr. Conover came to the office about two o'clock on Saturday, in company with fifteen or sixteen persons; he (Turner) had only two friends with him at the time—another subsequently came in; he knew four or five of those who came in with Mr. Conover; they marched in in a body, two by two; when Mr. Conover found that he would not accept his commission they dispersed; when Conover came back he had with him a number of the "up-town police;" he had heard that Mr. Conover said he would have five hundred men there to protect him; on Monday Mr. Conover was put out by the police; on Tuesday he walked out.

Direct examination resumed—Mr. Conover did not grant a permit to remove sand on Tuesday morning, because it was contrary to law; he did not grant a permit in the Street Commissioner's office, but he could not say what he might have done when he was in the Assessor's room; on Saturday, he (Turner) performed all the ordinary duties of the office, and so he did on Monday, though that day he was disturbed a good deal; Conover sat there on Monday, and he did not like to turn him out; Conover claimed to be Street Commissioner, and offered to appoint him (Turner) his deputy; he had asked for the Sheriff's posse to protect him from the crowd; there were probably eight police officers, and about twelve or fifteen citizens, composing the Sheriff's posse.

Frederick L. Vultee sworn and examined by Mr. Field—He was out in the Street Commissioner's office on Saturday the 13th June, but went there on Monday the 15th, by authority of his office to protect the property he had levied upon last year; he saw a large crowd about the Street Commissioner's and that was the reason he went there to protect the property; he went of his own accord; Mr. Conover was not ejected by his order, nor under his direction; he did not interfere with him at all; he only Policeman that he knew who acted under the deputation of the Sheriff was Officer Masterson; he put Mr. Masterson in charge as he was there by direction of Sheriff Willet, but did not know he was one of Mayor Wood's police men; he could not say whether officer McPherson was there as he did not know him; the executions he had spoken of had been stayed by order of the Court and remained in that condition on Monday, the 15th; he did not see Capt. Bennett there on Monday, but he saw him there on Tuesday about 10 o'clock.

Cross-examined by Mr. Brady—He remained in charge of the Street Commissioner's office all last week, either in person or by deputy.

Mr. Field stated that these were all the persons whom he supposed were unwilling witnesses, but there had been several affidavits voluntarily made, which he should now read. He then read the affidavit of S. Harrison Reed, as follows:

SUPREME COURT.—In the matter of the application of Daniel D. Conover to compel Charles Develin to deliver papers, &c.—City and County of New-York.—E. Harrison Reed being sworn, saith that he was present on Saturday, the 13th day of June, when the said Daniel D. Conover went to the Mayor's office with his oath of office and official bond; that the said oath of office was in due form of law and was taken and subscribed before the Recorder of the City of New-York; that the said bond was in due form of law and was executed by the said Daniel D Conover and by two sureties, each of whom was in every respect sufficient.

That on arriving at the Mayor's office, which was about noon, Mr. Conover found the Mayor closeted in his private room. He then asked to see the Mayor and was refused. He sent a messenger to the Mayor, stating that he wished to see him on official business. The messenger went into the Mayor's office and returned with the answer that the Mayor was engaged and could not see Mr. Conover, the messenger at the same time stating that he had informed the Mayor that Mr. Conover's business with him was official, and that he had official papers to submit to him, and Mr. Conover after waiting till about two o'clock, then left with his bond and proceeded to the Comptroller's office, where he then filed it, and that immediately after so filing it he went into the Street Commissioner's office and then and there took possession of the said office.

That during the time deponent and said Conover were waiting in the Mayor's office, although admission to the Mayor was refused Mr. Conover, other persons were admitted to him through both doors leading to said private office.

E. HARRISON REED.

WM. B. DUSENBERRY, Commissioner of Deeds.

Mr. Reed was sworn, and examined by Mr. Brady. He was a commission broker, and had known Mr. Conover several years; took no part, had no interest, in procuring the office of Street Commissioner for Mr. Conover; Mr. Jones and himself went with Mr. Conover to the Mayor's office to serve the bonds upon the Mayor. [Witness then detailed their unsuccessful attempts to procure an audience.] Then the three went to the Comptroller's office, to file the bonds.

Mr. Brady asked to see the bonds.

Mr. Field said they were in the Comptroller's office.

Mr. Brady—They must be produced as parol evidence is inadmissible.

The next affidavit read was Mr. John M. Gridley's.

John V. Gridley being sworn, saith that on Saturday, the 13th June inst., he was at the Mayor's office, between the hours of twelve and two o'clock; that he saw Daniel D Conover in the general office of the Mayor, trying to get admission to the private office of the Mayor; that he could not get such admission; that deponent then went into the passage outside the door of the office, on which there is a door leading to the Mayor's private office; that while deponent was standing in said passage the Mayor came to the said door, looked out, and immediately closed the door; that thereupon Mr. Matsell came up and went into the Mayor's office; that immediately after Matsell's entrance two other persons came and were admitted; that then Matsell came out, and standing at said door was a policeman, whom he directed not to admit a living soul to the Mayor's office unless he was called for; that deponent remained in the passage until Mr. Conover left the office, and then went with him to the Comptroller's office, where Mr. Conover told him that he had been refused admittance to the Mayor's office, exhibited to him his commission and filed with him his bond; that Mr. Conover then repaired to the Street Commissioner's office, announced his appointment as such Commissioner, exhibited his commission, and took possession of the office.

JOHN V. GRIDLEY.

Sworn to before me, June 25, 1856, W. H. DUSENBERRY, Commissioner of Deeds.

Mr. Gridley was sworn and examined by Mr. Brady.—He was a stairbuilder; had known Mr. Conover four or five years; went to the Mayor's Office to see Mr. Conover go in; could not say how many of Mr. Conover's friends went there with him.

In answer to a question by Mr. Field witness stated he had known Mayor Wood since about the time of his first nomination for Mayor, and saw him at the office on the day Mr. Conover called there.

Mr. Field next read the affidavit of John Colvin, as follows:

City and County of New-York.—John Colvin being sworn, saith that he is a clerk in the office of the Street Commissioner; that this deponent's desk is immediately adjoining the desk of the Street Commissioner; that this deponent was at his desk on the morning of Saturday, the 13th inst.; that Charles Turner, who was the Deputy Street Commissioner, was at the desk usually occupied by the Street Commissioner; that this deponent was present in the room so occupied by said deponent and the said Turner, at about the hour of 11 o'clock A. M., on the said day; that Fernando Wood, Mayor of this City, entered the room at that hour or thereabout, passed to deponent's desk to the desk occupied by the said Turner as aforesaid, and entered upon a whispered colloquy with the said Turner, whereupon this deponent was requested by the said Turner to leave the room; that this deponent immediately left the room, closing the door behind him, and remained in the outer room nearly half an hour, during which time no person entered the room so occupied by the said Wood and Turner; that at the expiration of the time mentioned, or thereabout, the said Wood came out of the said room, and directly went out of the building, whereupon this deponent returned to his desk as aforesaid; that at the time mentioned this deponent was aware of the appointment of Daniel D. Conover as Street Commissioner; that the said Wood was never before, to this opponent's knowledge, in the office of the Street Commissioner during this deponent's term of service therein, from January, 1856, to that date; that this deponent further says that the appointment of the said Conover was known to other employes in the Street Commissioner's office at the time aforesaid, on the said 13th inst., and the visit of the said Wood was freely commented upon as very unusual and extraordinary by the clerks in the said office; this deponent further saith that at or about two o'clock of the same day, the 13th inst., as aforesaid, the said Daniel D. Conover entered the room above mentioned as occupied by this deponent and the said Turner, passed this deponent's desk to the desk occupied by the said Turner, and exhibited his commission from Governor King; that this deponent examined the said commission, and noted thereon the seal of the State and the signature of John A. King; that the said Conover proclaimed aloud that he had been duly sworn, and filed his official bonds, and did all things necessary to enter upon the discharge of his official duties, and that he demanded of the said Turner all the books, papers, maps and documents pertaining to his said office of Street Commissioner; that the said Turner denied the authority of the Governor to make such appointment, and refused to deliver up the books, &c., so demanded. This deponent further saith that the said Conover remained in the office, in peaceable possession until about four o'clock, the usual hour for closing, when he left. This deponent further saith that on Monday, the 15th instant, the said Conover came into the said Street Commissioner's office, at about nine o'clock A. M., and remained there in peaceable possession until the hour of closing, about four o'clock P. M., when he was forcibly ejected by John W. Bennett and others, in the garb of policemen, who acted under the said Bennett's orders. This deponent further saith: That on Tuesday, the 16th inst., the said Conover again entered the office at about the usual hour of nine o'clock; that he remained there peaceably until about ten or eleven o'clock, when he was violently put out by John W. Bennett and others acting under his direction; that the said Bennett proclaimed that he was acting by the orders of the Mayor; that, after he was ejected, the said Bennett took the said Conover by the hand, and said: "Conover, you must not blame me, for I am only acting by the orders of the Mayor."

JOHN COLVIN.

Sworn June 25, 1857, before me, WM. H. DUSENBERRY, Commissioner of Deeds.

Mr. Colvin, in reply to Mr. Brady, stated that he saw Captain Speight, of the Metropolitan Police, at the Street Commissioner's Office, but did not know if any other Metropolitan policemen were present; there were a great many persons present.

Mr. Merwin R. Brewer was sworn and examined by Mr. Field.—He was a counselor-at-law, and drew up the bond and oath of office for Mr. Conover. [The bonds, which had been sent for from the Comptroller, were produced.] The Comptroller signed the bonds.

By Mr. Field—The bondsmen are both represented to be men of means—one of them, Mr. Augustus Conover, is said to be very rich.

Mr. Field was about to read the affidavit of Mr. James Peckham, when

Mr. Brady interrupted, by saying it was a waste of time. They only went to prove that Mr. Conover made an ineffectual attempt to obtain access to the Mayor.

Mr. Field—We propose to show that the Mayor is mistaken in saying Mr. Conover could have seen him on Saturday.

Mr. Brady—The Mayor was your witness, and you cannot contradict him. We admit that Mr. Conover did all he could do to get the Mayor's approval.

Mr. Field—We want to show that the Mayor's office was accessible to all except Mr. Conover.

City and County of New-York.—James Peckham being sworn, saith that he is a clerk in the office of Street Commissioner; that on the 15th inst., he was in the said office; that Mr. Conover was there in the private office; that about four o'clock Alderman Clancy, Aldermen Wilson and others came to the office and went into the private room; that deponent heard Alderman Clancy say that in the name of the Mayor and Common Council of New-York, he instructed Turner to keep possession of the office until the Mayor and Aldermen directed him otherwise; Mr. Turner nodded assent; that Mr. Conover asserted his right to the office; that on Monday morning Mr. Conover came in and was denied admittance to the private office by officers who said it was in possession of the Sheriff; Mr. Conover then took a desk in the room adjoining; that deponent acted as his clerk during the day in conjunction with Joseph B. Pollock; at four o'clock Mr. Turner requested Mr. Conover to leave; Mr. Conover refused; Mr. Turner gave orders to officers to have the office cleared; he also ordered deponent to leave, and upon deponent's refusal, Mr. Turner directed him to be put out; that deponent stated to the officers that he was a clerk in the office and had a right there, whereupon the said Turner stated that deponent was no longer a clerk, and ordered the officers to put deponent out, which they did; that while deponent was in the hall outside the door he saw the officers put Mr. Conover forcibly out of the office; that on Tuesday evening deponent went to the office with Mr. Conover, who was denied admittance inside the railing by a deputy Sheriff or a person acting as such; Mr. Conover then took a desk in the map clerk's room; that deponent acted by his orders and drew up a document for Mr. Conover, which he signed as Street Commissioner; that while Mr. Conover was performing his duties as Street Commissioner, Captain Bennett stepped forward and said that it was the order of the Mayor that Mr. Conover should leave the office, peaceably if he would, but that if he would not five hundred men would be had to eject him; that the said Bennett then by physical force, put Mr. Conover out of the office into the main hall of the building, and deponent was also forcibly put out. JAMES PECKHAM.

Sworn June 25, 1857, before me,

WM. B. DUSENBERRY, Commissioner of Deeds.

Mr. Peckham was sworn and examined by Mr. Brady.—He did not know a man calling himself Theodore Bergmann; had seen a man who represented that name to be his; he applied in the Street Commissioner's office on Tuesday, the 16th, for a permit to let some sand remain in the street; he (Peckham) directed him to Conover; had never noticed the building where the sand was; it was, he believed, at 169½ Chatham-street; he kept a copy of the permit. [Mr. Brady wished to see it. The witness stated it was in the Street Commissioner's office. Mr. Brady said he would suspend his examination until it was produced. The witness, accompanied by Mr. Develin, went to the office and procured it.]

Witness resumed—He had never known a copy of a permit to be kept in the office before, but that had not been his business; he was copying clerk; he obeyed Mr. Conover's orders, as he recognized him as Street Commissioner; he wrote that permit and delivered messages from Mr. Conover to certain parties, but could not recollect who they were; he did not know who got Capt. Speight to come there, and did not know what Speight did there; Mr. Turner directed the officers on Monday night to put him out of the office; he told Capt. Bennett he was a clerk there; Bennett replied he must go out, but did not say by whose orders he was to be put out.

By Mr. Field—Mr. Conover has now a key of one of the drawers in the map clerk's room; it was the key of his drawer; he (Peckham) and Mr. Pollock afterwards used the latter's drawer in common.

By Mr. Brady—When he opened the drawer a short time before, there was in it the Secretary's book of the Board of Officers of the Second Regiment, and some other books; did not think there were any public papers in the drawer connected with the Street Commissioner's office; he found the permit in the drawer he occupied.

SUPREME COURT.—In the matter of the application of Daniel D. Conover, to compel Charles Develin to deliver to him the books and papers of the Street Department, &c.

City and County of New-York: Merwin W. Jones, of said City, being sworn, saith that on the 13th day of June, instant, he accompanied Daniel D. Conover to the Mayor's office, in the City Hall, in order to procure from the said Mayor the approval of the official card of the said Conover as Street Commissioner; that on their arrival at the said office, the said Conover sent in his name to the Mayor by the messenger at the door of the Mayor's private office; that the messenger shortly returned with the answer that the Mayor was much engaged and could not see Mr. Conover or any one else; that, thereupon, deponent and said Conover waited about half an hour, during which time several persons entered the Mayor's private room, through the door which Mr. Conover's message had been sent, but the deponent and Conover could not procure entrance through the same; that the deponent then went into the passage outside the main door of the Mayor's general office, when he discovered that several persons were going in and coming out of the Mayor's private room, through a private door opening from said passage; said Conover then sent in a second message to said Mayor, saying that he had official business with the Mayor, that he had important papers to submit to him, and when the messenger returned, Mr. Conover asked him if the Mayor intended to admit him, to which the messenger replied that his orders were peremptory, and that he could not admit the said Conover; Mr. Conover then remained some time at the door communicating with the inner office, during which time deponent heard the door in the passage open and shut repeatedly, and saw several persons go in and come out of the Mayor's private room; that said Conover then applied for admission by the door in the passage way, which admission was denied to him, though others were at the same time admitted through the same door; Mr. Conover then said to the doorkeeper I must see the Mayor, and will go in. At that moment Mr. Matsell, late Chief of Police, came out and spoke to one or two persons, seemingly officers, and the guard at the door was then increased by some two or three men. That deponent and said Conover then waited at the said outer door, in the passage, nearly an hour; that deponent and said Conover then returned to the Mayor's general office, where Mr. Ming, the Mayor's clerk, was seated; whereupon Mr. Conover said to him: "Mr. Ming, I have been appointed the Street Commissioner by the Governor of the State; I wish to see the Mayor, to file my oath of office, and submit my official bond for approval. I am denied admittance to him, have been waiting here nearly two hours since I was first refused admittance, and it is evident that he don't intend to see me." He then exhibited his commission to Mr. Ming, and his oath of office, and said, "I will file this oath of office with you." Ming replied, "You can do so; I am the Mayor's Chief Clerk." Mr. Conover thereupon exhibited his official bond, and said, "I wish to submit this to the Mayor for his approval." Ming examined the bond, saying, at the same time, "The Mayor is engaged, and his orders are strict to admit no one." Conover then said: "I shall file this bond with the Comptroller, which you will state to the Mayor." That, thereupon, deponent and said Conover repaired to the Comptroller's office, and there filed the said bond.

And this deponent further saith, that it was evident from the conversation and remarks of the different persons congregated about the door of the Mayor's office, that the nature of his business with the Mayor was understood, and that his exclusion was intentional. MERWIN N. JONES.

Sworn, June 24, 1857, before me,

G. T. HAWE, Commissioner of Deeds.

Mr. Field said he supposed the attendance of Mr Ming could be enforced if necessary, to prove what Mr. Conover did, and asked whether it was necessary.

Mr. Brady said they did not know what had been done. But finally the attendance of Mr. Ming was not required.

Sections of the Corporation ordinances were then read, in relation to the bonds required, and the manner of filing the same; also, the Mayor's appointment of Mr. Develin, and its confirmation by the Aldermen, together with Mr. Develin's oath of office.

Mr. Turner, the late Deputy Street Commissioner, was then sworn as to the genuineness of the papers received, and to the fact that he had received a letter of instruction from the Mayor relative to the appointment of Mr. Develin, who, he said, was in office at the time.

Mr. Turner was asked whether, in the discharge of his duties in the office of the Street Commissioner, from the time when Mr. Taylor was unable to attend in the office, he did not come in contact with the various Executive and Legislative authorities of the City. He answered that he did.

He was asked who gave the requisitions, and answered that he prepared them; they were prepared by him, and sent to the Comptroller. A requisition was shown, which he said had been prepared by him, and recognized by the Comptroller.

He was then asked whether he had received an opinion from the Corporation Counsel, as to who was the rightful claimant to the office of Street Commissioner.

Mr. Field objected; said he would only instance the Comptroller as not recognizing Mr. Develin, and the question was not pressed.

Mr. Field asked the witness whether there had been any other implied recognition by the Comptroller, and he answered there had not been any other that he was aware of.

Mr. Field asked him whether or not he had been in "contact" with any of the Departments on Monday last.

Mr. Turner said he did not know what he meant by contact.

Mr. Field said he meant the same as when the word was used by the other side, and he had answered yes.

Mr. Brady said he did not remember having used the word during the past year.

Mr. Field said it had been used by one of the counsel in that connection—perhaps "in communication" would be better. The witness said he had, with somebody from the Comptroller's office. And on Wednesday and Saturday he had been in communication with others.

Comptroller Flagg was now called.

Mr. Field asked him whether he had recognized Mr. Develin as Street Commissioner?

Mr. Flagg said, I can't say that I have recognized any body of late. [Laughter.]

The requisition, before named, was shown him, and he explained that Mr. Parley, a contractor, came to him for an advance of seven per cent.

Mr. Brady objected to any conversation between him and Parley.

Mr. Field said it was matter of fact.

Mr. Brady said that was why he objected to it. He apprehended that Mr. Flagg, as Comptroller, could not qualify any official act by any mental reservation, nor conversation understood. He was not at liberty to tell what he talked of or thought.

The Court allowed Mr. Flagg to continue.

He said he told Mr. Parley, that with a contract on file, all he should require was a certificate of work done by the surveyor; he would not require any additional evidence. In reply to a question, he answered that he did not consider the requisition essential; he recollected filing Mr. Conover's bonds; he had done so merely to recollect the date, in case he should be called upon; and he had done the same by Mr. Develin.

The testimony was here closed on both sides, and this morning at eleven o'clock, designated as the hour for the commencement of the arguments of counsel.

Opinion of Judge Hoffman—Order of Court.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM—June 25.

Before Hon. Justice Hoffman.

Daniel D. Conover vs. Fernando Wood.—Upon return of an order to show cause why the defendant should be punished as for a contempt. To day His Honor rendered his decision in this case, reading the following opinion:

HOFFMAN, J.—Upon the return of an order to show cause why the defendant should not be punished for resisting the process of the Court, an application is made on the part of the plaintiff for a reference to ascertain the facts by examining the parties and taking testimony. The order to show cause was made under the 1st article of title II, chap. III of the Revised Statutes, (p. 276,) and under the 4th subdivision of the 10th section. The Coroner had certified to the Court the names of the resisters, their aiders and abettors, to the end that they might be proceeded against for their contempt pursuant to section 1st (100) of 2 R. S., 441. A distinction is made between proceedings in such a case and those under the title proceedings or for contempts to enforce civil remedies, (2 R S, 528.) The 14th section of the Statute first referred to (2 R. S, 278) provides that nothing in the preceding sections shall be construed to extend to any proceeding against parties or officers, as for a contempt for the purpose of enforcing any civil right or remedy, and in proceedings under the latter act it is essential to the infliction of punishment that the Court shall adjudge the act to have impaired, defeated or prejudiced the rights or remedies of a party. This distinction is referred to by Mr. Justice Bosworth in the case of the People vs. Compton, (2 Duer, 578,) and the case of Ammis vs Dancer, 2 Brod. and Bing., 24, is an example of it. A sheriff's officer serves the defendant with a copy of a capias, showed him the original and explained the object. The defendant collared him and ordered him to quit his presence. On moving for an attachment for a contempt of the process, the counsel was desired to obtain an affidavit, pointing out more fully in what respect and to what degree the act of violence obstructed the due execution of the process of the Court. On another day, nothing being added, the Court said, "they would lay down no rule whether every collaring and shaking an officer would or would not be deemed a contempt of the Court; but it sufficed to say, that no case was here made which disclosed any such obstruction of their process as to require this summary mode of punishment." The 12th section of the statute (2 R. S. 277) directs that in cases where the contempt is not committed in the presence of the Court, the party charged shall be notified of the accusation, and have a reasonable time to make his defence. This was given by the order to show cause. The counsel for the defendant insists that the case is not within the provision of the statute; that the order of process must be served before the case of resistance can arise. I think not. In my opinion, when a party knows of the existence of an order in the hands of an officer to be served upon him, and wilfully prevents that service by open force made or directed, the resistance is as fully within the statute as if he had received and contemned it. In the Commonwealth vs. Feely, (2 Virg. cases 1,) Feely was punished as for a contempt, for using means to prevent one Wright from attending as a witness to prove a deed executed by him, Feely, after a subpœna had been served upon Wright. And the Practical Register defines a contempt to be "a disobedience to the Court, or an opposing or despising the authority, justice and dignity thereof. Sometimes it arises from one or more opposing and disturbing the execution or service of the process of the Court, or using force to the party that serves it." (Pract. Reg. 99, 100.) See also Gilbert's History of the Common Pleas, 20, 21, for an account of the origin of the power, and the reasons why a trial by jury in such cases is not a right. The affidavits on the part of the defendant have made out a case exonerating him from either the act of resistance or the intention to resist. His own oath is corroborated by that of Butcher, that no communication of the fact that the Coroner had process to serve upon him, was made to him. The inquiry, and the only pertinent inquiry is, whether the defendant knew of the Coroner having an order to serve upon him, or whether there are facts enough disposed to, to make him chargeable with such knowled

A Steeple Chase in France, a PAnglais—Persecution of the Grand Duke Constantine in Paris—Feruck Khan on the United States—The Treaty Between England and Persia—Opinions of a Russian Admiral on the United States Frigate Niagara—The King of Bavaria in Paris, &c., &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PARIS, Thursday, June 4, 1857.

La Marche, on Wednesday last, offered a singular interest to the amateurs of the turf. On that occasion the French Jockey Club offered the English Jockey Club their hospitality and their competition in a Military Steeple Chase, which was only to be ridden by gentlemen, still more, by gentlemen of the army. The jockeys laid off their cape and breeches for that day, and appeared on the ground as simple spectators. Like those coachmen who sit on the box with folded arms while their masters drive, the jockeys gave themselves the satisfaction of watching, in turn, the gentlemen disputing the palm, rolling in the dust, or taking a leap in the ditch. Eleven officers, French and English, had inscribed their names for this Military Steeple Chase. On the French side, the Viscount LAURISTON, of the Imperial Guard, the Marquis de GALLIFFET, of the Guides, the Viscount TALON, of the Hussars, and the Duke de GRAMMONT. The English side was represented by Captain GEORGE and Lieutenants WILKINS and BLUNDELL. All the gentlemen inscribed did not appear in the contest.

The great excitement of this kind of race, it must be admitted, is the accidents that are almost sure to arrive as well to man as to horse. On this occasion the interest was redoubled by the names of the riders, for they were names that are read in history The crowd was consequently great, especially in fine toilettes. But no one was killed; there was not even a broken arm. It is a deplorable confession assuredly, but it is a fact. The jockeys—the real jockeys—were disgusted. There were numerous falls, into the water and over the fences, but no serious accident. The number of obstacles to leap were 27, among which were a high stone fence, called an Irish wall, and a ditch 16 feet wide and four feet deep. The distance to run was 6,000 metres—three miles and two-thirds. The Viscount LAURISTON took the lead for the greater part of the race, but Captain GEORGE, mounted on the English horse Cigarette, was only holding back for the last mile. Horse and rider fell at the Irish wall, where the Captain had taken the precaution to station two of his servants in case of accident. But he was soon in his saddle again, and, catching the Viscount, passed him at a sweeping gait, and, leaning the remaining obstacles with much more grace than he had done the preceding, won easily.

The steeple chase is fairly naturalized in France. It is adopted the more readily that it is an English institution. Not the least curious feature of these races, on this side of the channel, is to hear the young Frenchmen trying to look and talk English, and to see the ladies not eating, but devouring, as they say, à l'anglaise, cold wings of chicken, or slices of galantine and cake. The last imitation is the better of the two.

One of the most singular features of the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE'S residence in Paris, was the multiplicity of attempts made to obtain money or position through his influence. During his residence here it is said that he received more than a hundred letters daily. The most of these were in prose, but there were poetry as well. The Duke was obliged to organize from his suite, a special service for the examination of these documents. Happily for him, it was found that the greater proportion of them were not letters to which he was obliged to give any attention. The Duke was anxious to know the contents of this voluminous correspondence, and had it classed and marked with care. But the classification was not easy, since there were every form and quality of paper, as well as every style of penmanship. Sometimes was a petitioner, who pleaded his cause with the Grand Duke to obtain from the Emperor NAPOLEON money, a place, or other favor, or else to be released from prison or have his relative or friend released; another demanded a Russian decoration, and it is related of one of this class of petitioners, that, not to occupy too much of the time of his Imperial Highness, and to save him the embarrassment of choosing, he designated himself the Order with which he would prefer to decorate his button hole; another letter demanded the favor of a loan of money for a period more or less long. There were girls who demanded dots—marriage portions, and other girls of another category, who demanded interviews with his Highness, without the ceremony of an introduction. After these came books, odes, sonnets, ballads, and acrostics, all their authors in the hope of discovering, some morning, on their table, a mine of Muscovite diamonds. The letters written simply for autographs formed a large proportion of this epistolary persecution. But among the rest there were some that excited the liveliest sympathy on the part of the Prince. Some of these spoke simply of the gratitude which their authors cherished towards Russia or the Imperial family, for a reception or a favor rendered, perhaps, a long time ago—many for favors and kindnesses to prisoners during the war. Others, again, were from political proscripts, who demanded the intervention of His Highness in obtaining their pardon and the right to return to Russia. To all of these the Grand Duke promised his immediate attention, on his return to St. Petersburg.

The Grand Duke left 5,000 francs for the poor of Paris. He contributed a sum of 8,000 francs to the building of a Greek Church at Paris. He also left a sum with the Russian Archipretre, VASSILIEFF, for the relief of necessitous countrymen.

Divine, if you can, what the word "Yenghadonia" means. I was honored, on Saturday last, through the kindness of a distinguished gentleman, with a presentation to the great Oriental statesman, FERUCK KHAN. The Persian Embassy is situated on the Avenue Montaigne, and occupies the elegant hotel built by M. VISCONTI, the late Architect of the Louvre, for himself.

As we drove into the court we encountered a certain number of domestics and attachés of the Embassy, dressed in their national costume, lounging about the door and in the vestibule of the stairway. These, with one or two exceptions, hastened to precede us up stairs, and we found them formed in two lines, as an escort of honor, in the ante chamber leading to the saloon of reception. They bowed low as we passed, and their high pointed Astracan caps met and dove-tailed behind us in such a way as to form an arch of a new kind. In the saloon there was a centre table, and four fauteuils of Persian fabric, beautifully worked and costly articles, but the rest of the furniture of this and of a suite of rooms that opened beyond, was French. A life-size half bust of the Emperor in plaster occupied a conspicuous place in the saloon.

We were received by one of the Secretaries of the Embassy, a fine looking young man, who had been educated in France, and spoke French fluently. We were soon joined by MIRZA MALCOLM, the first Secretary, who was also educated in France, and who speaks a little English when necessity compels a resort to that language. His Excellency, who had gone to pay Lord COWLEY a visit, previous to the departure of the latter for London, was expected every moment, and in effect soon arrived. The attachés and domestics again formed in a double line at the door and bowed low as his Excellency entered.

FERUCK KHAN is a tall, slender man, about forty-five years of age. He wears a dense and very black beard, cut short; his skin, like that of all attached to the Embassy, is bronzed, his eyes black and penetrating. His face is expressive, full of dignity and kindness. He wore a long gown of dark nankeen colored stuff, richly embroidered. On his head was the inevitable tall cap, which he, as well as attachés and domestics, wear everywhere and on all occasions, in the house as well as out, before the Emperor as well as at dinner, and which seems glued rather than stuck on the head.

FERUCK KHAN is versed in the Oriental languages and Oriental literature, but he does not speak the languages of the West. The interview was carried on through two interpreters—the first Secretary for Persian, and myself for English—the French forming the connecting link between the two interpreters After the settlement of the business which had been the occasion of the visit, the conversation became general. In its course we heard his Excellency while speaking of America, pronounce several times a word which sounded so nearly like "Yankee Doodle" that I was prompted to ask the Secretary what was the definition of the word, and its orthography. We were astonished to find that it was the word "New World," the word almost exclusively used in Persia to designate the American Continent, and was spelt thus: Yenghedonia. The pronunciation of this word in his Excellency's mouth was much nearer Yankee Doodle than it appears on paper. I asked what the Americans were called in Persia? He replied: Yenghes! We were more astonished than ever, and demanded the origin of these words. They did not know; they were classical words in the Persian tongue. I demanded what was their word for English? He replied, Inglis. My friend replied that those were Indian words. But how did they find their way into the Persian tongue?

FERUCK KHAN desired to know what the American Congress—the Congress of Yenghedonia—had done in regard to the creation of a Persian Mission. When he was told that at the end of the session the bill had been laid over for want of time, he expressed great regret, and said that his Government and people, especially the mercantile class, were growing very impatient for the arrival of the long-looked for American Legation. He said that they were going to buy our cotton, our guns and our industrial inventions, and he did not seem to understand why, in so important and urgent a matter, the President could not act without the Congress. He had learned with pleasure the immense progress of Yenghedonia, and he was sure it would be to the benefit of his own country, at least, to contract diplomatic and commercial relations with her.

FERUCK KHAN received that day the official news of the signing of the treaty he had concluded with Lord COWLEY, by the Shah, at Bagdad. He was, in consequence, in a special good humor. I understood him to say that it would be ratified at Constantinople, contrary to what is asserted in the journals. He denied that the assertions of the Russian journal Le Nord, to the effect that the Shah had refused to sign till certain modifications, limiting the number of Consuls, were made, ever had any foundation in truth. The treaty allows England "as many Consuls as the most favored nation." Russia is the most favored nation, and is allowed a considerable number of Consuls. But Russia is friendly to Persia, and if Persia will ask her to reduce and fix the number of Consuls at a low figure, the English treaty falls, by necessity, to the standard of the most favored nation.

The Euphrates Railroad has been abandoned temporarily. A railroad from the Caspian Sea to the Persian Gulf, a road of two hundred miles in length, is much needed by Russia, to bring her in communication with the Indian Seas. This road lies through a level country, and can be constructed at a small cost. Persia is unable to construct it herself, but she is ready, the Ambassador says, to give the contract to any foreign company that will. An American company could obtain it on the most favorable terms, since in that case there would be no political points to avoid. It would be a pure financial speculation so far as the builders were concerned.

FERUCK KHAN is concluding commercial treaties with all the maritime powers. The last one signed was that with Sardinia. At the same time he is visiting the manufactories and industrial museums, and is thus collecting materials to aid in the movement towards progress and civilization which he says has commenced in his country. He was told that the Persian Government ought to send some of its competent men to the United States, to study there the great movement in material progress. He said that the moment that the two Governments had established reciprocal legations, this would be done, and indicated his principal secretary, MALCOLM, as the person who would undoubtedly be charged with the mission.

It is somewhat singular that France instead of England or the United States should have been chosen by the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE in which to study maritime progress. But whatever may be said of the intelligence of Russian officers, they are enormously in arrears on the question of maritime improvement, and may therefore derive great advantage even from a visit to French dock yards. I am told that one of the Admirals of the suite of the Grand Duke contended in argument with the American Minister, that the Duke of Wellington was a superior vessel to the new Niagara, that is to say, that she would prove superior in a single-handed conflict. He could not conceive the possibility of inventing more effective guns than those of the Wellington, and since her battery more than doubles that of the Niagara in point of number, he therefore argued that the superiority laid on her side. What hope can there be for a navy in which such "fogyism" prevails among its admirals?

Gen. TONLEBEN, whose studies differ from those of the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE, has left his suite, and is now at Cherbourg, examining the fortifications of the place.

The King of Bavaria, in turn, is visiting the various objects of curiosity in Paris, or, as the English say, is "doing the town." I met him yesterday afoot, going from the Tuileries to the Louvre; but I should never have suspected I was in a Kingly proximity, if he had not been accompanied by the Chamberlain of the Palace, whom I knew had been attached as guide to his Majesty's person. At the Opera last night, however, he was in regimentals, and looked better. NAPOLEON and the citizens treated his Majesty to an illumination on the Boulevard. The whole Court turned out in costume, the Cent-Gardes were in grand tenu, the Opera House dressed for a fête, and it was tolerably evident that LOUIS of BAVARIA was dazzled. LOUIS NAPOLEON has all the appliances for a display at hand, and when he undertakes to employ them he does not often fail. The Monarchs and off-shoots of Monarchs who come to Paris, must go home considerably humbled in their ideas of their own grandeur and magnificence.

The Prince NAPOLEON'S great success at Berlin has given immense satisfaction here to the Bonaparte family. This success is attributed mainly to his resemblance to his uncle, and in the present case that is exactly where the compliment lies.

MODERN CHIVALRY OF VIRGINIA.

Grand Virginia Tournament at Rocky Ford, by the Knights of Fauquier and Loudon Counties—Splendid Rural Feast and Entertainment—The Hurdle Races—The Tournament Grounds—The Coronation of the Queen of Love and Beauty, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

ROCKY CLIFF, Fauquier County, Va., Monday, June 22, 1857.

A grand Tournament and splendid rural entertainment came off last Friday in Loudon County, at Rocky Ford. It was given by the Chivalry of Upper Fauquier and Loudon to the fair and beauteous women of those counties. It is 967 years ago since tournaments first became the fashion, and many a crusador from the Holy Wars, who had won the spurs of Knighthood for his gallantry, could he have returned and been present, would have found it no easy task to have competed with our Virginia Knights. The ground selected for the tournament was one of the most charming and exquisite landscapes that the eye ever rested on. It was on a beautiful plain, skirted with forest trees, and bordered on one side by a pretty winding stream. Sloping hill sides, cultivated in rich, green fields of wheat, hemmed in the plain, with smiling valleys between. In the westward distance arose the mountains of the Blue Ridge, and to the southward lie the round tops of the Coblers. Broad seats were placed between the trees at admirable distances for lovers, and for flirtations. A marquee, or large tent, was raised near the stream, for a ladies' dressing room. Carriages, phætons, barouches, buggies, and horsemen were to be seen in every direction on the field.

The sports first commenced with a hurdle race. Four piles of brushwood about four feet high, and placed some fifty yards apart, composed the hurdles. The distance was six hundred yards, best three in five. Six horses entered, which, with their riders, presented a goodly array. At the sound of the bugle they got well off together; the horses leaped the hurdles beautifully, and the chevaliers showed great skill in riding. One or two horses bolted at the hurdles, however, and lost the race. After the third heat one of the most successful riders, Mr. UALL, fell from his horse, and the race was awarded to Mr. GREENE. The band of music from the stand now struck up some melting strains which echoed over the plain. I have rarely witnessed a more exciting race, or more graceful horsemanship.

The repast was now announced. A long table filled with the most delicate viands and the good things of this life were spread before us, and which were topped off with strawberries and cream, ice-cream, lemonade and native wines. A flow of soul and sentiment mingled with the feast, and many a toast was drunk to the chivalrous and the fair.

Preparations were now made for the tournament Col. JNO. M. HARRISON, of Loudon, acted as Grand Marshal; J. W. ARMSTRONG, Esq., as Deputy Grand Marshal; and Dr. ELLASON, and Messrs. JNO. SCOTT and BRUCE GIBSON, of Fauquier, as Heralds. A bugle-blast from the Heralds proclaimed the lists to be open, and for all gallant Knights, who desired to break a lance in honor of their fair ladyes, to come forth. Armed with spears, and wearing the scarf or badge of their ladye-loves, the Knights appeared on prancing steeds, and were announced by the Heralds, with blasts of the bugle, as follows: Knight of Loudon, EDWARD GRANT; Knight of Markham, J. W. GREENE; Knight of Llodon, M. TALIAFERRO; Knight of Warren, H. FITZHUE CARTER; Knight of Baltimore, JOS. COLVERT; Knight of Ravenswood, T. M. TUCKER; Knight of Blue Ridge, EDWARD SMITH; Knight of Newstead, ALEX. GRAYSON; Knight of "Number Six," AUGUSTUS CARTER.

At the distance of about seventy-five yards were placed two stanchions, some ten feet apart, and a ring was suspended from the top, in the centre. The feat consisted of riding the horse at full speed through the stanchions, and taking off the ring on the point of the spear.

The Knights were now separately summoned at the sound of the bugle, and those who proved successful received the cheers of the spectators, and the plaudits of waving handkerchiefs at the hands of the fair, while the band struck up its liveliest airs. Those who failed received the laughs and jeers of the crowd, who were ever ready to amuse themselves at the expense of the vanquished.

The victory consisted in taking the ring off three times in succession. The contest now lies between the Knight of Markham, decidedly the best and most graceful rider in the lists, the Knight of Lindon, and the Knight of "Number Six," they having taken the ring three times respectively. After a hard struggle it was decided in favor of the Knight of Markham, who won the privilege of crowning the Queen of Love and Beauty, and the other two Knights to choose the Maids of Honor.

The Heralds proclaimed the victors and announced the coronation, when the music struck up, and carriages and horsemen were seen driving and dashing towards the throne of the cloth of gold. The Knight of Markham then approached, and having knelt before the beautiful Miss JENNIE HARRISON, addressed her in a most loyal and gallant speech, and with a wreath of flowers crowned her "Queen of Love and Beauty." Then came forth the Knight of Lindon, and bowing before the captivating and lovely Miss SUE GRAYSON, crowned her First Maid of Honor. Again came the Knight of "Number Six," and bending his knee to the bewitching and fascinating Miss SOPHIE CARTER, crowned her Second Maid of Honor. The Queen and her Maids of Honor then ascended the throne and received the homage of the gay cavaliers, as well as the congratulations of the fair sex. This ceremony over, the tournament broke up, leaving to linger on the mind for future days one of the most pleasant and delightful reminiscences of life.

I cannot close this hurried description of a scene which deserves an abler pen than mine, without mentioning, for the sake of my bachelor friends, that among the fairest and loveliest portion of Fauquier present, were Miss Mianie Harper and her sister Miss Sallie Harper, Miss Roberta Taliaferro and her sister Miss Cecile, Miss Sallie Powell, Miss Lucy Gray, Miss Betty Stephenson and her sister Miss Mittie, Miss Betty Armistead, Miss Mary Gibson, Miss Fanny Carter, Miss Luckett, Miss Colvert Miss Eliason, Miss Lemoine, Miss Judith A Gibson, Miss Mary Hereford and Miss Lucy Gibson. Among the matrons were the accomplished and intellectual Mrs. John Scott, Mrs. Dulaney, Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. Colvert and Mrs. James Hill.

I must not forget to mention that Mr. JOHN SCOTT rode a mule in playful derision of the gallant Knights, and whose freaks and antics created great merriment and frequent shouts of laughter.

An exquisite sunset closed the scene, and thus ended as joyous a day of sport and pleasure as ever was succeeded by a starlight night in "old Virginny."

Distribution of Government Patronage—Ratio of North and South.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, June 23, 1857.

I sent you a few weeks ago a statement from the Treasury, showing the distribution of the Government treasure on deposit in the different States. I am now able to lay before your readers some of the most important, curious and interesting statistical information that has yet been published. It will prove invaluable to politicians.

The first is a table showing the amount of Government patronage distributed to citizens of the several States, as Foreign Ministers, Assistant Treasurers, Custom-House Officers, Weighers and Measurers, Surveyors of Public Lands, Indian Agents, Public Buildings, National Observatory, Naval Academy, Coast Survey, Commissioners of California Claims, Governors of Territories, Superintendents Public Buildings, Auditors, Clerks at Washington, &c., amounting to $5,367,530.

This sum, distributed to the several States, and the District of Columbia, according to Federal representation in the House of Representatives, allowing to the District one Representative, will give to each Representative of the States a control of patronage equal to the ratio of $22,793! This gives at a glance the amount of power and influence of each Representative, estimated in round dollars. The disbursements made to the Judiciary, the Postmasters of the country, and the Army and Navy proper, have all been omitted in the following table. But it contains all appropriations made by Congress, and direct attention is paid to the distribution of patronage by the Executive Departments. This statement also shows the excess over, and deficiency due to each State, according to its representation, which may not prove uninteresting at this time to office-seekers. Ohio, it will be perceived, has the largest deficit, but then, it must be remembered, it did not vote for Mr. BUCHANAN:

TABLE SHOWING THE AMOUNT DUE AND ACTUALLY RECEIVED BY THE UNITED STATES SEPARATELY, WITH THE EXCESS AND DEFICIT OF EACH:

It has been rumored since Gen. WALKER'S arrival in the United States, that Major BEN. MCCULLOCH was going to join his standard. The reasons given by the Major to the President for declining the Utah Governorship, that he is about to take unto himself a wife, is sufficient to contradict this filibustering intention.

Commerce of the Belize.

The pacification of Central America, and the probability of a revival of the old Confederation, give additional interest to everything relating to the commerce and resources of that interesting part of the world.

Sir H. BARKLY'S report to the British Government shows that the commercial position of that settlement is steadily improving, there being a slight increase in the value both of imports and exports, the latter having now reached something like a half million sterling, whilst the former fall little short of half that amount. Mr. STEVENSON, the superintendent, states, however, that the statistics of the export trade must not be regarded as an indication of the productive resources of the country, as many items of merchandise—as, for instance, cigars, cochineal, indigo, sarsaparilla, and others of less importance—merely pass through the settlement for shipment elsewhere, and ought to be entered as transit goods. The export trade would be greatly benefited by the introduction of an arrangement for warehousing goods in bond Mr. STEVENSON strongly recommends such a system, and states his conviction that, whatever the effect on the revenue for the first year or two, the counterbalancing advantages in other respects would greatly improve the commercial position of the country, and, at the same time, in all probability, prove a permanent assistance, rather than a detriment, to the revenue. The shipping statistics show that four-fifths of the foreign vessels, and more than a third of the whole number of ships, frequenting the ports of Belize, were under the flag of the United States. The most interesting portion of Mr. STEVENSON'S report, to which Sir H. BARKLY'S dispatch is merely the introduction, is that which relates to the progress made of late years in developing the produce resources of the country, hitherto limited almost entirely to mahogany and logwood. For a long while no other description of agriculture was attempted than such as was necessary for the partial support of the laborers engaged in wood-cutting, and the most primitive processes even of manufacturing industry were not thought of. It was considered by those well acquainted with the country that there were many spots favorable to the cultivation of the sugar-cane, and several attempts were made, some on a large scale, but the results did not afford sufficient remuneration to induce the planters to repeat the experiment. Within the last few years, however, the cultivation of the cane has been attempted by the recent Spanish and Indian settlers in the northern district, who, though their processes are somewhat rude, have succeeded in establishing several small, but what Mr. STEVENSON considers "rather profitable" plantations near Corozal, and along the banks of the rivers in that part of the settlement. The spots suitable for this product are not of large extent, and this may be one reason why the cultivation of the cane on a large scale was not found remunerative and did not hold out sufficient inducement to planters with capital to continue planting. The tables show, however, that, with a comparatively restricted field for cultivation, and the absence of anything like scientific methods of cultivation and manufacture, there has been of late years a gradually increasing pressure on the revenue derived from sugar and rum, the aggregate produce being very considerable, though sent into Belize in small quantities. In consequence of sugar cultivation being in its infancy, and to a certain extent experimental, no duty has yet been imposed on these articles, the Legislature considering it important to encourage that description of immigration and cultivation, and Mr. STEVENSON states that the mahogany and logwood cutters have been benefited by the new industry as well as those engaged in it.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 23, 1857.

Since my last communication I have visited the valleys of the Little and Great Miami rivers in Ohio, and the country between Cincinnati and this place. From my own observation, and from what I can gather from farmers, I am safe in saying that the prospects for a very large yield of wheat in the sections named were never better at this season of the year. Early in the Spring the fields were quite unpromising, and the reports of extensive Winter killing were not wholly unfounded; but the weather has been remarkably propitious for such fields. I have to-day conversed with several farmers, who say they will have from 15 to 25 bushels of wheat per acre on ground which looked so poor in March that they would have plowed them up had there not been too much wet weather to allow them to do so. The corn in the two Miami valleys, though late, looks very fine. Hereabouts this crop is quite as backward as in Ohio, and it is now suffering badly for want of hoeing. I also notice that some of the wheat fields to the north of this place show a thinner "stand" than usual, but this is not the general condition. Considerable hemp is grown in this section, and it now promises well.

This is a great stock county, and large number of cattle are now being collected for Northern and Eastern markets. From the freight-books of the Covington & Lexington Railroad, I learned that, 912 cattle and 3,195 hogs were shipped over that road, last week, the cattle being chiefly forwarded to the East. Most of the beef consumed in Cincinnati is driven in from Northern Kentucky. The number was still larger the preceding week. To-day I counted 18 car-loads of cattle going northward. They say, here, that New-Yorkers need have no forebodings of a scarcity of beef, for some time yet; for, at present prices, Kentucky can send forward a few thousands, to say the least.

In the Great Miami Valley, from Cincinnati to Dayton, a distance of 60 miles, I noticed that the fruit-trees are much injured by the measuring worms, which are less easily subdued than the caterpillars, as the former do not collect in nests or clusters, like the latter. The only way to destroy them will be, to go over the orchards, in Winter or early Spring, before the leaves are in the way, and destroy the webs.

Great preparations are being made at this place for the ceremonies of laying the corner-stone of the Henry Clay Monument on the 4th of July. The occasion will doubtless be one of great interest. I visited the site of the monument this afternoon, in the Cemetery or "City of the Dead," which is just on the western border of Lexington, one mile from the Court-House. A solid foundation of mason work, 40 feet square, is already laid even with the surface of the ground. The statesman's remains repose a few rods distant in a plain grave, with no stone or pillar to mark the spot. They are to be removed to a vault under the monument, when erected. "Ashland," his late residence, is one and a half miles East of the Court-House.

Prevention of Railroad Accidents.

THURSDAY, June 25, 1857.

Accidents on our City Railroads are almost of daily occurrence, and yet by a simple alteration in the construction of the cars they might be entirely prevented. The remedy is so apparent that it is very strange it has not been adopted by the Railroads for their pecuniary interest as well as for the cause of humanity. By having the casing extend nearly down, and entirely around the wheels—brought to a point front and rear—it would not only prevent the dust from rising, but render it utterly impossible for even the body of a child to be carried under the wheels. The expense would not be over $25 per car, and our Railroads should be compelled to provide as far as practicable against the numerous accidents.

HUMANITY.

A WIDOW MURDERED IN ST. LAWRENCE COUNTY BY A SCHOOL TEACHER.—The Ogdensburg papers give particulars of a murder in Louisville, St. Lawrence County, for which the accused was examined on Saturday last. EDWIN ELDRIDGE, of Louisville, was arraigned, charged with the murder of Mrs. GOULD, a widow. The evidence showed that ELDRIDGE resided at Lonisville in December last, and taught school during the Winter. After his school closed in March last he went to Mr. BRITTON'S, where the deceased resided, to board, and was on intimate terms with her, and informed the family that they were shortly to be married. About the middle of May last arsenic was seen in a valise of ELDRIDGE'S. On the 25th Mrs. GOULD was taken sick, and her symptoms were such as usually follow cases of poisoning. She died on the 30th. A post mortem examination revealed the fact that she was enciente. On being charged with having committed the offence he attempted to poison himself, but took so much that it operated as an emetic, and did not destroy life. The Court held him for trial, and he is now safely lodged in jail.

THE INDIAN MURDERS.—We have already given an account of the attack, by a band of one hundred Cheyenne Indians, on a company of emigrants on their way to California—the killing of four men, and the wounding of two men and one woman. We now learn that the party consisted of C. B. WEAVER and wife, A. P. WEAVER, R. WEAVER, M. LEWIS, SAMUEL SMITH, E. GARRISON, J. SMITH, WM. SMITH and J. HURSTEN, from Carrol County, Ark., and Berry County, Mo. Two rounds were fired, and then the Indians robbed the waggons; and, meanwhile, two of the men escaped to the Younkin settlement, where a company of twelve men was raised, with provisions and arms, and immediately proceeded to the relief of the defeated party.

THE PEABODY INSTITUTE.—The Trustees of the Peabody Institute offer three premiums, one of $500 for the plan of the building and estimates which shall obtain a preference over all, one of $300 for the plan and estimates next in order of preference, and one of $200 for the third best plan. The Trustees reserve the right to make use of the plans and estimates to which the premiume are awarded, and also to employ or not the authors of them to superintend the construction of the building. The building of the noble institution is in the hands of an able Committee, composed of some of the first business men of our city, and will without doubt be pushed forward with as much speed as the nature of the undertaking will allow.—Baltimore Patriot.

FIVE MEN HUNG.

From the St. Louis Democrat, Saturday, 20th June.

JOHN LA POINTE, ISRAEL SHOULTZ and JACOB NUSELEIN, were executed yesterday afternoon in the yard of the St. Louis County jail. The platform of the scaffold was about twelve feet square, and twenty-five feet from the ground, the cross being about eight feet above it, and the extent of the drop five feet. A strong flight of some thirty steps led to the platform. Upon the latter was a bench for clergymen and officers, and fronting it three chairs for the condemned men. Behind the chairs was the trap-scuttle of some three and a half feet in width, to fall downward upon hinges. The most painful portion of the scene was the presence of LA POINTE'S mother, who alternately knelt upon the stones and prayed and paced the yard distractedly. She was at length induced to retire into the jailor's apartment.

The press had properly been, at the prisoners' request, excluded from their cells, but we learned that they had passed the night waking, except SHOULTZ, who had slept a little; and further, that they remained in a firm, cheerful and resigned state of mind. At about 1½ o'clock the last meal was carried up to them, of which each partook but sparingly. Shortly after 2 o'clock the gate of the jail opened and the fearful procession appeared, in charge of Marshal SMITH and his deputies, JOHN LA POINTE, accompanied by his priest, came first. His once robust form and ruddy face were now weak and pallid. He tottered mechanically onward with his eyes dim and half closed, and lips moving as if in prayer. After a glimpse of the scaffold, his head dropped and he toiled up the fatal steps with evident difficulty. ISRAEL SHOULTZ, supported by Father PARIS, of the Cathedral, followed. His white face shone with resolution, his lips were strongly compressed, his eye was dauntless and his step quick and nervous. He bore his part with an air of marked heroism, which would have honored a martyr. Between his carriage and that of JACOB NUSELEIN, who, with his priest, and followed by the officers of the law, closed the brief but awful procession—the contract was painful. NUSELEIN looked anxiously about among the spectators, and with a singular mixture of imploring grief and social pleasure, stopped to shake hands with those whom he could recognize. Several weeks ago we saw him buoyed with hope, and felt it charitable to advise him to be less sanguine. He remembered us, and we cannot forget the earnest grasp of his cold hand, his wild but grateful look and his tremulous tones.

On the scaffold the religious exercises were deliberate and prolonged. We were too distant distinctly to hear them. Each of the felons had a crucifix—NUSELEIN continually clutched and kissed, gazed upon, and prayed to his—convulsively. After prayer, SHOULTZ rose, mounted his chair, and briefly addressed the spectators. He was collected and his step was firm. He said:

"MY FELLOW-CITIZENS—I have now come upon the scaffold this day to die. I am a cripple. At nine months old I was crippled, and have been a cripple since, and to-day I come here to die. I trust to die a Christian. I believe that I am a Christian. If one was ever a Christian I believe that I am. I hope to die in the grace of God. Fellow-citizens, farewell."

NUSELEIN then rose and delivered himself rather incoherently, substantially thus:

GENTLEMEN: I have now get to die. I never had a thought to murder any person. But I have got to die, and I know God will take care of me. Gentlemen, I am a Christian. All that I did to the person (his wife) I thought was my duty. But I forgive all I thank you all who have been kind to me. I may look like a murderer to some of you, but God in Heaven knows my heart, and that is enough for me. For you who think I did wrong, I pray that you may all do better. Gentlemen, good-bye.

NUSELEIN speaks English quite imperfectly, and was much agitated in speaking. At one time it appeared that he would have to desist, but he recovered and concluded.

LA POINTE declined to speak from the scaffold. But Father PARIS assured us that he at length, on the night preceding, acknowledged that he was satisfied with the justice of his fate; said that he had brought it upon himself by dissipation, but when in liquor he was wild and knew not what he was about, and that he felt that God had brought him to this end as the only means of his reformation.

The verdict and sentence of the Criminal Court, and the warrant for his execution, were next read by the Marshal to LA POINTE; the decision of the Supreme Court, and the fatal warrant to SCHULTZ, and the same to NUSELEIN. During the reading to him, NUSELEIN, for a time, looked the Marshal full and clearly in the eye, but at length betook himself to a half-distracted kissing and embracing of the crucifix. The reading, with further religious exercises, occupied till nearly 3 P. M., when the priests took a painful farewell with kisses and tears of those unhappy men, in whose welfare they evinced so laborious a solicitude.

The prisoners rose, the chairs were taken away, and they turned to look upon the machinery of death. They were then successively led over the trap and placed upon an elevation, each with the noose before and just below him. The long white cap was then drawn over their heads and faces, to the neck, beginning with LA POINTE. NUSELEIN'S trepidation vented itself in a rapid series of invocations to "Jesus, Mary and Joseph!" The prop was now removed from beneath, almost simultaneously the drop fell, a half shriek was cut short in the air, and three mortals were passing out of life. SHOULTZ died tranquilly and soon. NUSELEIN was shortly relieved; LA POINTE swayed and clutched fearfully for some moments. After hanging for half an hour, the bodies were successively lowered into coffins, pronounced lifeless by three attending physicians, and given in charge to the friends of the deceased. The caps were not removed by the officers. The

Before Judge Betts.

The United States vs. Louis Schuster.—The defendant in this case was indicted for passing counterfeit half dollars. An innkeeper in Newburg testified that the defendant asked him to give him bills for change, and that he gave him $5 in change, out of which two or three pieces were bad. A keeper of a saloon in the place also testified to his passing a bad half dollar in payment for some beer; and another man to his passing a similar one for some oysters. When arrested there were found upon the defendant several counterfeit half and quarter dollars. It was proved also that after his arrest he slipped a $5 bill into the policeman's pocket.

The defendant on the contrary proved by a grocery keeper, that having taken some counterfeit money he kept it separate in his drawer, and his boy, unknown to him, changed a bill for the defendant, and the counterfeit coin was then gone from the drawer.

An innkeeper testified to a stranger coming to his place, and on his introduction, employing the defendant to carry him to Ellenville. It was also proved that on the way over they stopped to get a drink, that Shuster offered a bill in payment for it which the barkeeper could not change, and the stranger then changed the bill for him, giving half dollars for it. Another witness testified that he told Shuster he ought to give the policeman something for his politeness when he was arrested, and that Shuster afterwards told him he had done so. The defendant also proved good character by residents of Ellenville, where he himself lived.

The Jury could not agree and were discharged.

CLAIM FOR COMMISSIONS ON SALE OF PANAMA HATS.

John Prentice vs. Juan F. Valenzuela.—This was an action upon an assigned claim for commissions. It was tried without a jury.

The defendant, from New Granada, Central America, arrived in New-York in February last, with a consignment of Panama hats, 2,000 dozens, of varieties suitable for the wholesale trade. The complaint alleged that after his arrival here he personally made an arrangement, or contract, with Mr. Bryan, doing a commission business, the assignor of the plaintiff, to make sale of the hats at a commission of five per cent. That B. procured a customer for and effected a sale of 349 dozens to Leland & Co., of this City, upon which commissions were unpaid. This action was commenced by attachment.

It appeared in evidence on the trial, that the arrangement between B. and the defendant was made through an interpreter, whose testimony was not procured, as he had left for South America. The services of an interpreter were secured by the defendant. It was, therefore, contended that in interpreting, he was acting as defendant's agent, and his conversation with Mr. B. was as if held directly with the defendant himself, who was bound by the version in English of his words as given by the interpreter. But his Honor excluded evidence of what the interpreter had said, and held that he must be produced, or evidence given of some authority for him as agent of the defendant, other than that implied from the fact of his having acted as interpreter.

It was shown that Mr. Bryan had first brought the Panama hats to the knowledge of Leland & Co., and obtained from them an offer, which resulted in the purchase of the 349 dozen by them.

It appeared further, in evidence, that the goods had been consigned to Cesar & Pauli, a commission house in the City, who had effected insurance upon them in advance of their arrival. That C. & P. held them for sale, and had charged commissions, in their accounts with V., the defendant, upon the very lot sold to Leland & Co. They denied the contract with Bryan, and claim that he was not entitled to compensation at all.

The Court held that the plaintiff, upon the lot of hats sold, was entitled to brokerage commissions, namely, one per cent., amounting to $53 65, and gave judgment in his favor for that amount.

For the plaintiff, Mr. Devereux; for the defendant, Messrs. Foster & Thompson.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

YELLOW FEVER IN SOUTH AMERICA.—The following is an extract from a letter dated at Montevideo, April 14:

"In the beginning of last month the yellow fever broke out in a most malignant form, and upwards of 400 have already fallen victims to this disease which has spread over the city. It commenced in a part of the town which had, for some years past, been the receptacle for all the refuse of animal matter thrown from the Barracas, and which had become a mass of the most offensive character. The place is nearly deserted, and all who can have retired to the country."

THE CROPS.—A gentleman traveling in the interior, writes us that, though backward, the crops in the valleys of Tennessee look remarkably well and promising. There was a great increase in the quantity of land sown to wheat throughout East Tennessee than ever before. That sown on the high land (mountains, &c.,) has been greatly Winter-killed. The prospect for corn in that region is very flattering. The ravages of the chinch bug, cut worm, and fly are creating much alarm among the Virginia tobacco growers, our friend informs us.—Washington Star.

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, JUNE 26, 1857.

☞ D. KIMBALL & Co., No. 17 Market-square, Providence, R. I., will supply those who want the DAILY, SEMI-WEEKLY, WEEKLY, or THE CALIFORNIA TIMES. All orders promptly attended to.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Act of 1850, establishing the Territory of Utah, contains a provision whereby Congress can, at pleasure, abolish the Territory, or attach it to any other State or Territory. The Act was passed with the express understanding that polygamy would not be tolerated.

Mayor WOOD is at last out of the Sheriff's custody. The writ of habeas corpus was returnable yesterday. The District Attorney did not object, and so Judge RUSSELL entered an order of discharge. So his Honor is a free man again, and enjoys as large a liberty as his meanest subject to-day.

Coroner PERRY lays a plain statement of his connection with the process that the Mayor's friends forbade him to serve on the day of the late riot, before the people, this morning, in our columns.

In the Superior Court yesterday the Mayor's Contempt case was decided by his Honor Judge HOFFMAN. He took the ground that, though Coroner PERRY's affidavit might conflict with that of DUTCHER in regard to what PERRY told him, yet it could not aver what DUTCHER told the Mayor. From all the affidavits presented, it appeared that the Mayor was ignorant of the fact that the Coroner wished to serve any process of the Court upon him. In this view he was sustained by the fact that the Mayor afterwards sent for the Coroner to be served with the writ. On this principal ground, his Honor comes to the conclusion that the order to show cause should be discharged.

The Street Commissioner's case was resumed yesterday in the Supreme Court. Mayor WOOD's examination was continued, and Sheriff WILLET, Capt. BENNETT, Deputy TURNER and Deputy Sheriff VULTEE testified. Several affidavits were read by Mr. FIELD, and the Court adjourned with the understanding that counsel will sum up this morning.

Advices have been received from Santa Fé, New-Mexico, to the 30th of May. Vigorous measures were being adopted to punish the Indians for their numerous outrages upon the whites—three hundred and fifty troops, under Colonel BONNEVILLE, having entered the Gila-Apache country for that purpose. The Governor of the Mexican State of Chihuahua also designed opening hostilities, in which he would co-operate with Colonel BONNEVILLE.

The Maine Republican State Convention, yesterday, nominated LOT M. MORRILL for Governor, by a vote of 585 to 16.

The Main Line of Public Works of Pennsylvania was sold at auction last evening, at the Exchange, in Philadelphia. It was purchased by J. EDGAR THOMPSON, in behalf of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, for $7,500,000.

The dealers in glass, China and earthern ware, had a grand banquet at the La Pierre House, Philadelphia, last evening, given by dealers of that city to their brethren in other cities.

The "Wilson Small" or "Regular" Democratic Committee met last evening at Tammany Hall. Reports were received from the different Wards, submitting the names of the Ward officers and the persons selected for the General and Young Men's Committees. A time for the organization of these Committees was named, and a Committee appointed to draft an address to the Democracy. Resolutions in reference to the death of Ex-Alderman CORNELL were adopted, after which the meeting adjourned.

The practice, which was not uncommon heretofore of evading the Pilot laws by hiring a steamer to tow a vessel to sea, the captain of the tug really acting as a pilot, has not wholly died out under the new regulations, notwithstanding a stringent clause against that particular mode of evasion. The pilots are, therefore, about commencing suits against the steamer John J. Birkbeck and some others for towing vessels to sea without a pilot. Similar suits are now pending against steam-tugs for violating the Hell-gate Pilot laws in the same way.

The best thing we publish, this morning, is an original resolution of Alderman FULLMER'S, offered last evening, and promptly adopted by the Board.

In the Board of Councilmen, last evening, the only transaction of any importance was a debate in Committee of the Whole upon a resolution of Councilman HASWELL, to raise the salary of the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department to $5,000 per annum. The Committee agreed to report in favor of such increase.

The work of street cleaning progresses. Yesterday large forces worked in each of the Wards—excepting the Seventeenth, for which they have not yet procured a dumping place. No brooms have been used as the dirt was too thick for them, but the hoes and shovels have made a vast improvement. In some of the down-town streets picks were brought into requisition to clear the gutters.

The Health Officer, yesterday, gave a permit to lighter the cargo of brig Lucy Heywood, excepting the cotton, which he stored at old Quarantine. The vessel is to be still further detained at the new Quarantine anchorage for thorough fumigation.

At Seguine's Point everything remains quiet, and the work progresses with energy.

General WALKER will not leave us as soon as was announced; not having fully accomplished the business on which he came to New-York, he will, it is said, remain for two or three days longer, not, however, at the Lafarge, where he is too much interrupted by calls, but at a private house. He spent last evening at General HENNINGSEN'S; hereafter it is uncertain if his whereabouts will be known except to the knowing ones. He declines any further lionizing at the theatres.

Sheriff THOMAS CARNLEY's will was admitted to probate yesterday. He died worth $100,000, all which he leaves to his wife, "free from the control of any future husband she may have." The widow is made sole executrix.

The Under-graduate Association of the New-York University dined together at the Clinton Hotel last night, and had a jovial time.

Hon. NATHANIEL P. BANKS, the Union, American and Republican nominee for next Governor of Massachusetts, left by the New-Haven train, at 8 o'clock this morning, for Boston.

The body of Policeman, WM. STETSON, of the Seventh Ward, New-York, who suddenly disappeared from his beat last week, was picked up last evening in the East River, near the Fulton Ferry. The body bears no marks of violence.

Two hatters, named JAMES MCDONNELL and THOMAS MORRELL, while at work in PRENTICE & Co.'s hat factory, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, got into a quarrel, when MCDONNELL struck MORRELL over the head with a heavy billet of wood, injuring him so severely that it is thought impossible for him to recover. MCDONNELL has been arrested.

ANOTHER JUDICIAL ALLY.—Mr. MICHAEL CONNOLLY, who is a Police Justice at the Tombs, was a highly respectable cigar merchant before he was elevated as an expounder of criminal law by an enlightened constituency; and he has abundantly proved the prophesies of his friends that when on the bench he would make offenders "smoke." Whether he consults Burns' Justice, or Russell on Crimes, or Arch-bold it is very evident that he is little versed in the Revised Statutes. Last week he held Mr. Commissioner CHOLWELL to bail to keep the peace towards Mayor WOOD. The Revised Statutes, part 4, chapter 2, title 1, section 4, provide that when a magistrate takes a recognizance to keep the peace from an offender, "upon such person being brought before the magistrate, he may be required to enter into a recognizance in such sum not exceeding $1,000, as such magistrate shall direct, &c." This is very explicit, but Mr. CONNOLLY, no doubt following the bold position of Ex-Judge DEAN, that the Mayor was a very high personage when in a criminal proceeding, held the rival Commissioner to bail in FIVE thousand dollars—just quintuple the prohibition of the Statute. We commend Mr. CONNOLLY to the tender mercies of the Grand Jury of the Special Oyer and Terminer, for such excess of zeal against the prohibition of law may possibly turn out to be oppressive in office.

The Rebellion of Mayor Wood.

There is a disposition evinced in certain quarters to exonerate the Mayor from all share in the riot and rebellion of the 16th inst., since he has produced a batch of affidavits showing his ignorance of the nature of the Coroner's errand when he first called at the City Hall with the warrant of arrest issued by Judge HOFFMAN. He has got nineteen policemen, a door-keeper and messenger, and, we doubt not, could get as many more, to swear that he was not aware, until PERRY had left the building, that he had come to serve a process. Consequently he would have us acknowledge that he has been guilty neither of contempt nor of rebellion. Many of the public have no little difficulty, we dare say, in striking a balance between the Coroner's oath and those of the Mayor and his men, and the partisans of the latter rest in imaginary triumph upon the overwhelming weight of the avalanche of testimony with which His Honor has overwhelmed the Courts.

We are greatly scandalized, as no doubt are all good citizens, by the perjury, by which on one side or other, these proceedings have been marked. Whether WOOD or PERRY has sworn falsely—and one or other has assuredly done so—the disgrace to the City is equally great. We dwelt yesterday at some length on this branch of the subject. We wish to-day to call the attention of our readers once again to the fact, of which we fear they are apt to lose sight in the haze which legal procedure casts round the simplest matter, that WOOD's ignorance of the nature of PERRY's mission when he first called in no way affects the character of the occurrences which subsequently took place. The Mayor's position is not a whit improved, if it were proved ten times over that the Coroner never explained his business to DUTCHER, nor DUTCHER to the Mayor, and that he left the City Hall in perfect amity with every one of the inmates. The resistance afterwards offered on the steps to the entrance of the posse comitatus Police headed by the Coroner was still rank and unmitigated rebellion, and no explanation which either WOOD or his friends have offered or can offer, can in the slightest degree alter its complexion. The service of a warrant is no more illegal by fifty men than by one. The process of the Courts is just as valid in the hands of the whole power of the county as in the hands of a Sheriff's deputy. The failure of the Coroner through ignorance or mistake in serving a warrant on the first attempt, is no excuse for resisting him on the second attempt, and that such a plea should ever have been deliberately put forward on the Mayor's behalf, is a significant proof of the extent to which the spirit of faction blinds the best-meaning men to the simplest dictates of law and justice. There are people in this City whom it would seem almost ridiculous to accuse of treasonable designs, of a spirit of either disaffection to the government, or insubordination to the laws—men who, when the rendition of a fugitive slave is in question, are the first to clamor for the sacrifice of every good feeling of the human heart to devotion to the law. These very people, and amongst them we number the Journal of Commerce, are exhausting all their rhetoric in the attempt to palliate WOOD's conduct on the 16th, by the allegation that those whom he repelled by force were "bogus policemen." Now there is no law, or color of law, in this State or any other State, and there is no lawyer or judge in any portion of this Union who has ever asserted, or will venture to assert, that a decision of the General Term of the Supreme Court is not binding on everybody in the State till it is overruled. What it decides to be constitutional and genuine is constitutional and genuine until the Court of Appeals reverses its decision. It had formally decided long before the 16th that the Metropolitan Police Commissioners and their men were officers lawfully appointed, and that the office which they held, and the duties they performed, and the act which created them, were in no way repugnant to the Constitution. No one disputes this proposition. The fifty who were driven back by force from the City Hall were, therefore, legally qualified to discharge police duties, and resistance to them by an armed force, was rebellion. It was rebellion whether the Coroner had ever entered the City Hall previously or not, whether the Mayor knew there was a warrant out against him or not, whether PERRY had been previously assaulted or not. We care not two straws which of the two has perjured himself. It is enough for us to know that on the 16th inst. a body of armed men, acting under the orders of Mayor WOOD, forcibly resisted the execution of warrants in the hands of the Coroner of the County, aided by fifty policemen, appointed under an act of the Legislature, which act had been declared constitutional by a judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court. This is the leading fact of the case. WOOD and PERRY's doings and sayings, either before or after, in no way affect it. They may swear till they are tired, without in the least degree effacing the "damned spot" on the Mayor's reputation.

Upon the gross indecency of Judge DEAN'S conduct on Wednesday, in telling Judge PEABODY, in open Court, that the Metropolitan Police were "bogus," we shall not stop to comment. The day seems unhappily to have come when "lawyers" have forgotten where the line lies which divides the honest "counsel" from the shameless blackguard. It is not enough now-a-days to plead a client's cause. A lawyer must be also brazen-faced, turbulent and riotous in his service.

The French Elections.

The French Empire is now upon its trial before the tribunal of the popular will. That the trial will not, and cannot be a fair and impartial trial, we need not say. Yet the arrangements which have been made for holding it go far towards determining us to believe that the verdict will after all be essentially a fair verdict—that it will reflect the dominant convictions of the country—and that it will confirm the authority of NAPOLEON III.

The pet parallel of so many public writers will doubtless be summoned out to do duty again upon this occasion. We shall be told of the modern Augustus aping his ancient prototype, and sitting with mock humility at his palace-gates to ask the suffrages of the people. The parallel is not a purely imaginary one, nor is the application of it utterly pointless. Yet France, after all, is not Rome, and the heir of BONAPARTE unquestionably holds his throne by a more democratic tenure than that which assured the dominion of the world to the nephew of JULIUS. Ignorance and despair consigned the provinces of the ancient Republic to the intelligible and pacific sway of the chief of the Republican armies. The people of France deliberately accepted the restoration of the Empire, as the surest check which could be put upon the rival factions of the National Assembly and the rival parties of the Parisian world. The Legitimists, the Orleanists and the Republicans had been tried by turns, and by turns found wanting. Bonapartism, if a tradition, (and it was nothing but a tradition,) was at least a National tradition. France would certainly never have sent for the third NAPOLEON, had he not come of himself. But he came, strong in will, unscrupulous of character; and seeing his own opportunity in the legislative confusion, of selfish purposes, and partisan ambitions, he seized it, and threw himself for support upon the people of all France. He found the support which he sought, not because France loved him personally, nor because the "dynasty" of which he talks so much was synonymous in the mind of France with peace, prosperity and power, but because, while he represented a national tradition sufficiently vivid to excite the popular sympathy at home, and sufficiently formidable to impose respect abroad, he had at the same time approved himself to be personally a man of many resources, and more than a match for the strongest combinations of those astute politicians, of whose miserable chicanery and impotent manœuvering, the whole people, and especially the people of the Provinces, were utterly weary. That LOUIS NAPOLEON could never have put the imperial crown upon his head had he not held in his hand the army of France is most true;—but not less true is it that, with the army of France in his hand, he would have been powerless to effect his object had not the people, as a body, acquiesced, and intelligently acquiesced, in the change. That they did so acquiesce is matter of history—nor will history record it to the discredit of the French people. For it was due neither to the moral degradation nor to the mental imbecility of that great, powerful, and intelligent nation. It was not a criticism upon France, as unfit for liberal institutions,—but a condemnation of the public men of France as unfit to be trusted with power. The popular vote in favor of the Empire was a legitimate consequence of the deterioration which had been going on in the character and tone of public life in France ever since the accession of LOUIS PHILIPPE. The coincidence of this deterioration, with the steady contemporaneous advance of the people at large in the elements of national worth and national power, ought not to perplex any student of history, least of all should it appear mysterious to any American familiar with the currents of our own political and national life. If the production of a THIERS is an argument of national incapacity for freedom, what shall we say of the people who elevated a PIERCE to the Presidency? The peculiar political system of France bequeathed to her by the founders of the Monarchical unity, by RICHELIEU, MAZARINE and LOUIS XIV., gave to her degenerate and unprincipled politicians a more formidable power for mischief than our as yet imperfectly centralized Government affords to the debased and dangerous class of public men whose numbers and whose influence have of late years been so rapidly increasing in this country. For the same reason it was more difficult for the national sentiment of France to make itself efficiently felt at Paris than it has yet become for the will of the American people to make itself respected at Washington. In fact, it may almost be said with truth, that the national mind of France exercised no more control over the proceedings of the Assembly which was dissolved by the coup d'état of December, than is exerted by the public sentiment of New-York over the Municipal authorities of our own City.

Enthroned as the representative of France for the chastisement and repression of the morbid and selfish individualisms and factions which had run riot in the Government, NAPOLEON III. has fulfilled his mission at least as well as was to have been expected, perhaps as well as it was possible he should. He has made France more formidable and more respectable than ever in the eyes of Europe. He has contributed not so much indeed as his admirers claim, but more than his enemies are willing to allow, to the development of French industry, and the increase of French wealth. Against the lamentable inferences which have been deduced from the fact that the population of France has not materially advanced, (inferences, which, if they were admitted to be sound, would go to prove that Southern China is a more prosperous country than Massachusetts, and Bengal a wealthier province than Canada,) may be set the conceded advance of the commerce of France, the steady rise in the value of taxable property, and the financial ability of the empire to meet the most sudden and serious drains upon the national treasury.

But NAPOLEON III. has done much evil with some good. He has fostered a spirit of frantic speculation quite inconsistent with the health of national enterprise and energy. He has brought forward into public life a set of men no better than those whom he ousted—a set of men, indeed, only less intolerable than their predecessors, because their power of evil is more limited and their representative importance diminished. In one word, he has organized not a reform, but a respite; and the experiment which, after a trial of five years, is now submitted again to the popular judgment, must still be passed upon as an experiment and not as a success.

The result of the elections, we do not doubt, will show the Empire is to be tolerated—not that it is to be established. The list of candidates presented by the Liberal opposition to the electors of Paris is admirably made up. That General CAVAIGNAC has suffered his name to be put upon it is a sufficient indication to the world that his colleagues are men of character. To those who are at all familiar with French politics, the names of these colleagues are in themselves most satisfactory. For they are men who will make the calm, honorable and intelligent liberalism of France heard and respected in the Imperial Councils. In suffering the elections to be held with tolerable fairness, at least in Paris, NAPOLEON III. has proved that he understands his position—that he knows himself to be a necessity to the most respectable portions, even of his opponents, so long as he shall refrain from pushing his dominion into despotism. He will endeavor to prevent the return from the provinces of dangerous men, who might impose themselves on the rural population, as so many did in 1848, but who could not find a hearing among the enlightened Republicans of the Capital. In short, he will play a new game on the old principle, and will win as before, though by a different stroke. Thereafter will follow the hardest trials he has yet been called upon to meet, and he will find the gradual accommodation of the Imperial rule to the reviving demands of true French Constitutionalism, a much more difficult enterprise than the repulse of Russia from the frontier of Turkey, or the pacification of Europe.

For us, meanwhile, whom the immediate result of the French elections cannot greatly affect, the whole of the recent history of France is more full of useful warnings, than seems to be suspected by our sayers of smooth sayings, who have chiefly "improved" the Revolution of February, and the Coup d' Etat, to a sermon of self-praise, and a canticle of national self-congratulation.

"Municipal Liberties."

A paper which, to serve a purpose, feels generally at liberty to draw on its imagination for learning as well as facts, employs the phrases, "despotic usurpations against our municipal liberties" and "despotic and insolent interferences in our municipal affairs," to characterize the legislation at Albany for this City. As utterances of opinion, from such a source, they possess no authority; but, nevertheless, embody assertions which in themselves are worth examination.

What are our Municipal Liberties, and were they usurped by the legislation in question?

It is sought to derive aid and comfort for Mayor WOOD and his abettors, by assuming an analogy between our Municipal Liberties, so-called, and the corporate or municipal franchises of a past age, as being equally conservative of free Government, or popular rights. Now, there exists no such likeness between them; the supposed analogy is inaccurate.

In the centuries when the municipal institutions were of peculiar benefit to mankind, society was just reviving from the confusion of middle-age events. Then, the bond of political union in States was feeble; the sources of anarchy innumerable. The king and the noble, having no intermediate balancing power, were continually at variance. The Commons, the most numerous and the most useful class, were in actual servitude, or in a condition next to it. There was no protection for the advantages men expect from society. At this time, municipal institutions first grew into importance. Cities and communities, in different parts of Europe, gradually acquired or extorted, in return for services or supplies, or from the sheer necessity of self preservation, certain privileges of municipal jurisdiction, at first fluctuating and uncertain, afterwards confirmed by grants or charters from feudal superiors or the crown. They proved safeguards against the usurpation and oppression which were otherwise unbounded, and almost universally prevailed. These municipalities, so formed, contributed more than almost any other cause, yet indirectly, to introduce and diffuse regular government, police and the arts.

Not that they were free in themselves, or cultivated an equality of personal rights. The reverse rather was generally the case. They were free, and are so styled, e. g., the "free-cities," in a qualified sense only. Enjoying immunity from outside control or oppression, they also, to a large extent, had the privilege of self-government. Thus, not in fact free institutions in themselves, they yet advanced freedom, by measurably promoting intelligence, public order and prosperity, and were obstacles in the way of tyranny, harriers to despotic power.

Municipal organizations, however, have ceased to occupy that position, or bear similar relations towards the States within which they respectively exist. From the economic point of view, indeed, these organizations are still appealed to, and with interest, as means to restrain centralization, or promote local interests, but, as patrons or guardians of liberty, civil or political, their occupation is gone—not to return, until society shall revert to a condition from which it was emancipated centuries since.

Times are changed. Here, at least, no municipal liberties can be greater than the liberties which the community at large enjoy. In this State, particularly, we fairly luxuriate in a freedom, constantly freshened and replenished by contact with the people in their sovereign capacity. No free city, in comparison, can be regarded as other than a highly conservative institution.

From the preceding, it is clear that analogies between municipal bodies of the dark ages, and now, are altogether fallacious.

But the municipal liberties of this City, such as they are, what are they? A great deal is declaimed just now of the Dongan and Montgomerie Charters, and of the inestimable franchises they confer upon and secure to New-York. The nearer those franchises are regarded, the more closely they are scrutinized, the less they appear to amount to. They have, in fact, been dissipated in legislation of more recent dates. Nearly every privilege the charters in question were supposed to guarantee, has been, time and again, legislated upon at pleasure, without leave or license, by this or that party, and has become, thereby, so patched, and stitched, and altered, that scarcely a remnant remains of the original article.

Indeed, in 1804, the position that charters of incorporation, containing grants and privileges, were not to be essentially affected without the consent of the parties, or without due process of law, was formerly repudiated, and has never, in this State, been judicially sustained. With a reservation in favor of certain vested rights of property, the so-called liberties of this, like every other city in the State, have been, are, and will continue, subjects for free legislative action; and, we take it, there can be no usurpation in legislation by the people's representatives, which is not in itself unconstitutional.

A Word for the School Children.

A few hours of sultry Summer weather set grown folk cogitating on the best means of maintaining a reasonable degree of health and comfort. At no other season do we study so carefully, and obey so self-sacrificingly, the laws of hygeine. Those whose means will admit of it flee to the sea-side, the mountain nook or some other rural retreat, laying aside the toils and cares of business, satisfied that recreation pays better than hard work at such a time. It may be questioned, however, whether we are not more heedless in regard to the welfare and happiness of the school children, who swelter six tedious hours in school-rooms which, however well ventilated, are not altogether conducive to health.

Physiologists have settled upon the theory that six hours devoted to school studies, under favorable circumstances, is quite as much as consists with the mental or physical well-being of children. That it is more than most of them ought be subjected to, during the Summer months, we think any one may satisfy himself who will step into one of our public schools on a warm afternoon, half an hour before the close of its daily exercises. The sickly lassitude, the lustreless eye and dejected, fatigue-marked faces, tell the story of utter exhaustion. True, upon emerging into the open air, the elasticity of youth throws off the spell;—but such daily strains upon the physical powers of the little ones cannot fail of serious injury, though it may not be immediately apparent. When the body is relaxed, too, the mind fully shares in its exhaustion, and is fretted and tortured by demands upon it which, under more favorable circumstances, would be met and answered with pleasure.

The Board of Education sometime since made partial provision against these Summer disadvantages, by directing that the schools should be opened and dismissed an hour earlier. The movement was a wise one; but we doubt whether it is sufficiently radical. A step further in advance by the reduction of the school term, during the Summer heat, to five hours per day, would probably more fully meet the necessities of the case. In this movement we understand the school officers of the Fifth Ward have already taken the lead, gathering the children together at 8 o'clock in the morning, and dismissing them at 1 in the afternoon. If the experiment is persisted in long enough to test its advantages, we should think there can be little doubt of its general adoption in our public schools,—for it will be found to secure better attendance, more perfect recitations, while the benefit to health will of itself more than compensate for the change. Let us hope that this important subject will receive prompt, careful and practical consideration in the right quarter.

BEWARE OF DOGS.—This is a scriptural caution, and we have no doubt that it was especially intended for the season vulgarly known as the "dog days." At this time of the year dogs go mad, and newspaper columns throughout the country are filled with accounts of "fatal results" from their bites. Our municipal authorities take the matter in hand, and, in imitation of the Chinese practice of criminal law, decree the penalty of death by strangulation to canine vagrants. While, therefore, the citizens of New-York should beware of dogs and hydrophobia, the dogs themselves should beware of the executioner. Every one owns dogs, and hence, for the benefit of every one, we have devoted a portion of this morning's issue to an elaborate treatment of the subject. The article will be found to contain much valuable information.

THE SWEEPERS AT WORK.—We had, yesterday, the first actual feeling of Summer, without feeling any of the usual ill effects of hot weather. But we had, also, what was much more unexpected, though not a whit the less pleasant, the first sight of a squad of street-sweepers that has blurred our eyes in a long time. As new brooms are proverbial for clean sweeping we hope that the proverb will hold good in their case, and that the City Inspectors and sweepers will give us the unwonted luxury, for at least one day if no more. From such a disorganized department, however, we have no right to expect much, and we shall not be disappointed. After all, our great security against disease lies, not in the sanitary measures of the Corporation, but in the natural position of the City and the effects of the purifying sea-breezes which daily blow over us, carrying off all miasmatic exhalations.

Uncle Sam Robbed.

Ex-Alderman HERRICK, Naval storekeeper, found yesterday morning upon visiting his office, that a drawer of one of the desks had been opened during the night, and five watches stolen. The watches were silver, patent levers, valued at $40 each, and belonged to the United States. Mr. HERRICK laid the subject of the theft, yesterday afternoon, before Mr. MASTERSON of the Chief's Office, and the latter detailed an officer to hunt up the stolen property. The new storekeeper grievously laments the theft, not so much because it hints that he has a loose way of keeping charge over Uncle Sam's property as the fact that unless the stolen articles are found he must pay for them from his own pocket.

ARSENAL MANAGEMENT.—We have already stated in the TIMES that the auction sale of the State Arsenal in this City, has been further postponed by the Commissioners of the Land Office to the 24th of July. By that time the sixty days allotted to the City to buy and pay $275,000 for the Arsenal property will have expired, and if our Finance Department fails to disburse previously thereto, nothing, probably, but the force of a permanent injunction from the Courts will prevent the Commissioners from selling, and it is doubtless their interest to put it up to the highest bidder, thereby increasing the Arsenal fund.

What necessity there can be for the said postponement of sale, when the Common Council has directed the issue of the required bonds, it is difficult to understand. The Comptroller sits ready to give his signature to the bonds whenever the Commissioners of the Land Office call for them, but the latter gentlemen have made themselves scarce about the Hall of Records, and thus no money has yet changed hands. Mr. FLAGG, it seems, indulges in the fond hope that the Commissioners will take his City bonds without any palaver; but this is doubtful, for those gentlemen about a month since passed a resolve that the $275,000 should be deposited in cash by the Comptroller, in the Manhattan Company's Bank, subject to the order of the State Treasurer.

Customarily, the Comptroller is required to advertise for thirty days before issuing bonds, but he claims to discover no provision in the act for the sale of State Arsenals, obliging him to give any notice whatever of this kind. As the case stands it rather looks as if the Commissioners want to sell to the highest bidder.

THE MARINE SURVEYORS.—We have been requested by a distinguished authority to correct our statement that "the Marine Surveyors are sustained by the Chamber of Commerce and Board of Underwriters, and under their direction are still going on in the discharge of their duties in the surveying of ships and cargoes."

The position of the New-York Chamber of Commerce and Board of Underwriters on the subject of the Port Warden law, has been pretty well defined by the official acts of those bodies. At a regular meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, on the 7th day of May last, a communication was presented from the Marine Surveyors, requesting some action on the part of the Chamber in reference to the act of the Legislature, passed April 14, 1857, "to reorganize the Warden's office of the port of New-York." Thereupon a Committee of Five were appointed to examine the subject, and to obtain the opinions of counsel upon the validity of the law.

On the 4th of June, at a regular meeting this Committee made its report, consisting first of a letter from the Marine Surveyors, asserting that they had hitherto discharged their duties to the entire satisfaction of the mercantile community of New York, as well as most foreign ports; they complained of being restrained in their professional duties by the law in question, making it a misdemeanor and heavy fine for each and every offence; they denounced the law as oppressive and arbitrary, and interfering with personal liberties and privileges. They solicit the advice of the Chamber as to how they—their own appointees—should act in this unpleasant position.

Upon this the Committee report that they had addressed letters to WM. A. BUTLER, Esq., counsellor-at-law. In this letter the Committee express the opinion that the law cannot be maintained, because it invades private rights, is detrimental to the interests of commerce, and especially at variance with section 8 of article 5, of the Constitution of the State of New-York—they asked the professional opinion of Mr. BUTLER, and that he would obtain the legal concurrence of Mr. O'CONOR in his opinion.

In answer to this communication the Committee received the written opinions of both Mr. BUTLER and Mr. O'CONOR, when the Committee stated those learned gentlemen arrive at the conclusion that the law in question is opposed to the Constitution and laws of the United States, or to the laws of the State of New York; that it is, therefore, not a valid law, and must fall under judicial investigation; and they concluded by offering the following resolution:

"That the report of the Committee be accepted, and that it be printed in pamphlet form for the use of the members of this Chamber, and of the Marine Surveyors, and also of the Board of Underwriters of the City and port of New-York."

These proceedings were accordingly published, together with the full opinions of the two eminent legal gentlemen already named, and there the matter rested.

That the Board of Underwriters and Chamber of Commerce paid all the expenses of a former suit against these same officers, and that they expect them to do the same in the present case is undeniable. It is also in contemplation to anticipate the decision of the Supreme Court in Kings County, by making up a case for the United States Circuit Court. All these facts seemed to our reporter to warrant a full reliance upon the statements of the Marine Surveyors that they were sustained by the respectable bodies of merchants referred to.

NEW-YORK UNIVERSITY DINNER.—The under graduates of the New York University assembled in jovial conclave at the Clinton Hotel, corner of Broadway and Eighth street, last evening, to partake of a bountiful repast provided for them—to eat and drink to the temporary increment of their own obesity and the future prosperity of their Alma Mater. It was originally intended that the Faculty and Alumni of the Institution should join with them in the Anniversary Dinner, but only two of the latter were present last evening, and the Faculty were less numerously represented than they by two.

The Alumni, it is understood, will have their annual dinner as usual this year, after the Commencement. When the substantials had been disposed of, the President invited the ladies of the hotel, who were assembled in an adjoining room, to partake with them of the dessert, which consisted of strawberries and cream ad infinitum, toasts and speeches. It was accepted.

Mr ALFRED A. POST, President of the Undergraduates' Association arose at the conclusion of the gastronomic exercises to initiate the Demosthenean. The exercises then proceeded as follows:

Abstract of the minutes of preparatory meetings, A. A. REDFIELD.

Toast to undergraduates, responded to by J. ALLEN MAXWELL.

Original Song—"How Sweet to Roam."

Toast—Our Sister Institutions—responded to by Mr. S. TAYLOR.

Toast to the Alumni, responded to by Mr. GEO. H. MOORE.

When we left they were having a "roaring" time and we were awakened by the echo at an earlier hour than usual this morning.

FEMALE NORMAL SCHOOL.—The commencement speeches of the Female Normal School at the Academy of Music, last evening, were particularly good. The Academy was crowded, inside and out, at an early hour, thousands being unable to obtain admission. The appearance of the house from the rear of the stage, which was occupied by young ladies dressed in white, was exceedingly fine.

ANDREW H. GREEN, Esq., President of the Board of Education, made the opening address, which was received with applause. The compositions submitted by the graduates were meritorious performances.

Rev. Dr. ADAMS made the closing address to the graduates, eighty-four in number, after the delivery of the diplomas by Mr. HAZELTINE, Principal of the Normal School. The singing was very fair.

The following are the names of the graduates:

MEETING OF THE "SMALL" COMMITTEE.—The "Regular" or Wilson Small General Committee had a meeting at Tammany Hall last evening.—Chairman PURDY presided. The various Wards were called and reported the officers of their organization, and the names of the General and Young Men's Committees agreed upon.

A Committee was appointed to draft and report an address to the Democracy.

A resolution was also passed that the General Committee meet for organization on June 29, and the Young Men's Committee on the 30th inst.

Resolutions of condolence were passed on the death of Ex Alderman CORNELL, after a eulogy by Judge WATERBURY.

Second Ward Police.

Sergeants TWEED and WHITE, of the Metropolitan Police, called, last evening, at the Second Ward Station-house. Sergeant TWEED said he had been sent to assume command of the District, and desired to read an "order" to the men.

Capt. SEWARD said he would not permit any such order to be read.

Sergeant TWEED thereupon retired, and announced to the men, as they left for their beats, the object of his visit. But one man—Policeman CURTIS—accompanied him. It is pretty well understood, however, that seven others of this Ward will declare, to-day, for the new Board.

FIRE IN NINTH-AVENUE.—A frame building in Ninth-avenue, between Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth streets, occupied as a feed store by BRIDGES & ROBERTS, and owned by Mr. FEITNER, was, with an office adjoining, destroyed by fire between 1 and 2 o'clock yesterday morning. Mr. FEITNER's loss is estimated at $800; insured for $500 in the Greenwich Insurance Company. The loss of BRIDGES & ROBERTS amounts to about $300 also. They are insured for $500 in the St. Nicholas Company. The fire is believed to be an incendiary one.

Movements of Governor Cumming—Power of Congress to Abolish the Territory of Utah—The Late Election Riot, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 25.

Governor CUMMING left this afternoon for St. Louis, on his way to Kansas. He will return in ten days, and will then receive his commission and instructions.

By the act establishing the Territory of Utah of 1850, right is reserved to Congress to abolish the Territory at its pleasure. It provides that said Territory may be divided or attached to any other State or Territory. The act passed on assurances that Polygamy was not one of the institutions to be introduced into the Territory. The vast majority of the Mormons are not citizens of the United States.

The States this evening contains an explanation that Mr. FLAGG was instructed by Secretary MARCY to distribute statistical documents, irrespective of the political character of the journals to which they were sent. UNO.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The Postmaster-General has rearranged the mail service between Richmond and Memphis, thus insuring a saving of time and greater regularity.

A letter has been received from Col. PICKENS, of South Carolina, declining the tender of the Russian mission.

The Instructions to the New Governor of Utah—The Spanish Naval Force—Inquiry into the Execution of Crabb's Party in Sonora, &c.

Correspondence of the New York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 24, 1857.

Col. CUMMING will probably receive his commission to morrow, and also his instructions from the President. The Secretary of State to Utah, has not yet been appointed. The instructions to the Governor of Utah will be of a very positive and stringent character, as the President is determined to preserve the domestic tranquillity of the country. It will be in vain for the Mormons to veil their brutal murders and beastly immorality under the guise of religion. In the East it is a part of the religion of some of the heathens to murder and eat their fellows, but certainly no such monstrosities would be tolerated in a Christian land.

It is true that no power is vested in the Federal Government to put down the Mormons as a sect, but the Executive is vested with the power to see that the welfare, peace and tranquility of the country is preserved. And therefore whatever endangers the domestic tranquility of the country is in the power of the Executive to arrest, and, if necessary, by force of arms. The position is not tenable that there is nothing in the Constitution to justify a crusade against Mormonism, any more than there is against Abolitionism. The latter is a mere political opinion, and is neither contra bones mores or flagrante delictu. The days of religious higotry, on this continent, at least, have passed away, and the Mormons cannot hope, by making martyrs of themselves, to gain the sympathies of the world. Suppose it were a part of their religion to murder and rob, (which it seems it is,) will it be contended for a moment that the Executive has no power over the territory of the United States to insure the domestic tranquillity, and promote the general welfare; which is the very language of the preamble of the Constitution the President has sworn to carry out? The question is not whether there is any power under the Constitution to prohibit or punish polygamy, but it is, whether there is not power under the Federal Government to put down outrages arising under any political or religious fanatical sect, which endangers the public safety? We have already seen that there is, and the late Washington riot is a bloody proof of the fact. It is all nonsense, then, to talk of a crusade against the Mormons to put down their religion, and putting their acts of fiendish beastiality on a par with the political questions of Abolitionism.

There is no foundation for the rumor that the Spanish naval force intended for Vera Cruz, had appeared off the coast of Cuba. Spain is far from being lulled in the lap of security as regards Cuba, and if she sends over any force, it will be for the further protection of that Island, instead of making war on Mexico, which would be suicidal to her, and be the very means of losing Cuba. It is the opinion among those conversant with Mexican affairs, that it is the interest of a party of speculators and others connected with Mexico, to get up the excitement and belief that Mexico is on the eve of another revolution, and that a war with Spain is certain, in order to effect and carry out certain designs, Mexico has certainly nothing to fear from the decrepitude of SANTA ANA'a somplicity.

Instructions have been sent to our Minister in Mexico to make a full investigation in regard to the murder of the Americans who belonged to CRABB'S party, and who were butchered on the American side. If the facts are found to be true as related Mexico will be held to a strict account.

In a letter by the last steamer from London, from a friend, I learn that Mr. DALLAS, our Minister, visited, with his family, the Ascot Races, and were highly delighted and gratified. The University of Oxford had informed Mr. DALLAS that they intended conferring on him the degree of LL. D. Politics and diplomacy in England were very dull. It is said when Mr. DALLAS heard that England had fillibustered an island from New-Granada, in the Pacific, that if it was true, he was willing to take a hand at fillibustering himself. It is said that Mr. DALLAS has been applied to by several very distinguished men in London, to know something of the Rackensack University of Arkansas, as they had been informed that the honorary degree of LL. D. had been conferred upon them, and they had remitted the initiation fee of £2! Some wags in Rackensack, no doubt, have been amusing themselves.

The President attended the annual Commencement of Columbia College to day, and expressed himself highly pleased with the exercises.

The Secretary of War, and Secretary of the Navy, visited the Arsenal to day, to see experiments made with Col SAM COLT'S breech-loading rifles and pistols, and also that of the Minie weapon.

The examination at the Military Academy at Lexington, Va., a State Institution, not inferior, it is said, to West Point, takes place on the Fourth of July next. Senator HUNTER has accepted an invitation to make an address upon the occasion.

The States of yesterday, under the head of "Fevers to the Enemy," indirectly charges WILLIAM HUNTER, Esq., Chief Clerk of the State Department, with having furnished the Louisville Journal, and St. Louis Intelligencer, two Know Nothing papers, with public documents. Both of those journals published editorial acknowlegements as having received public documents from Mr. HUNTER. The circumstances are not conclusive of Mr. HUNTER'S guilt, however, who never sent the documents acknowledged. They were sent by Mr. FLAGG, the Statistical Clerk of the State Department, who sent the labels to Mr. HUNTER to frank, and afterwards posted them on the documents in question. If there be any Know-Nothing suspicions created by this act, they must rest entirely on Mr. FLAGG.

Mr. HUNTER has been 28 years in the State Department, and came in under Gen. JACKSON'S Administration in 1829. UNO.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, June 25.

A splendid banquet was given, this evening, by the dealers in Glass, China and Earthenware, of this city, to their brethren of other cities, at the Lapierre House. One hundred and fifty persons partook of it. W. P. HACKER presided. Delegates were present from New-York, Baltimore, Boston, Richmond, Pittsburg, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Wheeling, Chicago, and other cities. Mr. GEO. W. HERRING, of Baltimore, and Mr. JOHN R. MUMFORD occupied seats each side of the President.

Mr. HERRING responded to the first toast, complimentary to Baltimore. Mr. UNDERHILL, of New-York, responded in behalf of that city, and Mayor VAUX, MORTON MCMICHAEL, Esq., and others made speeches suited to the occasion.

A happy allusion was made to the Earthenware Banquet following so soon on the China Mission dinner, given at the same saloon.

The Main Line was sold this evening by auction, at the Exchange. There was a large attendance, and the Governor was present. It was purchased by J. EDGAR THOMSON, President, in behalf of the Pennsylvania Railroad, for $7,500,000,—one bid only being made.

The Sheeting Affair at Memphis, Tenn.

MEMPHIS, Thursday, June 25.

At a meeting of citizens last night, a jury was formed having six representatives from each Ward. ABLE, the murderer of EVERSON, was found guilty of his murder in the first degree. Twelve of the Jury were in favor of lynching ABLE, and the rest for disposing of him lawfully.

A resolution was passed requiring all the gamblers to leave the city in ten days, or be forcibly expelled.

The father of ABLE, who is also a murderer and gambler, has been required to leave the City at noon to-day. Last night, a crowd having a cannon in their possession, proceeded to the jail, intending to take ABLE forcibly therefrom and hang him, but they were dissuaded from doing so by the Mayor.

[NOTE.—Yesterday's dispatch read that EVERSON shot ABLE. It should have been that ABLE shot EVERSON.]

The Affray in the State-House at Hartford

HARTFORD, Conn., Thursday, June 25.

The Committee of Investigation on the affray which occurred in the State-House yesterday, have reported that the parties were excited over the remarks made in the House by Mr. BROOKS, and those of Mr. DUNHAM to Mr. BROOKE; that Mr. DUNHAM had apologized to the House through the Committee, and that Mr. BROOKE would apologize directly to the House. The report was accepted, and the matter was thus settled. The "personal violence," reported yesterday, appears to have been little more than the excited language of all parties.

Musical.

ITALIAN OPERA.—It will be seen by a card published below that Mme. LA GRANGE, the most estimable and admirable artist we have ever had on these shores, has leased the Academy for a short season of Opera, commencing on Monday next. We trust that the enterprise will prove a successful one. BAGIONOLI, AMONIO, COLLETTI, ARNOLDI and other popular artists are in the company.

NEW-YORK MENDELSSOHN UNION.—The last soirée of this prosperous and deserving association took place last evening at the City Assembly Rooms, and notwithstanding the heat, was attended by a very large audience. Of the few musical societies in our City, this is perhaps the only one that exhibits a creditable enthusiasm, and a willingness to work on proper eclectic principles. During the past season the Union has presented to the public a series of programmes remarkable for their variety, and for the labor which they have entailed on the members. From the condition of our least important Society it has become the most energetic, capable and highly appreciated. Much of the credit of this desirable result is due to Mr. MORGAN, who, in addition to every musical requisite, seems to possess the happy faculty of inspiring his associates with genuine ardor for their duties.

The performance of HAYDN'S "Creation," last night, was, on the whole, extremely creditable. It is a work, however, which needs very excellent solo-singing to be enjoyable. The "Union" is rich in capable artists, but for HAYDN'S solos the best will alone suffice. The elaborate melodic phrases of the composer are like the figures in a minuet—they require the extremest grace, combined with much physical perfection, or they are awkward and tedious. For amateurs the singing was excellent, but we do not think it deserves to be placed on a higher level. From this remark, however, must be excepted Mr. LEACH, who sang like an artist.

Mr. MORGAN conducted, and had an orchestra which, considering its smallness, was singularly willful. The choruses were excellent.

Card from Madame Lagrange.

Having been induced to defer my departure for Europe, by the persuasions of the President and Directors of the Academy of Music, together with many of my personal friends, who are desirous I should again appear in Opera prior to my leaving the United States, I have therefore taken the Academy of Music, and shall give six representations of Italian Opera, commencing on Monday next, the 29th inst., and having succeeded in making arrangements with Sig. BAGIONOLI, AMONIO, COLETTI, ARNOLDI, TOZIANO, and well-known artiste, I trust the public, in whose liberality I confide, will not be disappointed in the entertainments they will receive under my direction. No Opera will be repeated during the engagement.

INTERESTING FROM ALBANY.

The Court of Appeals—Prospect of a Decision and What it will be—The State Reporter—The Contracting Board—The Temperance People—The Political Cauldron—The Averill Ore Bed—and the Twenty-Mile Trot.

Correspondence of the New York Daily Times.

ALBANY, Thursday, June 25, 1857.

The Court of Appeals still has undergoing the process of incubation the decision of the constitutionality of the Metropolitan Police bill. I do not think that, collectively, the Judges themselves know what the decision will be—or that any deliberate consultation has yet been had between them. But, nevertheless, it appears to be well settled here that the constitutional question will be decided in the affirmative. Every lawyer in attendance,—and among them are such men as Judges BRADLEY and FOOTE, and NICHOLAS HILL and WILLIAM CURTIS NOYES—and every layman with whom I have conversed, express but one opinion as to what the decision will be. Most of them arrive at these conclusions from the points and arguments presented to the Court, and from carefully putting together chance words that have escaped from the Judges in the course of conversation.

Were it not that the people are really interested in the result of the argument before the Court, I think the opinion of the Judges could be readily ascertained. But your Judge of Appeals is one of the big wigs, and the whole race of big wigs, from Adam's dey to this, have inherited constitutional objections against doing any thing as the mass of common-sense people would do it. Any thing like a compliance with the public expectation—any thing like a speedy, or even timely, solution of a vexed question, is not to be thought of in the Court of Appeals. Hence, with delay and uncertainty, the city—that great bear of the State—is to be kept in a state of disorder, and chaos, and its peace and wealth at the mercy of the corrupt and perjured. How long we are yet to wait, is only to be conjectured; but we have sanguine hopes that we shall get a response from the oracle on Saturday. The term of the Court will not close until Friday, the 3d of July, and it is possible that no decision will be given until that time.

The term of office of the State Reporter comes with this session of the Court. The appointment of a successor is with the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, and the Attorney General. The candidates prominently named are Judge CONKLING, of Utica, W. BARNES, of Albany; PLATT POTTER, of Schenectady; GEORGE UNDERWOOD, of Auburn; CHARLES SEDGWICK, of New-York, and E. PERSHINE SMITH, formerly of Rochester, but now Depuly Superintendent of Public Instruction. I presume the appointment will be determined on Saturday next. In the meantime, applications forwarded to either of the three gentlemen named as the appointing power, will receive proper attention. The duties of the office are said to be very pleasant, though laborious, the time three years, and the pay $2,500 a year, and no legitimate stealings. Qualifications—a little knowledge of the law, a high appreciation of "circumlocution," and etc., etc., etc.

The "Contracting Board," organized by the last Legislature, is not exactly a unit. It is supposed to be made up of the State Engineer and Surveyor, the three Canal Commissioners and the Comptroller. Comptroller BURROUGHS and Commissioner WHALLON have not been in the habit of attending the meetings of the Board. They are in the political minority and appear to have little relish for the entertainment of which they would have to partake, if they met with their associates, and so they wisely abstain from attending the sessions. Messrs. FITZHUGH and SEYMOUR and SHERRILL meet for the transaction of business, but the very first motion made the vote stood: aye, 1; no, 1; blank, 1; whereupon Mr. FITZHUGH, seeing "how things were going, took his hat and went ashore," and since that there has been "no quorum present" of the Contracting Board. What prompts the continued absence of Mr. FITZHUGH, is of course the subject of much conjecture. The irreverent liken his position to that of the Saviour on the Cross, and the busy bodies say that he was only "one to two," and that he had no ides of being a cipher. Be all these things as they may, one thing is certain—that the "Contracting Board" is not likely to do the State much service—(I beg pardon, for doing nothing is probably the greatest service it can do the State)—during the present season. It is well that it is so. The law under which it was organized was the one pet idea of a member of the last Legislature, and has all the imperfections which usually attach to measures that are the offspring of men who have no experience or judgment, or capacity to guide them.

Professor MCCOY has withdrawn from the alliance—offensive and defensive—made with DELAVAN & Co. some two or three years since. The Professor also withdraws from the editorial chair of the Prohibitionist, and the Secretaryship of the State Temperance Society. There is, I suppose, nothing indicative in this, except that the "Professor and the Philanthropist," or vice versa, as an enthusiastic admirer used to classified them, have reached the parting of the ways—have arrived where they could only agree to disagree. This is a common result of the Delavan practice. In fact, I believe these two, now being put asunder, have been joined together longer than it is usual for one of the parties to fraternize with anybody.

In the matter of the application of the parties in interest for the claim of $100,000 for the Averill Ore Bed, Judge GOULD has denied the motion for a mandamus to compel the Comptroller to issue his warrant for the amount promised to be paid by the Commissioners of the Land Office. This decision has taken the claimants by surprise—they not anticipating such a result upon the points and arguments presented. But in examining the law under which the claim was made, the Judge found that more than two years had elapsed since its enactments, and as the general statutes outlaw appropriations not paid within two years from the time they are made, the claim for a mandamus was necessarily refused. This is not the first time the payment of an unjust claim upon the State has been barred by the lapse of time. What will be the next dodge it is difficult to conjecture, but it looks now as though the game was about played out, and that the last passage to the State Treasury was plugged up, and the "Averill Claim" seems destined to become one of the stand-bys. It was a very pretty game—very boldly played—and has been lost, not from any want of skill in the gamblers, but simply because their hands would not stand a "call."

The political cauldron begins to bubble slightly, preparatory to a general simmer-down. It is said that all of the present State officers, with the single exception of Comptroller BURROUGHS, are in training for another heat; that Mr. SEYMOUR expects a nomination on the Republican ticket, for a continuance of his present position; that DOESTEMMA expects to be named for Treasurer, as a reward for past services with his German fellow-citizens; and that Senator UPHAM is on the slate for Comptroller. These are the only names at present talked of. Just now the driftwood and scum only appear to have come up, but, the pot once boiling, we have them rising to the surface fast and faster.

All Albany was on the Island yesterday—the attraction being the twenty-mile race between animals known as the Dalton and Taylor horses. The same nags were last Winter driven 100 miles inside of ten hours. Then the Taylor horse was the victor—yesterday the Dalton took the money. The twenty miles was done in 73 minutes—not by any means slow time for two horses who have no known pedigree. Not the least novel part of the performance was the attendance. You might easily have picked out on the grounds a majority of the Canal Board, a quorum (just now somewhat difficult of attainment) of the Contracting Board, two-thirds of the Appraisers, three quarters of the State officers, and I think enough of the Court of Appeals to have given a binding decision. The material part of the body Executive was not visible, but the chances are ninety-nine to a hundred that his Excellency had two thoughts on the race to one on the business of the day—which just now happens to be almost exclusively made up of importunate applications for pardons. In fact, it is said that early in the morning there was heard in the inner office something that sounded very much like the refrain of one of CHRISTIE'S melodies—something about a "hog-tail nag" and a "gray." This is very like gossiping slander, and yet not very unlike the Governor, who has a keen eye for the good points in the making up of horseflesh, and a high appreciation of a good stepper, either in harness or crinoline—especially in crinoline. LEO.

OUR CLAIM AGAINST VENEZUELA.—We find in El Foro, of Caracas, of the 6th of June, the following statement in relation to the claim for indemnity, brought by the United States against the Venezeelan Government, for depriving certain American citizens (Messrs. SHELTON, SAMPSON & TAPPAN, of Boston) of their right of the guano Bird Islands, which they had discovered in an abandoned condition, and had occupied and "annexed." El Foro says: "We have already announced that the Resident Minister of the United States has written to the Government, declaring that if his letter of the 31st of March is not answered forthwith, he will consider his claim as refused, and will withdraw from the country. We can now state, on the best information, that the Minister for Foreign Affairs has replied that he can give no definite answer on the subject, and that if his Excellency should leave Venezuela, the Government will communicate with that of Washington through the medium of its Minister accredited there. It is rumored that, in consequence, Mr. EAMES will leave for Laguayra on Monday, in order to embark on the steamer which has arrived there."

MASONIC CELEBRATION.—The celebration of the One Hundredth Anniversary of St. John's Lodge, No. 2, of F. A. M, of the State of Rhode Island, took place in Providence on Wednesday. Fifteen hundred Masons appeared in regalia. The public exercises were held in the First Baptist Church. An original hymn, composed by Mrs. GEO. F. WILSON, was sung, and an address was delivered by Rev. GEO. M. RANDALL, P G. M. of the G. L. of Massachusetts.

GEN. WOOL'S HEALTH.—We learn, from Dr. MCNAUGHTON, that Gen. WOOL, late last evening, though very low, was hopefully better then during the day. The General is attended by Drs. WORTHEN, THORNE, and WINSLOW—the latter his physician in MEXICO; and, under their united skill, aided by the counsel of Dr MCNAUGHTON, everything within human scope will be done to restore the venerable soldier to his wonted health.—*Albany Eve. DARING ATTEMPT TO ROB ONE OF HERRING & CO.'S Fire and Burglar Proof Patent Champion Safes frustrated.

OFFICE OF J. S. REED & Co., Bankers,
MARION, Ohio, June 6, 1857.

S. C. HERRING & Co.—Gents: Our banking-house was broken open last night, and an unsuccessful attempt made to force open the Safe; gunpowder was used in quantities sufficient to break glass in the bank room, twenty-five feet from the safe, and to displace pictures and furniture, as well as to blow the inside of one of the outside doors into small pieces, but your Hall's Powder Proof Lock resisted all efforts to effect an entrance. The burglars left a very good selection of tools—sledge-hammer, a variety of queer looking chisels, braces and bits, together with levers, &c., &c. It took three good strong men nearly an hour to remove the remains of the wreck, so as to reach the inside door, which, of course, remained unharmed. Considering this latter circumstance, together with the fact that two more doors awaited the thieves, if they had succeeded in opening the outside one, we have no hesitation in ordering a new door, and continuing our confidence in your "Burglar Proof Safes with Hall's Powder Proof Lock." One half the outer door is in good order. Can you make the other from measures in your books, or shall we send the ruins down to you?

We feel under so much obligation to you for the protection your safe has afforded us, that we authorize you to make any use you may choose of this affair.

Very respectfully, J. S. REED & CO.

The subscribers have on hand, for sale, the largest assortment of FIRE AND BURGLAR-PROOF SAFES in the world, guaranteed to be equal to the above, and superior to any other now offered to the public.

OFFICE OF THE ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY.—NEW-YORK, April 2, 1857.—Notice is hereby given, that the Directors of the ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY have resolved to increase the Capital Stock of the Company, from One Hundred and Seventy Thousand Shares, to Two Hundred and Fifty-five Thousand Shares, which new shares will be allotted to the holders of the present stock, at the closing of the books on the 30th June next, and to such persons as may become stockholders by the conversion of Optional Rights, which expire on the 1st day of January, 1858, in the proportion of one share of new stock, to two shares of the old stock.

The Transfer Books will be closed on the 20th day of June next, and reopen on the 1st day of July next.

The holders of the present Stock are required to receive one-third the number of shares to which they may be entitled on the 1st day of July, 1857, and to pay an installment of $30 per share thereon. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds will be issued—one-half convertible into the stock of the Company, on or before the 1st day of February, 1858, and the remainder on or before the 1st day of July, 1858; such installments as may then have been called in, on the present Stock to be paid to the Company at the time of conversion.

Those persons who shall become stockholders by the conversion of the present Optional Rights into Stock, on or before the second day of January, 1858, and after the first day of July next, will be required to receive, and pay for one-third of the new stock to which they may be entitled, at the time of such conversion. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds of the new Stock to which they may be entitled, will be issued to them, of the same tenor as those issued to parties who shall appear as stockholders, at the closing of the books on the 20th June next.

Parties converting Optional Rights will be required to pay to the Company all accrued interest on the installments from the time that interest shall have been paid on the installments to the holders of the present shares.

All stock which is not applied for before the 10th day of July next, and the installment paid thereon, will be forfeited to the Company, together with all rights which attach thereto.

The Directors have resolved to extend the time for the conversion of the existing Optional Rights, which, by their terms, expires on the 1st of January, 1858, so as to include the 2d day of January, 1858.

Information, pertaining to the details of this issue, can be obtained by inquiring at the office of the Company.

Interest will be paid, as usual, upon the Stock of the Company, on the 1st of July next.

AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DIrectors of the METROPOLITAN BANK, held on the 8th inst., it was resolved to increase the Capital Stock, $1,000,000; say, from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000.

Subscription books will be opened at the Banking House, No. 108 Broadway, on the 1st day of July next, and remain open until the 10th of said month. Those holding stock at the close of business on the 25th of June next, will be entitled to subscribe at par, for said million of additional capital, and will receive one share of new stock for every three shares of old. They will also have the right to assign the privilege of subscribing, for which purpose a form will be furnished.

Those who do not pay at that time, are required to pay 50 per cent. on or before the 15th of said July, and the remaining 50 per cent. on or before the 15th day of October next.

Interest at 7 per cent. per annum from the 1st day of July, will be added to all instalments paid after that day, in order to make all the payments equal to a full payment on the said 1st day of July.

For partial payments, scrip receipts will be issued; but whenever a shareholder shall pay the full amount due on his subscription, he shall be entitled, at once, to the usual certificate of full paid stock. All shareholders will have the benefit of the dividend which may be paid in January, 1858.

Shareholders at a distance, wishing to take the stock they will be entitled to, may make their subscriptions to the new stock by sending to this Bank, duly signed and witnessed, a power of attorney.

It is very desirable that such shareholders as intend to avail themselves of the opportunity to subscribe, or who wish to assign their rights to do so to some other parties, shall give notice of their intentions as early as the 1st of July, if practicable, but certainly by the 10th.

It will be necessary for parties to whom such rights shall be assigned, to appear at the Bank, in person, or by attorney, to sign the articles of the Association

OFFICE OF THE HOUSATONIC RAILROAD CO.,
BRIDGEPORT, June 26, 1857.

NOTICE TO BONDHOLDERS.—THE COUpons due on the 1st prox. on the Bonds of this Company will be paid on presentation at the office of KETCHUM, HOWE & CO., in the City of New-York, or at the Treasurer's office, in the city of Bridgeport.

At the annual meeting of the Stockholders in February last it was resolved to pay off in cash $50,000 of the outstanding Bonds falling due Jan. 1, 1858, from the net income of the Road in 1857, and to create a new issue for the balance bearing date Jan. 1, 1857, of $250,000, which, should retain the same perfect security which had been given for the original Bonds of $800,000, of which new issue it was decided to make $200,000 payable Jan. 1, 1859, and $50,000 annually thereafter till Jan. 1, 1863, and thus extinguish the whole mortgage debt within the period prescribed. In pursuance of this resolution the new Bonds have been prepared and already negotiated to the extent of $150,000, chiefly in exchange for the old Bonds, which have been cancelled and charged off, leaving $91,100 yet to be exchanged or otherwise disposed of. Holders of the remainder of the old Bonds are invited to examine the new issue, and to exchange for them their old Bonds, should they feel disposed, and on such terms that the investment will pay them 8 per cent. per annum.

The new Bonds being payable at sundry dates, it will be seen that those who contemplate exchanging will have a better choice now as to the time during which they may wish to continue the investment than by deferring it to a later period.

Exchanges can be made with Messrs. KETCHUM, HOWE & CO., of New-York, or with the undersigned at Bridgeport. H. NICHOLS, Treasurer.

CITY DOGS.

Hydrophobic Opportunities—Improving Notes on the Manners of City Dogs, and the Customs, Ancient and Modern, Concerning them—Of the Pound of Dog's Flesh and how it profits the People and their enterprising Boys—Of a Canine Boarding School and the Ring where they delight to bark and bite on a wager.

A dog, supposed to be mad, ran into Broadway from Duane-street yesterday, and then down Reade-street. Before any one was bitten a stout colored man dealt him a blow that quieted him forever. This is not the first mad dog reported this season hereabouts. One alarmed the neighborhood of Fleet-street, Brooklyn, last Monday, and some month ago we had a horrible story of a man whose arm was torn pitifully by a mad dog. Since the 18th of June all the dead walls have flamed with posters announcing to the boys that the season has come again when stealing dogs may be legitimately reckoned as the largest source of income. In Brooklyn, the posters announce a penalty for allowing dogs to go unmuzzled between the 1st of May and the 1st of October, and authorizing every body to kill them in the street. The law thus enunciated, however, is a dead letter. The dog-catchers find it profitable to steal and indeed to raise pups, for the New-York market. The fifty cents premium offered for delivering them at the Pound, pays pretty well for one's own pup; but if the old lady who owns the pup affectionately and punctually sends me him, the business remunerates the skillful operator very handsomely indeed, besides profiting the public, for he gets the premium over and over again and the redemption money goes to swell the Metropolitan finances, and at last when the old lady makes up her mind to get a muzzle, the hardware trade is encouraged.

Until about fifty years ago, dogs enjoyed the freedom of the City and knew no muzzles. It was about 1807 that our Mayor advised—but there was no ordinance on the subject—that the Captains of Police pay fifty cents for each dog found unmuzzled in the streets and brought to his Station house during July and August. The captains had a good time killing the captives, and the boys enjoyed the recommendation and acted upon it so successfully that several fine fortunes of wealthy citizens are said to have been laid by the means. In 1850 Mayor WOODHULL suggested a more systematic method of keeping dogs down. A regular Dog Bureau was organized. Three squads of men of ten each, with a captain, and under Municipal encouragement, were appointed to look after and kill all badly-behaved dogs.

These office holders would perambulate the streets, armed with big clubs—harmless as dandies, unless a specially "gallus lady" of their acquaintance came dashing along the sidewalk; then they vied with each other in exhibitions of prowess upon poodles, mastiffs, grayhounds—anything that went unmuzzled or without a collar. On figuring up the cost, it came out that the City was paying $2 a head for every one of the dead dogs—considerably more than they were worth as they run, alive.

In 1851, under Mayor KINGSLAND, the first dog-pound of New York was established. The ground appropriated for this interesting purpose was the present site of the Bible House, at the head of the Bowery. The residents in the vicinity protested so earnestly against it, however, that after a few weeks it was removed to the corner of Thirty-fifth-street and Second-avenue, where it stayed during the rest of the year. This first pound was opened on the 25th of June, and remained opened till the 1st of September.

In 1852 the ground was located on the corner of Mangin and Rivington streets. In the years 1853 and 1854 it was at the corner of First-avenue and Thirty-first-street. In 1855 it was removed to the corner of First-avenue and Thirty-sixth street, and in 1856 it went back again to the corner of First-avenue and Thirty first street, where it still remains. It is not a very easy matter to get a good location for a dog-pound. The owner of the present grounds has agreed, however, to let the City have their use so long as Mr. MACKELLAR has the general charge of the establishment, and his varnish factory occupies the adjacent ground. The City is at chargee to the amount of $250 for rent of the ground during the season. The following is a statement of the number of dogs received during the respective dog seasons since the opening of the first pound in 1851:

Total			22,179

From which it will be seen at a glance that the number of dogs drowned has kept pace with the increase of our population and the progress of civilization.

The canine population of the City, as far as we are aware, has been subjected to no census, but the best authorities estimate it at 10,000. This is a large estimate, but it is not far, we suspect, from being correct. Even if it were larger, we should be behind Constantinople, which is populated equally by dogs and Turks. Some travelers say there is a dog and a half to one Turk. It is a matter of little importance, and may be merely a dogged assertion.

Dogs have figured in the world's history from its first era. TOBIT'a dog, the dog of ALCIBIADES, ARBIAN'S dog, are world-famous. In Greece, at the feast of Isis, dogs were so highly estimated that they walked before men in the procession. The Persians represented their god Ormuzd in the form of a dog. To strike a dog was punishable with a thousand lashes, and the killing of one was a capital offence.

The question whether dogs have souls has been seriously debated. KIT NORTH thought they had. Sir WALTER SCOTT inclined to the same opinion. The Indian, according to POPE, concedes the point.

Of what eulogies have dogs been the subject! Their admirers have attributed to them "every virtue under Heaven." Their detractors are few in number, like the growlers against women and children. LAVATER advised his friends to beware of men who disliked bread, music, and the voice of a child. And those who dislike dogs and horses have a kink somewhere, and should be distrusted.

But the old Roman well said "Cave Canem." Only think of a mad dog!

When our Summer pleasures begin—when we retreat into the country, intent upon cool pastures and purling brooks, then commences the dog's misery The Mayor opens the Dog-Pound. Smart, shoeless urchins are abroad before daylight in search of unmuzzled dogs. They well know the trick of enticing dogs from their owners' houses. They can even slip a muzzle, and capture the animal, whose requirements were strictly according to law. For each dog taken to the Pound, the urchin is richer by fifty cents.

Last year, a man named SULLIVAN, dwelling in the lower part of the City, purchased dogs at 25 cents each, from the boys, and when he had 100 collected he would take them in a cart to the dog-pound, and obtain 50 cents for each of them. He was the greatest enemy the dogs had, for he had always from 30 to 40 boys in his service, hunting after them. But there is ever a retributive justice. A mad dog bit SULLIVAN, and he died of hydrophobia.

The dog-pound is now open, and receiving nigh a hundred dogs a day. It is situated at the corner of First-avenue and Thirty-first-street, and is worth a visit. If a stranger asks the nearest urchin what that place may mean, fenced in by a row of planks 15 feet high, he may be answered that dogs are tanned alive there to make their skins water-proof. Listening to the gamut of the indignant dogs, he will almost credit the smart urchin.

But let him investigate that fence, and he will find there a door, and let him examine that door, and he will see "Dog-pound" inscribed on it, and let him knock, and Mr. SAMPSON, the door-keeper, a very polite Municipal Policeman, detailed by the Mayor, will open and admit him. He will find an inclosure about 100 feet long, and 20 wide, rutted up with stalls, in which from 15 to 20 dogs, of all breeds, qualities, sizes and conditions, are confined, "Tray, Blanche and Sweetheart, little dogs and all." Many of these animals are very valuable, and these are generally kept for two or three days, to allow their owners time to come and claim them. Other dogs are only kept till sundown, when, if not reclaimed, and all expenses paid, they are drowned indiscriminately, in a tank prepared for the purpose, and their bodies removed in a cart to the foot of Forty-fifth street, East River, whence they are taken to Barren Island.

The parties bringing these stray dogs to the pound are not paid on the spot, but receive from Mr. SAMPSON a check in the following form:

No.....

.....Brought to the Dog Pound
.....Amount, $....cents.
New-York,.....185
W. SAMPSON, Keeper.
To GEORGE W. MATSELL, Chief of Police.

These checks having been forged, Mr. SAMPSON indorses them with some private mark, agreed upon with Mr. MACKELLAR, of the Chief's Office, who pays the money. This dog-money amounts to no inconsiderable sum in the City's expenses.

The scenes at the dog-pound are not without interest. A carriage will drive up, from which a well-known millionaire will alight, in a state of excitement. He rushes into the pound, and examines the dogs. His has missed a valuable dog, and would redeem him, if brought to the pound, at any cost. The dog is not there. He may come in bye and bye. If so, Mr. SAMPSON will restore him with pleasure. Mr. SAMPSON knows his business and feels his position. How blandly he addresses the old lady whose pet lap-dog disappeared in the morning so mysteriously. He is sorry to drown lap dogs, but he has to do it. It is a bitter duty, but it is duty. The old lady is sure he wouldn't drown her dog. Not if he knows it, he wouldn't, for he is aware of what is due to a lady. Old lady looks at the five score of canine victims, and sheds commiserative tears. Mr. SAMPSON looks as if he could shed tears too, (though he doesn't feel a bit like doing it,) and wishes the old lady's pet would be brought in before she goes, and while she hes that porte-monnaie in her hand. But pet is not brought in, and the old lady departs. It is now gundown and the drowning tank is got ready. It is about 20 feet square, and into it as many dogs as it will hold are tightly packed. Then the cover is shut down and water is turned on. There is a confusion of howls, a gulping, bubbling, choking sound, or conglomeration of sounds, and when the water is drawn off there are fifty dog-corpses ready to be turned into empire animal fertilizer on Barren Island.

The dogs have one friend, at least, in these days of canine persecution and dog-pounding. The curiosity of our reporter was attracted, yesterday, by the following advertisement:

RESPECTABLE DOGS MAY OBTAIN THE best accommodations and board at the Half-way House (formerly the Mosquito Hotel) on the Bergen and Newark road, four miles from Jersey City. The education and training of dogs superintended by accomplished teachers. The best of references given and required. Only dogs of the best breeds need apply. No muzzling in the dog-days.

To the Half-Way House the reporter turned his face. The stage at Jersey City conveyed him to Bergen Four Corners, and thence, along a well macadamized road, he walked to the aforesaid canine boarding quarters, half way between Jersey City and Newark. There was not another house within a mile. It stood in enviable solitude, in the midst of the far-stretching Jersey marshes, a two-story frame building, of a dingy-white color, with its former name, "The Mosquito Hotel," only partially obliterated by a single coat of paint. Here dwelt the dogs' boarding-house-keeper, and the proprietor of the hotel, for such the Half Way House purported to be. Our reporter, avoiding the bar-room, entered the building by its main portico, and found himself face to face with the gentleman in question, Mr. OSCAR SANDFORD.

REPORTER—Good afternoon, Mr. SANDFORD.

Mr SANDFORD—Good afternoon, Sir. Fine weather, after the rain, Sir. From New York, Sir?

REPORTER—Yes, from New-York. I understand that dogs are accommodated with board here during the Summer months?

Mr. SANDFORD—They are, Sir,—respectable dogs,—dogs as has good references. You see, Sir, I have dogs from Boston and Philadelphia, and Washington and Baltimore, that come from the first families and are of the purest breed. Consequentially, I can only accommodate dogs as is used to the best society, and for them my terms is one dollar a week.

REPORTER—Only one dollar! Really, your terms are moderate.

Mr. SANDFORD—Considering the price of provisions, I think I may say they are moderate. I make nothing by them, for the air here is so pure and invigorating that the dogs have wonderful appetites. Two full meals a day, Sir, and as much as they can eat, at each. Then, Sir, for exercise, I takes them out morning and evening for a run, and those as is want to be educated, have their daily lessons in setting and pointing.

REPORTER—What accommodations have you for them, Mr. SANDFORD?

REPORTER—Could I inspect their lodgings?

Mr. SANDFORD, having summoned his wife to attend to the hotel in his absence, incontinently led the way to a large red frame building, having a barn-like appearance, but which had been since its first erection fitted up as a stable. The stalls, however, instead of being tenanted by horses, were occupied by dogs, "of the best breeds," as Mr. SANDFORD insisted. They looked happy enough, wagging their tails with delight, as he addressed a few encouraging words to them. "My family, Sir," he remarked complacently, "they knows and appreciates me. When I lifts my finger there is no need of a whip. I don't approve of corporable punishment. Cultivate the morals and you form the character. When a dog misbehaves himself he loses one of his meals, and gets no straw to lie upon. And ha feels that, Sir, more than fifty lashes."

Mr. SANDFORD proceeded to inform our reporter that his fame was so well established as an educator and trainer of dogs, that he frequently had under his charge animals from most of the principal cities of the Union. They came to him raw, uncouth, green, and silly dogs. He returned them to their owners polished and urbane, fitted to mix on equal terms with the elite of the canine world, yet not deficient in pluck and physique, and the noble art of self-defence.

REPORTER—Then you have dogs under your care, Winter as well as Summer, I presume, Mr. SANDFORD?

Mr. SANDFORD—Yes, Sir, and fine warm beds I gives them in the Winter. And so fat as they gets! That dog there, Sir, in the corner, I had him last Winter, and he got so fat he couldn't look out of his eyes.

REPORTER—But I should call that a fault.

Mr. SANDFORD—Right, Sir, you are right, but it was an old lady's whim. He was her son's dog, Sir, who was blowed up on the Mississippi, and the pride that she took in him was delightful. She was afraid to keep him at home, because he would bite the servant girl's heels, but she sent him to me with a charge to let him eat as much as he pleased, and when he slept never to wake him.

More familiar and improving conversation our reporter enjoyed with Mr. SANDFORD. He found that not only for educational purposes were dogs intrusted to that gentleman's charge, but that, as the advertisement implied, they were sent to the Half Way House merely for Summer board and lodging. Their owners were usually parties living in the City, who, disliking to have their favorites subjected for three consecutive months to the torturing constraint of a muzzle, and still less willing to risk the chances of the dog-pound, transferred them out of danger's reach and civic temptations, to those innocent delights of country life, of which the pastoral poets have sung so charmingly. O sua si bona norint—those dogs of the best breeds! At 6 A. M., they take their matutinal meal, and enjoy a delicious run to Snake Hill, two miles distant. They walk leisurely back, diverging at their pleasure after birds, muskrats, and other little game. Then they retire to their straw and take a nap. Afterwards they receive company, the travelers between Newark and Jersey City, who pull up at the Half-Way House, and patronize the bar, as much for the inspection of "the best breeds" as for the brandy. Then comes another run over the adjacent country, followed by the evening meal, and a night's rest upon the "fine, clean straw," with such dreams as only happy, well-ordered dogs can dream. How preferable, we thought, to the indignity of the muzzle, and the terrible imminence of the dog-pound, with the inevitable death by drowning, if the poor animals are unclaimed before sundown. When we keep a dog, he shall board in the Summer at OSCAR SANDFORD'S.

We have not done with dogs yet. In so large a canine population there must be rowdy dogs, Plug-Uglies, Awful Gardners, Lewis Bakers, Yankee Sullivans. The best place to find this race of dogs is at HARRY JENNINGS' quarters, No. 49 Madison-street. Noted dogs there defy noted dogs to mortal combat. The canine duello is there regulated according to the canine sense of honor.

The place is called "Sportsman's Hall." It is a kind of Walhalla for defunct heroes. Dogs that have distinguished themselves and died, stand stuffed and imperishable on its shelves, mummied for a future age that shall treat New York as we have treated ancient Thebes. Wise men of that distant day will say that Americans worshiped dogs. How mistaken they will be! It is the Bowery boy's worship, indifferently offered to an Alderman of the First Ward, or a fierce beast of a bull-dog. Rowdy, brutal, beastly pluck is all that is demanded, whether in dog or Alderman. Your Bowery or Greenwich-street rowdy falls down and worships the beastly pluck.

So we are not surprised in finding in this place of HARRY JENNINGS, any number of the worst fighting breed of dogs. That the premises should be crowded with ferrets, rat eaters, musk rats and raccoons, is quite in keeping with their reputation. The source of astonishment lies here, that Mr. JENNINGS should be patronized by our best merchants, our foremost men of wealth, dwellers in the Fifth-avenue, and kindred aristocratic neighborhoods, and yet he is.

Mr. JENNINGS is the successor of Yankee SULLIVAN in the dog-fighting business. SULLIVAN combined sparring with dog sport, and made money, Mr. JENNINGS, in combination with the Mayor, is making money. Until 1856, there was no law against dog-fighting, and although he has been once fined $25 for permitting canine antagonism on Sundays, Mr. JENNINGS quotes the authority of Mayor WOOD, and rightly despises the law. Indeed, says he, if a man is going to keep the laws now-a-days he can't make a living, no how.

The dogs at JENNINGS' are not such dogs as OSCAR SANDFORD would receive. They constitute the vile scum and ultra canine rowdyism of the City. If dogs could be elected to either branch of the Common Council, they are the dogs that would be elected. They would snarl and bite beautifully in the Aldermanic chamber. They would mangle each other admirably in the Board of Councilmen.

In the meantime, Mr. HARRY JENNINGS keeps dogs at the cost of three shillings a day, and fights dogs at so much per ticket for admission. He is also great on rats. He breeds his own rats, raising eleven litters a year. When his stock runs low he gets any quantity he is in need of on board of Liverpool emigrant ships. Fast young men, wishing to test the powers of their dogs, can buy rats at a shilling a head of Mr. JENNINGS. A few dollars will yield an evening's entertainment.

Mr. JENNINGS' house of entertainment for dog and man is not the only one of the kind in the City. A Mr. MCLOUGHLIN is known in the same line, in Tenth-street, between First and Second Avenues. Here the dogs are more aristocratic. The dogs are better bred than those of JENNINGS, and behave decently. A dog fought here last January five hours and twenty-seven minutes, and only yielded his valor with his breath. He died on the spot like a true hero, and is embalmed in a glass case, an example to ambitious puppies.

But of dogs, the history is not written, the work of DIBBS, MAYO and FRANK FORESTER notwithstanding. Of City dogs, in the meanwhile, the majority escape the dog-pound, and yet grow up ignorant of the country. Their means being circumscribed, they cannot board at Mr. SANDFORD'S. When the dog-days are ended, and hydrophobia is no longer feared, they exhibit their want of education almost at every stoop or store door, snapping and snarling like ill-conditioned curs as they are. A tax of $50 on each dog kept in the City, rigorously collected, would be a good ordinance, which we commend to the attention of our legislators. The dog-pound would scarcely be needed, and cases of hydrophobia would be rare indeed.

PURDY'S NATIONAL THEATRE.—The great French military drama of "Bonaparte, or The Siege of Moscow" has thus far proved highly successful on each representation. LONG ISLAND.

DEATH WHILE UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF CHLOROFORM.—A little girl 11 years old, residing with her parents in South Brooklyn, a few days ago got a tamarind stone lodged in her throat. A physician called in to extract it decided that he must use the knife. To render the operation less painful, chloroform was given, and while under the influence of it the patient died. The child was buried, and it was not until after the funeral that the Coroner was called upon to investigate the case. This he will probably do to-day.

SERIOUS AFFRAY BETWEEN TWO HATTERS IN BROOKLYN.—Yesterday afternoon, a collision took place between two hatters, named JAMES MCDONNELL and THOMAS MORRELL, in PRENTICE & Co.'s hat manufactory, at the corner of Raymond and Bolivar streets, Brooklyn, resulting in serious injury and probable death of MORRELL.

It appears that the parties above named, with others, were at work at the same vat, and while thus engaged MORRELL and JOSEPH URELL, another workman, commenced joking MCDONNELL, and continued so long that he got out of temper and used very harsh and improper language to MORRELL, who, in return, struck MCDONNELL in the face with his fist.

Already much excited, the blow made MCDONNELL frantic, and he dealt MORRELL a blow with a roller, (used by hatters in the manufacture of hats and is made of heavy wood, large in the centre and tapering to an inch in diameter at each end,) hitting him upon the left temple. MORRELL staggered under the effect of the blow, but soon gathered himself again and seized MCDONNELL and struck him several times in the face, when he (MORRELL) fell senseless to the floor. He was immediately taken to the office, where every effort was made to restore him to consciousness, but without avail. A physician was called in, who advised that MORRELL be at once taken to the City Hospital in Raymond-street. This was done about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and from that time up to a late hour last night he remained insensible, notwithstanding every effort was made to arouse him. At last accounts there was little or no hope of his recovery.

Soon after the affray, the injury having been considered a serious one, Deputy Sheriff CUNNINGHAM arrested MCDONNELL, and committed him to the County Jail, to await the result of the injuries to MORRELL. MCDONNELL is a married man, and about 20 years of age. MORRELL is 22 years old, and has no family.

Previous to this affair, we understand, both of the parties have been on the best of terms—indulging frequently in innocent jokes, and occasionally "sky larking," but always remaining friends.

This is the third case recently occurring in this City, where a collision between friends, under a temporary excitement, has resulted seriously to one of the parties.

RECOVERY OF THE BODY OF POLICEMAN STETSON.—About 7 o'clock last evening, as a son of Mr. GRAY, keeper of the Brooklyn Baths, was rowing across the East River, in the track of the Fulton Ferry boats, and near the Brooklyn shore, he discovered two bodies floating in the water. He secured one, but on account of the current, was unable to obtain the other. Upon reaching the Brooklyn shore he notified constable BIRDSALL, who took possession of the body, and upon examining it found it to be that of WM. STETSON, of the Seventh Ward Police, New-York, who suddenly disappeared the latter part of last week.

Upon a cursory examination of the body in the water, no marks of violence can be seen. His star, pocket-book and money were found upon his person. Coroner REDDICO will hold an inquest at the Dead House in Canton street, this morning.

THE SOUTH BROOKLYN STABBING CASE.—Coroner RENNING continued the investigation yesterday as to the circumstances attending the death of FRANCIS DALAMORE, stabbed at the corner of Atlantic and Hicks street, on the 13th inst., by JAMES DUNN. The Jury have ascertained the cause of death, from several medical witnesses, and are now trying DUNN for the offence. Several witnesses to this end were examined yesterday, when they adjourned until Monday next, upon the Coroner promising to bring on more witnesses.

THURSDAY, June 25—P M.

The offerings at some of the large Banks have increased this week, in anticipation of the wants of the importers in making their July entries, and outside Money-lenders are also having a fair selection of paper, at 8@9 ₱ cent. for prime, and 10@12 ₱ cent. for fair or second choice names. There is more actual disposition evinced to buy Stocks at the very reduced prices to which a large portion of the share list has been borne down, and the private banking houses are finding good employment for Money at call. These facts, in turn, have flattened the rates of Foreign Exchange, and bills on London rule dull at 109½ ₱ cent., the proportion of sellers to buyers having been suddenly reversed within the week past. As some interest is felt as to the probable course of the Sub-Treasury account for July, under the new tariff and under the enlarged scale of Government expenditure after the new fiscal year sets in, we make reference to the same month last year, when the amount of Foreign Goods which went into consumption, was $22,757,000 upon which the average duty under the old tariff, was 22 ₱ cent. The duties paid amounted to $5,510,000. The Sub-Treasury increased during the month $1,736,000. This season, in July, it is possible—though, from all we can gather from the importers, scarcely probable—that the direct entries for consumption, and the net withdrawals from the accumulation in the public stores, may reach $15,000,000, or double the business of last July. This sum, at an average duty under the new tariff of 16 ₱ cent., would throw $7,200,000 into the Sub-Treasury, and allowing for the increase in the probable drafts made by the Government on New-York during the month, the net accumulation in the office here may be $3,000,000, as against $1,736,000 last July. But this calculation is irrespective of the understood disposition on the part of the Secretary of the Treasury to render the burden upon the money market, from the extra duties arising from the heavy withdrawal of goods from public stores, as light as possible. We have presented the least favorable view of the question for the Money market, desiring to suggest caution, rather than to hold out undue encouragement. Our conviction is that no serious embarrassment to the banking movement is to ensue, though dearer rates for money may possibly obtain, if the demand for Dry Goods from the jobbers, and the consumption of Sugars, which constitute an important item in the present accumulation in the public stores, should chance to be very active. As the crops of the West promise well, an early trade may set in before the close of the next month. The Sub-Treasury received to-day $13,454; disbursed $100,635 and held at the close $11,177,305.

The Stock Market was active to-day, and the total business on the share list about 30,000 shares. The seller's options in Erie and Reading were again large, and were made at such differences, as to keep down any large advance on the cash sales. The fluctuations in the latter from yesterday afternoon, were, on Reading, from 70⅜ down to 69¾ in the forenoon, and up to 70⅝ at and after the Second Board; and in Erie from 28⅝ to 28¾, and up as high as 29⅛, closing 29@29⅛. New-York Central left off firm at 80@80¼, and Toledo advanced to 55 ₱ cent. Illinois Central gave way 2 ₱ cent., and Rock Island 2 ₱ cent. To Michigan Southern a further advance of 1¼ ₱ cent. was established. The Board of Directors are now in session in this City, and the accommodation of the difficulties or incompatibility in the exclusive management, which have unfortunately been too much talked about outside the office, for the proper appreciation of the Stock, is confidently anticipated. The general market closed firm.

Mr. JOSEPH K. EDGERTON, Vice-President of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Road has opened an office for the business of the Company in this City, at No. 37 William-street and has received the additional appointment of Transfer Agent for New-York. He will disburse the July interest on all the Bonds of the old Companies constituting the line, and on such of the City and County Bonds connected with it as are named in his advertisement on another page.

These are the fair approximate figures for the main line of the Milwaukee and Mississippi Road, from the Lake to the Mississippi River, 198 miles, (including a detour of 8 miles to Janesville,) and they are here repeated that the bond and stockholders may not be inconsiderately deceived or alarmed by the mendacious assertion of the New-York Herald that the work cannot earn even the interest on its funded debt. The Company, with the aid of a subscription of $300,000 from the city of Milwaukee, are building the Southern Wisconsin Branch of 35 miles, upon which a recent issue of $350,000 first-mortgage bonds have been made. The interest charge upon this, and the city subscription, and the sinking fund of the former, amount to $52,500 ₱ annum.

An exciting as well as bitter personal controversy is now going on at Milwaukee, touching the Land Grant projects of the La Crosse and the Fond du Lac Companies—more especially that of the La Crosse Company—provoked, in part, no doubt, by the recent unfair treatment of the Milwaukee stock in this City, by certain parties prominent in the La Crosse Road. To this controversy the Herald has made itself a party, not so much in defence of the La Crosse grant, the manner and means of procuring which have been brought into question, and boldly arraigned, where the facts of the case ought to be best understood, but as an aggressive assailant of the Milwaukee and Mississippi Stock, which has been recently and heavily short at the Brokers' Board. In other words a side issue has been made, to direct attention from the main question, in the pursuit of which the Herald threatens, in its usual way, sundry startling developments concerning the Milwaukee management. Whatever the nature of these may be, the Herald had best hurry up its documents. If personal in their character, they ought to be, and probably will be, met by the parties implicated; this was the proper course adopted by the friends of the La Crosse interest, under similar circumstances. But if impeaching the ability of the property to pay its own way and a fair dividend to the stockholders, we should like to have the opportunity of correcting, if need be, the figures which have heretofore been officially or otherwise presented, as well as any mistaken opinion which may have been drawn from them.

THE STREET COMMISSION.

The Matter of D. D. Conover and Charles Develin.

Argument on the Legal Questions Involved.

Speeches of D. Dudley Field and the Corporation Counsel.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.—June 26.
Before Hon. Justice Peabody.

In the matter of the application of Daniel D. Conover to compel the delivery of the Books, Papers, &c., of the Street Commissioner's Office.—This case was continued yesterday according to adjournment. The room was densely crowded with attentive audience. At 11 o'clock the Court was opened, and Mr. Field, counsel for Mr. Conover, proceeded to open, in substance as follows:

MR. FIELD'S ARGUMENT.

Mr. Field said that the circumstances of the case were not difficult to perceive, notwithstanding the contradictions of the witnesses. On the 12th of the month Mr. Conover received from the Governor, representing the sovereignty of the State, his appointment of Street Commissioner for the unexpired term of the late Mr. Taylor. The office was then vacant, and there was no one then in office upon whom he could have served his process, in order to take possession. He, therefore, executed his bond and sureties, and took his oath of office in due form of law. It was the duty of the Mayor to approve the bond, as sureties were acceptable, and in due form, if the appointment was legal. They were correct, yet that functionary shut himself up in his office, and refused to see Mr. Conover. Although the Mayor testified that he had seen no one that day but the Chief of Police, yet a respectable person has testified that he had meanwhile seen several other persons look out furtively as if to see if Conover was still waiting. Mr. Conover not being able to see the Mayor, filed the bond in due form, and proceeded peaceably, with a few friends, to the Street Commissioner's office, and took actual possession. He remained there for the whole day, and did the same on Monday; remaining ready to perform the duties of the office, and was acknowledged as its legal head by all the clerks, with the exception of Mr. Turner. At four o'clock of that day he was forcibly turned out by a mob of men, under whose orders, however, remained still to be ascertained. He thought that the evidence on Thursday well illustrated the "seven men in buckram." The Mayor and the Sheriff both denied any complicity with the expulsion, and Mr. Bennet had to father the whole of it, and he now testifies that he did it on his own responsibility, but Turner testifies that he did it very reluctantly by the orders of the Mayor.

Mr. Conover returned to the office again the next morning, performed an official act, and remained attending to all the duties of the Street Commissioner until he was again expelled by force. The City Hall was besieged all that day, and the crowd of hungry contractors which surrounded the Hall of Records was wonderful to behold. At five o'clock the Mayor and Aldermen appointed Mr. Develin, and, notwithstanding the alleged possession of the books and furniture of the office by the Sheriff, he took possession as quietly as he would of a vacant lot in a wilderness.

The next thing seen was Mr. Develin refusing to admit Mr. Conover to the room; and this possession, obtained by violence and fraud, was set up as showing the title of Mr. Develin to defeat Mr. Conover. If his opponents would set him on the right of the Government to make the appointment he would know where they stood, but when they set up the title by right of possession, he should claim that a possession got by violence could afford no ground for a title to be recognized by any court.

They had, however, somewhat changed their tactics, and Mr. Develin swore that the documents were in the possession of the Sheriff. The Sheriff and his deputy, however, had completely refuted this, by testifying that they never levied on the books, and they also denied that they ever told Mr. Develin that fact.

In respect to the course which Mr. Develin and his advisers have pursued, he would say a word. Instead of appealing to the law and using legitimate means, they had used force to eject Mr. Conover;—they had taken the quo warranto into their own hands, and then told Mr. Conover to appeal to the law for protection.

THE LEGAL CONCLUSIONS.

Mr. Field claimed that Mr. Conover was rightly appointed Street Commissioner by the Governor; or rather, he continued, was appointed as a person to fill the duties of the Street Commissioner's office "ad interim," for such was the language of the act.

Mr. Field proceeded to argue the case in accordance with his points, as published in the TIMES of the 24th instant. In connection with the second point, (which is, that Mr. Conover, having been duly appointed to the office, is entitled to an order for the delivery to him of the office books and papers) under section 66, 1 R. S., 336, (4th Ed.) remarked that his opponents seemed to think that they could not at that proceeding try the title to the office. He admitted that this was not a proceeding to try the title to an office; the order his Honor might make would not be conclusive. Mr. Develin, if Mr. Conover received the books, might bring a quo warranto, and try the question again as to the title to the office. His Honor was only to try the question of the present possession of the office. He referred to Whiting's case, in 2d Barb. 518, which was a similar suit, and there Judge Edmonds put Whiting in and Childs out of the possession of the books and papers of the office. The question as to whether the Governor could appoint the Street-Commissioner was very similar to the question which he had argued in the Metropolitan Police case, and he would not repeat it. He also referred to the matter of Stephens in 5 Hills, p. 616, also to 7 Barb. 31.

He thought that the right to the office was complete on the appointment from the Governor. After the appointment, yet before the bonds were filed, the Governor could not appoint another person. The only provision was, that Mr. Conover should not enter on the duties of the office until he had so filed his bonds. In 1 R. S., 219, it provided that the officer, before entering on the duties of the office, should take the oath, &c., thus supposing that his appointment was complete, as an appointment, before the bond was filed.

The oath was properly taken and filed by Mr. Conover with the Mayor. By the Charter (sec. 30,) it was the duty of the Common Council to provide for the taking care of the bond of the Street Commissioner. This they did not do, and, therefore, Mr. Conover was not bound to give any bond at all. The act providing for this matter, he understood, was passed by the Common Council on Thursday evening, but at the time in question there was no provision for its reception.

But if the bond was required, the approval of the Mayor was only a certificate that it was filed, and was not necessary for its validity. But supposing that it was required, then the approval by the Mayor was merely directory, or a condition precedent or subsequent to the exercise of the duties of the office. He maintained that it was not a condition precedent, but, at most, merely consequent. But further, if the condition was precedent to any action of the official duties, his answer was that Mr. Conover was in possession of the office, and was intruded upon by Mr. Develin, and the Court had no authority to look into the fact of his having taken the oath or not. Mr. Develin being a mere intruder, had no right to demand such an examination. The question of the intrusion was the only one now at issue.

Suppose, said he, that the Commission had read so as to provide that he should be the officer in question, if he would obtain the consent of the Mayor. Now, if the Mayor should obstruct the performance of this condition, then the condition is gone. The Mayor did refuse thus to do, and therefore lost the condition, even if it ever existed. In support of this view, he cited 3 Hill, 570; 8 Cow., 297; 12 Wend. 589.

While the Legislature could not take away from the City the right of the electors to elect the officers, it might fill the vacancy ad interim.

MR. BUSTEED'S ARGUMENT.

Mr. Busteed, for Mr. Develin, then arose. He agreed, with Mr. Field, that the circumstances of the case were easily perceived, but differed from him entirely in his conclusions of law and fact. He proceeded to state the fact of the filling of the office, essentially as detailed by Mr. Field. He claimed that the office was not rendered vacant by the death of Mr. Taylor, but was immediately, on his death, filled by the Deputy Commissioner.

The only question of public interest in this case was as to the right of the people to have the work of the office done by some one. It was not whether, upon a quo warranto, Conover would succeed or Develin would succeed, but whether, meanwhile, the duties of the office should be discharged.

He reverted to the question of who used force in expelling Mr. Conover. Mr. Conover, armed with the supposed commission, went to the office with a dozen or two persons. What should he wish this force for if he had the authority of the highest officer of the State? It was said that the chief title of Mr. Develin, was his possession, by force, of the office.

This was false. Mr. Develin rested his claim on the fact that Conover never had any possession, and that the Governor had no more right to appoint him than had his Honor the Judge, nor half as much. He stated that the Sheriff levied on the furniture of the Street Commissioner, "et cetera." Now, he had supposed, when drawing the affidavit, that the "et cetera" referred to the books and papers thereof, and thus the statements of his opponents as to the real facts were explained. He thought that the proposition of the counsel, that Mr. Develin should vacate his office and bring a quo warranto,—thus violating his oath of office,—was comfortably cool when the thermometer was 500 in the shade, but they could not advise him to accept it.

Mr. Busteed then proceeded with his argument, taking his ground according to the points which were published in Thursday's TIMES.

He reiterated in various shapes, too prominent point of his opponent's argument. The Governor had a right to make the appointment. Why did he consult Mr. Nicholas Hill and other lawyers, as to his power to make the appointment? If in doubt as to his power, why did he not consult the Attorney-General? That gentleman was appointed by the State to advise with the Governor in doubtful matters. Why was he not consulted? Mr. Field said he was in the West when the Governor wanted him. Yes, he took care not to be in the East. The Governor had no power to appoint a municipal officer, and he did not dare to do so till he had consulted lawyers who were themselves uncertain what they should advise. Mr. Busteed made a speech two hours long, but advanced nothing particularly new. The Governor had no right to appoint Mr. Conover. That was all Mr. Busteed said in many-sided language. When he finished, the Court adjourned to 11 o'clock this morning, to hear Mr. James T. Brady.

WASHINGTON, Friday, June 26.

The Interior Department has received information that the Superintendents of the several branches of the Pacific Wagon Road are prosecuting the work with energy, and will hurry its completion.

The subject of the Overland California Mail was again considered by the Cabinet to-day. The points in the route having been determined, it now lies with the Postmaster-General to make the contract.

The President will leave for Bedford Springs about the middle of July. On his return he will remove to his Summer residence, the Soldier's Home, four miles from Washington.

Mr. WILLIAM R. HARLEY has been appointed Indian Agent for New-Mexico.

"A New Era in Shipping"—British Filibusterism—The Naval Courts of Inquiry, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 25, 1857.

The article in the NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES, headed "A new Era in Shipping," has created universal attention, and our shipping merchants throughout the Atlantic States must open their eyes to its truths. Mr. T. S. MORT, a wealthy and influential merchant of Sidney, New South Wales, in a late speech said, in speaking of the present and future progress of ocean steam communications, "that the time had arrived for commencing operations for the opening of the Panama route." It might appear paradoxical to recommend the opening of what many might deem an opposition line; but what he contended for was a line of continuation, the one line feeding the other.

By means of a through line and through tickets, places might be secured for any part of the world. A traveler might purchase a through ticket in Sidney, proceed thence to Melbourne, thence to India; from India to the Continent of Europe and the United Kingdom. The Cunard Company were already in coöperation with their new mail company, and conveyed the Australian mails from Alexandria to Southampton. Could not their coöperation be secured to effect punctual steam communication between New-York and Panama? By thus encircling the Earth, they would soon get rid of subsidies altogether, and seas would be covered with steamships thick as stepping stones from shore to shore, multiplying trade and commerce beyond all present comprehension. Of the extensive trade of America with India and China, it was unnecessary to speak. He would merely remind them that if a system of through tickets were adopted, Australia would be adopted in this important line of the maritime interests of the United States."

Thus, even in the most distant colonies of Great Britain, exertions are being made to compete with our commerce, and it is now proposed to open a line from Sidney to Panama, to connect with another line of British steamers from New York on the Atlantic side. Certain it is, if our merchants do not bestir themselves, the prophecy will be carried out, that British steamships will cover the seas as thick as stepping stones from shore to shore.

The news by the last steamer, that England is disposed to abandon territory, instead of the desire imputed to her by Americans for the acquisition of new territory in every quarter of the globe, excites a quiet smile among the diplomats here. That Great Britain entertains for a moment the abandonment or relinquishment of the Falkland Islands, or the Island of Labuan, off the north coast of Borneo, as has been intimated, is not to be conceived for a moment. Her late seizure of territory in India, and the little island commanding the Red Sea, does not look much like relinquishing her fillibustering propensities.

It is believed here that New-Granada offered to Great Britain the island spoken of as having been ceded to her, in satisfaction of all claims, but that England modestly refused!

The Navy Department, in order to expedite the trials before the Courts of Inquiry, has issued an order that if officers who have been summoned as witnesses do not report within a reasonable time after the mailing of the subpœnas, they shall not be allowed their traveling expenses. It would be still better if the Secretary of the Navy would establish two or three more Courts, and thus give the officers who are waiting their trials, and kept here on great expenses, a chance to learn their fate, and relieve themselves of their poverty-stricken condition.

Universal complaint is made by the garroted officers, and with great justice too, that instead of providing for the trial of the "Star-Chamber Council of Fifteen," who promoted themselves at such an enormous sacrifice and cost to the country, the most of them have been rewarded by the Secretary of the Navy for their inquisitorial deeds. For instance, Commander DUPONT, who promoted himself to a captaincy, is rewarded by the magnificent command of the steam-frigate Minnesota, and has the honor conferred upon him of carrying Mr. REED, our Minister to China, to the Celestial Empire. Lieutenant MISSROON, who promoted himself to a commander, is given the command of a fine sloop-of-war, and so with many others who were of the Star-Chamber Council. It is said a bill will be introduced at the next session of Congress ordering the trial of this Council of Fifteen, and thus put them on an equal footing with the suffering officers of the Navy. Such a bill would, no doubt, pass unanimously.

GEO. W. HAMER, of Ohio, a promising young lawyer, who recently died at Harper's Ferry, was the son of the late gallant General HAMER, who fell at the battle of Monterey, in Mexico. Mr. HAMER was a young gentleman of a high order of talent, and was universally esteemed for his noble and generous qualities. He was the youngest delegate to the Democratic National Convention at Cincinnati, and was a warm adherent of Mr. BUCHANAN. UNO.

GOVERNOR WALKER DENOUNCED—DIFFICULTY IN SELECTING A CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Thursday, June 25.

The Georgia Democratic State Convention met at Milledgeville on Wednesday. Resolutions were passed in favor of the Cincinnati platform, expressing confidence in Mr. BUCHANAN, and condemning Governor WALKER's policy in Kansas.

The resolution in relation to Governor WALKER reads as follows:

Resolved, That the address of Gov. WALKER, in prescribing the terms on which Congress should admit Kansas into the Union, and in attempting to dictate to the people as to the submission of their Constitution for ratification, and to what class of persons, constitutes a presumptuous interference in matters over which he has no legitimate control, and that the same address, in expressing the official opinion that Kansas will become a Free State, and in presenting arguments to support that side of the question, is a gross departure from the principles of nonintervention and neutrality which were established by the Kansas bill, and that the Convention has full confidence that Mr. BUCHANAN will manifest fidelity to the principles which carried him into office, by recalling Gov. WALKER.

After twenty unsuccessful ballotings for Governor, the name of Mr. GARDNER was withdrawn.

On the last ballot taken, Mr. IVERSON received 170 votes, and Mr. LAMAR 174. This result created great excitement, and a Committee of conference was appointed.

Worms on Our City Trees.

The rapidity with which all vegetation has advanced this season has been very favorable to the appearance of our City trees. Though in the City Hall Park, and in a few of the finest streets of Brooklyn, there are exceptions, generally they are unusually free from worms. In a more genial season they make their appearance at the same time with the young leaves. This year a week only was necessary to transform the bare limbs into a condition of full verdancy, outstripping the more tardily hatched worm, and speedily not only arriving at full size, but offering a more mature, tougher, less inviting and less succulent leaf to these destructive parasites.

There are but few trees fit for a city street. The linden or basswood, once a favorite, is almost entirely discarded, because it is a special favorite of the worms. Bond-street was shaded by them once, but save for scarcely two weeks in the early Spring, they added little to its ornament; and these worms soiling down to the walk below, very effectually prevented nervous ladies and more brawny men from passing. The linden is still to be found, however, in our Parks, and may be distinguished in a week or two by its eaten leaves, as also by the profusion of dead flies under and around it. The leaves secrete a saccharine poison very tasteful to the fly, but fatal in its effects. The elm and maple are also favorites with the worms; less so is the silver leafed poplar. Still, when these worms are very rife, they are likely to be denuded, as is also the horse chestnut. The poplar, however, is objectionable from the numerous offsets it throws up from the roots, injuring all the adjacent ground for grass or cultivation. The horse-chestnut is gnawed by horses, stoned by boys, for both flowers and fruit, and generally much disfigured and stunted in its development. The catalpar is liable to similar objections. The balm of Gilead showers down clouds of white, fine, everywhere-penetrating seed-tufts in the Spring—a serious objection. The willows are short-lived, injured by boys to make whistles from, wormy in root and branch—easily blown over, and rarely a proper tree for a city. The ailanthus is speedy-growing, putting out its leaves late in Spring and dropping them early in Fall, thus shading only when a shade is desired, is extremely beautiful in the pride of its gaily-colored seed-pods in the early Autumn, immaculate in its cleanliness, not dropping dead leaves, exfoliated bark or the petals of flowers. It is, moreover, so free from vermin that the belief is that a worm is never seen upon it. This is not quite true, but the worm sometimes found on it is not very destructive in its habits, nor is very offensive to man, several of them in small groups clinging fast to the under side of the leaf, and leaving it only for another when entirely destroyed. It is freer from worms, however, than any other City tree, and but for the faint odor of the female blossom, which is offensive to some, would remain as it once was, the first favorite of all.

The Buttonwood is a favorite of caterpillars.

In this City the "measure worm" is the only one that is a serious nuisance. It belongs to a large tribe of worms that receives its name from its method of progression, apparently trying how many times its length will go in a certain distance. When detached by the wind or any jar from a branch, it swings down by a strong silk which it spins, and then, if undisturbed, may be seen climbing back by it to the original position. At a given period it lets itself down to the ground, and then goes through its change, no one being seen on the trees lately so full. In a week or two it emerges as a white feathery miller. Both male and female are winged, and both seek the end of the topmost branches of the tree, and there the eggs are deposited by the female. The eggs may also be found all around the branches lower down, and the stem of the tree, especially if on account of deficient foliage the worm was liable from insufficient food. The eggs are numerous, placed in regular order, and tightly glued to the bark and covered by a glazing impervious to water. These eggs remain here unchanged until the next Spring.

Till two years since, these worms were supposed to be identical with the "canker worm" of New-England, and many methods effectual with the latter were tried in vain to destroy these. The trees were tarred, encircled with gutters filled with oil, &c. The canker worm is smaller than the measure worm, and after emerging from the chrysalis, which it does on the warm days in the last of Fall and first of Spring, the female is a wingless grub that laboriously climbs up the stump of the tree and seeks the end of the limb whence the young sprouts will spring. The male, a white miller, finds her while climbing, and fecundates the eggs which are deposited at the end of the journey. Both soon after die.

By means of the oil troughs, the tar, &c., the female is destroyed and the male is unimportant. But of the measure worm both male and female are winged, both fly to the top of the trees, as may be seen by any one in the course of a few weeks, on all of the trees which they frequent.

The tarred bands and lead gutters are evidently useless, and there is no effectual way for destroying worms unless the chrysalis is killed by carefully plowing or digging all around under the trees infested, or by means of swine, (throwing around a few handfuls of corn as an encouragement,) or less surely by destroying the miller, by means of a small bonfire lit immediately after dark in the vicinity and into which they will fly.

Another, but less devastating worm, which however injures evergreen and other harder-leaved plants, is called the leaf-worm. This insect gnaws out pieces of leaves and uniting them to one another, forms a sort of cone-shaped house, which it carries about with it, and into which it withdraws when it is disturbed. Of this collection of leaves it forms a cocoon which it suspends to the end of the highest twigs by an astonishingly firm attachment, requiring no little strength to tear it from its fastening. These cocoons are an inch long, easily seen in the Fall when the leaves are gone, and the tree may be readily rid of this species of worm by picking each cocoon off and burning it.

There are other worms found on city trees and vines, but not numerously, and they are comparatively unimportant. Among them is a large green or brown worm, for all these worms are colored according to the food upon which they live, having numerous colored eyes, and a horn upon the tail. The lovers of the beautiful will be rewarded by gathering and feeding them for a few days and watching till they emerge from the chrysalis, beautiful butterflies.

POLICE MATTERS.—The Police Commissioners transacted only private business yesterday and made no new appointments. Four of the Municipal force of the Second Ward, viz: KLINE, ORPHEUS, WINTINGHAM and TRACY, went over yesterday to the Metropolitan Board, and four more from the same Ward are expected to do the same to-day.

FATAL FALL.—At 2 o'clock yesterday morning a woman named MARY JANE PESCOTT, while laboring under the influence of liquor, fell from the stoop of No. 21 Baxter street, to the side-walk, injuring her head so seriously that she died in less than half an hour afterwards.

FIRE.—A fire was discovered under the stoop of the Pagoda, at Clifton, S. I., yesterday morning, and put out before any serious damage was done. Supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

MARINE MATTERS.

The largest yacht yet built in this country has been constructed for Mr. JOHN D. JOHNSON, of the New-York Yacht Club. She was built at Setauket, L. I., by JOSEPH HOWLAND, under the superintendance of Capt. THOS. B. HAWKINS, of Port Jefferson; she is to be schooner rigged, and the sails will be made by R. H. WILSON, of Port Jefferson, who made the sails of the yacht America. She is to be fitted in New-York. She is christened The Wanderer, and is of the following dimensions: Length of keel, 95 feet; breadth of beam, 23 feet; depth of hold, 10 feet; length over all, 114 feet, and she is 250 tons burthen. She gives promise of great speed, and is, withal, of great strength and beauty of model.

THAT IRON SCOW TO BURN BEDDING ON.—The best methods of disposing of the infected bedding which it has always been the custom of emigrants to throw overboard on coming into this port, has been the subject of investigation by the Quarantine Commissioners and the Health Officer, and as they are all agreed on the subject, there will be no cause of complaint hereafter, unless the citizens within an area of ten miles of the Quarantine anchorage should make an outcry against the burning of them. A large iron scow is to be always at hand, into which the bedding, old sheets and the like will be thrown in a promiscuous heap; the scow will then be removed at a safe distance from any shipping and set fire to and the whole mass consumed.

This is what is promised, but we do not hear that the first move has been made toward its construction. Come, come, gentlemen, let some of these things be begun, or the people will lose faith in your promises. By the way, when is that steam tug to be furnished, with which vessels were to be boarded at the anchorage from Quarantine.

Our Ship-Yards.

Notwithstanding that the shipping interest is dull, and vessels are lying idle at the wharves, some work is going on in our ship-yards. Vessels of peculiar descriptions are always wanted, which have to be built as the emergency arises, and capitalists, with an eye to future needs, build vessels when on account of the little demand the shipbuilders are willing to take reduced prices.

MR. BELL'S YARD, FOOT OF STANTON-STREET.—A large three-decked freighting-ship, called the Norway, of about 1,600 tons, is far advanced. It is built for Capt. MAJOR, and its future employment is undetermined. There is also a small bark of 800 tons, building for parties in this City.

ROOSEVELT, JOYCE & Co., in the adjoining yard, have two small vessels in progress, a barkantine, the Eph. Williams, built for BEALE, DIXON & Co. of this City, intended to carry stone, nearly ready to launch; of the other, the keel of a bark of 500 tons only, is laid for persons in this City.

WESTERVELT'S SHIP YARD.—There is a bark of some 600 tons named the Poiero, and built for an Italian resident of that name. The keel, stem and stern of a steamer of 1,500 or 1,600 tons is also in this yard. She was commenced for MORGAN & GARRISON, for the Nicaragua line, but the work on it was arrested in consequence of the failure of Gen. WALKER.

WM. H. WEBB'S YARD, FOOT OF SEVENTH STREET.—The laying of the keel of a man-of-war for the CZAR of Russia is just completed. She is to be a vessel of 1,500 tons, and to carry 10 heavy guns on her upper deck. She is to be a steam propeller, but otherwise to be rigged as a man-of-war. Her engines are in progress at the Novelty Works, and are to be two oscillating engines, and together about 350 horse power. The keel is 220 feet long. The vessel is to be finished early next year.

In the same yard the United States Revenue steamer is in progress, agreeably to the contract recently awarded to WM. H. WEBB, Esq., in accordance with the unanimous report of the nautical commission at Washington, in the justice of which verdict, all who witnessed the models there exhibited fully concurred: the contract being awarded without reference to the persons, and solely on the merits of the models and specifications presented.

Next to the Russian frigate is a far advanced steamship for the United States Mail Steamship Company, of 1,500 tons burden, to be named the Moses Taylor. She is to have two American beam engines, each 50-inch cylinder, and 12 feet stroke. She is very sharp and being obviously intended to be very fast, uncommonly great speed may be expected.

Close at hand, in the same yard, is a very large three-decker, of 1,500 tons. She is a heavy freighting ship, and built for WILLIAMS & GUION'S line of Liverpool Packets, and to be commanded by Capt. FREEMAN. She has yet no name, but upon her bow is the number 114, which signifies that she is the 114th vessel built on this ground by Mr. WEBB. It is stated that Mr. WEBB has built more tons of vessels than any other man that ever lived.

There is also near by and to be launched to-day, a nameless bark of 500 tons, built by Mr. WEBB, and for sale.

Preparations are evident for the immense Russian man-of-war in the huge piles of timber and other material lying around. This vessel, it may be remembered, was contracted for some years since, but its construction was delayed in consequence of the late war.

AT GREEN POINT.—Across the river some small vessels may be seen in the yard of EDWARD WILLIAMS, and three or four similar ones in the yard of WEBB & BELL.

AT THE NOVELTY WORKS.—The alterations of the machinery of the Adriatic are slowly advancing. The Baltic is also undergoing extensive repairs.

OCEAN STEAMERS.—The increase in ocean steamers has more than kept pace with all other enterprises in the way of freight and passenger transportation, and has probably outrun the profitable demand for ocean steam navigation. The German propellers do a good business in passengers and freight, and the same is true of the greater portion of the Havre and Liverpool sailing ships. Good authority assures us that without the aid of the Government mail contract, no first-class steamers can be sustained. The departures of steamers from America have averaged about five per week, and the same number weekly depart from the different ports of Europe for America. When the steamers now under contract on the other side, are completed, and the additional lines contemplated are under way, there will no doubt be a steamer departing daily for Europe, and from Europe for America.

There are fourteen different lines of steamers, making, under their present arrangement, an aggregate of nearly six hundred trips per year.

	Trips.
Cunard Line—Liverpool, Boston and New-York	104
Collins'—Liverpool and New-York	52
Livingston's—Southampton, Havre and New-York	26
Vanderbilt's—Southampton, Bremen and New-York	16
Sands' (Ocean Steam Navigation Company)—Bremen, Southampton and New-York	26
European and American Steam Company—Bremen, London and New-York	52
Liverpool, New-York and Philadelphia Companies	52
Glasgow Line—Glasgow and New-York	52
Belgium Line—Antwerp, Southampton and New-York	52
Hamburg Line—Hamburg and New York	24
Montreal Line—Liverpool and Portland, or Quebec	52
Montreal Ocean Steamship Company—Quebec and Liverpool	26

Besides these there are several transient steamers, as the Clyde, plying between Quebec and Glasgow, and others.

One line of steamers will stop at St. Johns to land and receive passengers, and, when necessary, to coal. By this arrangement, the European news, until the completion of the Ocean Line, will reach New-York in from five and a-half to six days. The telegraph to St. Johns is now in good working condition.

A BOY SHOT.—A son of Mr. WILSON, residing near Limestone Hill, Orange County, came to his death on Tuesday, under the following circumstances: A loaded gun had been kept in Mr. WILSON'S barn, with the lock not ready for firing. The lad and his youngest brother were sent to the barn for eggs, and while handling for them the gun was accidentally discharged, the ball passing through the back part of the head of the boy, causing his death in a few hours.

A Vase of Silver and Swords of Gold.

Among the noticeable articles now on exhibition at TIFFANY & Co.'s, is a silver vase, presented by the British Government to Mr. HENRY GRINNELL, which bears the following inscription:

Presented by the British Government,
As a token of their sincere gratitude and esteem, to
HENRY GRINNELL, of New-York,
Through whose exertions and munificence
the American Arctic Expedition, in search of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN and the officers and crews of her Britannic Majesty's ships Erebus and Terror, was undertaken and carried into execution between the years 1850 and 1855.

The vase is of a large size, of massive silver, and of most elaborate workmanship. The style is that of the Renaissance, and of the Italian variety. It is chased in bas relief of the English oaks, and in alto relief by a group of three figures, one of which is equestrian, of exquisite design, and evidently intended as emblematic of the spirit of chivalry.

There is also a splendid sword which was a personal present of the Queen of Great Britain to Capt. HARTSTEIN, about the time he surrendered with so much grace the ship Resolute, as a present from our Government. The blade is of the finest Damascus steel, the scabbard is chased in silver, and the guard set with carbuncles and brilliants.

But probably the most elegant and costly sword or sabre in the United States is the one presented to President BAEZ by the Congress of Venezuela, to be seen at the same place. It is a Damascus blade, on one side of which is inscribed:

"Al Ciudadano Esclarecido, General JOSE ANTONIO PAEZ," and on the obverse:

"El Congreso de Venezuela en 1836."

The handle and guard, of solid gold, is a figure of the Goddess of Peace bearing an olive branch, the guard forming wings, studded on the outside with rubies, sapphires and diamonds, and on the inside with carbuncles and chrysoberyl, the winge being folded to represent the stationary Peace; the shield are an acanthus foliation and laurel wreath, one side bearing the inscription:

"La Representation
National,
En 1836,"

around which are chased the words:

"Alcituladanaes Claricedo Defendiendo La Constitution y leyse du su Patria."

The scabbard, also of massive gold, is chased with allegorical figures representing Minerva introducing the nine muses to Venezuela, with bosses of Medusa heads, and Cornucopiæ holdings, the rings composed of laurel wreath; the inscription, which forms a portion of the arms of Venezuela, is worked in acanthus foliation. It is said to be the handsomest sword ever seen in this country. It was made by RUNDALL & BRIDGE, of London, and is valued at £5,000.

The batting of the young Bridgeporters was really beautiful, and so, indeed, was the fielding. F. VAN BUREN in size is but a child, yet he made a four hit, as well as several odd ones, making a very good score. Other players batted well, too, as may be seen by the score. The St. George's were beat by twenty runs.

New-York Press Association.

The regular monthly meeting of the Executive Committee of this Association, was held last evening at 8 o'clock, at the residence of JOHN H. GRISCOM, M. D., No. 42 East Twenty-ninth-street. Present, the Chairman, Dr. GRISCOM, and Messrs. ISRAEL RUSSELL, RICHARD REED, R. N. HAVENS, STEPHEN CUTTER, SALEM H. WALES, JOHN H. KEYSER, SOLOMON JENNER, WM. HEGEMAN and JAMES C. HOLDEN.

The minutes of the last meeting were approved. In consequence of the absence of the Treasurer, the financial report was not submitted. The following sums have been contributed to the funds of the Association since their last meeting: REISS, BROTHERS & Co., $5; W. C. RHINELDER, $25; HASKETT, MERRICK & BULL, $10; No 44 Exchange-place, $20; THOMAS EDDY, $25; LUCY H. EDDY, $25.

The diaries of the agent showed what had been done during the last month. Upward of 400 persons were visited in our detention prisons. From this number the inexperienced in crime, trifling and frivolous complainte, the penitent and the innocent, were carefully selected, counseled and aided; 47 of these complaints were discontinued on their advice; 43 were discharged from our various Courts and prisons on their recommendation; 29 discharged convicts and persons from our County jails and penitentiaries were assisted with money to enable them to leave the city for those places away where labor is more abundant and greater facilities afforded them to reform; 34 of these were supplied with suitable clothing—shirts, shoes, hats, caps, &c.; 13 persons discharged from our State and County prisons were provided with employment, and as far away as possible, and Bibles and other good books were freely given them.

During the evening several important questions were discussed with animation, clearly indicative of a thorough desire on the part of the Executive Committee to carry out throughout the entire State the philanthropic objects of the Association. A resolution was unanimously carried to visit the County Prisons and report the result to the next Legislature, agreeably to their Charter. A large number of persons are daily calling upon them for pecuniary aid.

TRICKS OF THE DIRT CARTMEN.—One of the great causes of the dust in the streets is the dirt cartman. In his tender compassion for his horse, when he carts a load of sand from a cellar, he manages to have the tail-board of his box-cart so low that by the time he arrives at the "dumping ground" one-half of the few bushels he started with is jolted out. Another of his dodges is—if 12 or 6 o'clock overtakes him, and he has a loaded cart—to deposit its contents upon the spot, or take it to some unfrequented street near by. Citizens are deceived by his open and above-board way of doing this, and think some repairs are about to be made in the neighborhood. Should one have his suspicions awakened and ask why the earth is placed there, the ready reply comes, as PAT mounts the cart, "It's all right; the boss towld me to put it here," and he vanishes, having gained a bit of leisure, and he saved the shilling a load which is charged for depositing the dirt at the dumping-places. Except at the foot of Bank-street and Thirty-Fourth-street there are no places where dirt can be dumped without paying for the privilege. There is an ordinance which inflicts a fine of $10 on any person who shall deposit earth, dirt or rubbish in any one of the streets or sidewalks without permission, and if the offence is committed by a dirt cartman it is punishable as a misdemeanor. Now that the streets are under the charge of the City Inspector it will be easy to prosecute the violators of this wholesome ordinance.

Commencement at the General Theological Seminary.

This event took place Thursday morning at St. Peter's Church, Twentieth-street, near Ninth-avenue. After religious services, conducted by Bishops KIPP, of California, and POTTER, of New-York, the annual address was delivered by Bishop KIPP, in which he warned the young graduates of the difficulties which would surround them in their future religious career. A blessing was then invoked upon the graduating class, whose names are:

Hurley Baldey, B. A.; T. F. Cornell, A. M. M. D.; Geo. Sherman Converse, B. A.; J. W. Goughler, W. Allen Jonson, A. B.; Octavius Perinchief, B. A.; W. C. Robinson, A. B.; Wm. Alexander Rich, John Scarborough, B. A.; C. B. Smith, B. A.; John B. Southgate, A. M.; J. F. Spaulding, A. M.; S. H. Synnot, A. B.; Alhra Wadleigh, Jr., A. B.

The portrait of Rev. SAMUEL TURNER was presented to the Seminary by Rev. W. H. MOORE, in behalf of the Alumni, with a brief address. Bishop KIPP hoped the portrait of Bishop WHITTINGHAM, of Maryland, would also be presented. Rev. D

LITERARY GOSSIP FROM ABROAD.

"The Athelings," a novel of English life—literary, fashionable and domestic—which has been running through Blackwood's Magazine for several months, has been variously attributed to Mrs. OLIPHANT, author of "Zaidee" to BULWER, to Miss MULOCK, and to MARY HOWITT. These various guesses, however, seem to be erroneous, as the story is now generally accredited to Lieutenant-Colonel HARNLEY, who wrote "Lady Lee's Widowhood," in Blackwood, and also the dashing and spirited Sketchee of the Crimean War, which appeared, some two years ago, in the same periodical.

Speaking of Blackwood reminds us that we ought to remind, or inform our readers that there was last year published, as a stately octavo of 600 pages, double columns and small type, a General Index to Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine, containing many thousand references to persons, subjects, places, and things treated on, or even glanced at, in the first fifty volumes of Blackwood. This index, which, literally, was the result of years of patient labor, is extremely well executed, and gives references to the Magazine from April, 1817, (the date of its opening number,) to December, 1841. It will save a world of trouble to those who have occasion to look back through the pages of Maga. It is analytical, in an eminent degree. Of course, this volume can scarcely ever have such a sale as will pay the expenses of producing it. In this country there are very few complete sets of Blackwood in any public or private library, and in these the volumes containing the "Chaidee Manuscript" and other suppressed articles are scarcer still. Yet rarer is it to find a complete series containing the suppressed engravings also. It is believed that there is one copy of the latter in New-York.

An English author, named J. W. KING, (who is also his own publisher,) has just produced a biography of ALESSANDRO GAVAZZI, who caused such excitement, by his Anti-Papal Lectures three years ago, in this City, and more particularly in Canada, where riots and loss of life were the results. This memoir, written with extraordinary admiration on the part of Mr. KING, mentions some things which are peculiarly interesting. The first is the fact that GAVAZZI's first addresses to English audiences were greatly applauded, though spoken in Italian, a language with which a vast majority of his auditors were wholly unacquainted. The appropriateness of his dramatic action, or rather of his gesticulation, the music and power of his voice, the picturesque novelty in his attire, and the dignity of his personal appearance, told almost as well as if his audience could follow the meaning of his words. For six months he attracted London audiences, composed of all classes, to listen to and admire him. Secondly, during the twelve months of GAVAZZI's provincial performances an English friend of his was his constant companion and coöperator. It was GAVAZZI's practice to speak for half an hour in Italian, after which, his friend would follow for half an hour, in English, translating or paraphrasing what he had spoken. At last, like KOSSUTH, (though far less successfully,) he taught himself English, of which he is now a better master than he was when in this country.

It was Father MAHONY, now one of the editors of the London Globe, who first drew attention, in England, to GAVAZZI. MAHONY, who, under the soubriquet of "Father Prout," obtained a high reputation, was so fortunate, several years ago, as to be appointed head of the College at Malta, by the British Government. It was necessary, "as a mere matter of form," to obtain the confirmation of the Pope. MAHONY went to Malta, to enter into office, and was there met by a notice that the Pope had been pleased to veto his appointment. An impression prevailed in Rome that "Father Prout," though a fine scholar, good poet, and eminently social man, was by no means orthodox as to faith, nor over-moral as to conduct. So he had to return to England. When, in the year of revolutions, (1848,) Rome became convulsed, a reliable "Own Correspondent" was required for the London Daily News, and Father MAHONY was sent to the Eternal City in that capacity. Remembering how harshly the Pope had treated him on the Malta affair, MAHONY did not spare his Holiness in his public letters for London. Moreover, he dwelt with constant and warm eulogy on the abilities of GAVAZZI, who, under the short-lived "Roman Republic," was Chief Military Chaplain, with almost the power of a Dictator. Subsequently, when GAVAZZI commenced making demonstrations in London, he was again distinguished by the very strongest praise from the pen of MAHONY, then (as now) editorially employed on the Globe, the particular newspaper which is the semi-official organ of Lord PALMERSTON. Indeed, it is doubtful whether, but for the strong and constant praise of GAVAZZI by MAHONY, the Italian would ever have ventured to face an English audience with an Italian speech. Thus, and by other acts against Rome, (particularly using the Globe in 1850-1, as the decided opponent of the movement under Cardinal WISEMAN,) MAHONY has been paying off his debt to the Papacy.

After all the discussions on the subject, JOHN RUSKIN, the art-critic, was not even proposed as candidate for the Professorship of Poetry, in the University of Oxford. Two persons were brought forward—a clergymen named ERNEST BODE, whose name had never before been associated in any way with poetry, and MATTHEW ARNOLD, whose poems were republished last year by TICKNOR & FIELDS, of Boston. After a very severe contest, voters coming to Oxford from all parts of England, ARNOLD was elected by a majority of 85—as many as 641 persons voting.

After all, there is little more than honor in the Professorship itself. Among the few eminent men who have held it are THOS. WARTON, (the historian of English poetry,) and HENRY HART MILMAN, author of Fazio and other dramatic poems, and now Dean of St. Paul's. The salary is only $500 a year, and, of late years, the lectures have been supposititious, Mr. CLAUGHTON, the late Professor, having wholly evaded delivering any. The office is tenable for ten years. Professor ARNOLD, son of the late Head Master of Rugby School, (and the well-known historian of Rome,) was born on Christmas Eve, in 1822. At Oxford he won the Newdegate prize for English verse; the subject—"Cromwell." In 1845 he was made Fellow of Oriel College, and two years later became Lord LANSDOWNE's Private Secretary, which he retained until 1851, when his marriage vacated his Fellowship. He is now one of the Government Inspectors of Schools—a lucrative office. In 1849 anonymously appeared his first volume, The Strayed Reveler, and other Poems. In 1852, Empedocles on Etna, and other Poems. In 1854 he published a volume, under his own name, including selections from the previous books, and soon after issued a second series. He has excluded Empedocles from his avowed poems,—the most popular of which is an Eastern episode, Sohrab and Rustum. Mr. ARNOLD is very much of an intellectual and very little of a passionate poet. His style is noble,—statuesque and graceful, but cold also. However, he is not 35 years old, and may yet warm into breathing life. As he is resolved not to hold his Professorship as a sinecure, some excellent lectures on Poetry may be expected from him.

The copyrights of the three London Tory newspapers,—Morning Herald, Standard and St. James' Chronicle,—were put up at such a high price (over $100,000, for printing plant, lease of offices, and good-will) that no one bid for them. But it is understood that these journals are kept on chiefly at the cost of the Earl of DERBY.

Several biographical works of interest have lately appeared in London, and several which promise well are announced. There is an excellent life of MICHAEL ANGELO, (actually MICHEL AGNOLO,) by Dr. HARFORD, full of anecdotes of contemporary artists. A Life of ANDREW CROSSE, the gentleman who, in the course of electrical experiments, some 15 years ago, produced an insect out of copper and nitric acid, wholly unknown before:—this biography will be written by his widow. A Life of GEORGE STEPHENSON, the father of locomotive steam traveling; he died in 1848, aged 67, and was, perhaps, the most entirely self-taught man who ever won fame and fortune in England. In 1825, he was afraid that the people would not believe that his engine could run ten miles an hour. In 1845, he saw fifty miles an hour the ordinary express speed between London and Bristol. The Cornwallis Papers, with a memoir of their writer, Marquis CORNWALLIS, who surrendered to American arms in October, 1781, and afterwards, as Viceroy, put down TIPPO SAIB in India, and the Rebellion of '98 in Ireland. The third and fourth volumes of Sir CHARLES JAMES NAPIER's Life and Opinions. A Life of JOHN BANIM, the Irish novelist, and author of the play of Damon and Pythias, so often attributed to SHEIL, the orator.

The long promised Life of DANIEL O'CONNELL, by his daughter, is said to be so nearly completed that it may be expected in September. It will commence with an Autobiography, up to the passing of the Union in 1800, and will contain a diary, with extracts from his correspondence, and several poetical attempts—chiefly sentimental! The work will probably extend to four large octavo volumes, and will contain portraits and vignettes.

WILLIAM CHAMBERS, the Scotch publisher, who ran through the United States and Canada three years ago, has just brought out American Slavery and Color, which particularly refers to the Southern States, and also refers to the outrage on Mr. SUMNER, the Kansas-Nebraska affair, and the position and prospects of the Kansas question. He says that Slavery is greatly on the increase, and despairs of a remedy.

PARIS GOSSIP.

Americans in Europe—Tourists on the Move—Places of Fashionable Summer Resort—Rachel—Departure of the King of Bavaria—A new Explosive Ball—The sunken Ships at Sebastopol—Literary Intelligence.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PARIS, Thursday, June 11, 1857.

The period for the annual inundation of Americans into Paris has arrived. Like fair weather birds, they only emigrate in the Spring. Compared to last year, the influx is more than doubled—but last year suffered from the reaction of the Exhibition. Soon these will be scattered over Europe—some sweltering through the scorching sun of Italy, to climb Vesuvius or the dome of St. Peter's; some trudging up the long steeps of the Alps; and others spending their thalers at the gambling hells of the Rhine. Already a considerable number of Americans have fixed themselves at Baden-Baden—that other Paris—for the Summer. But these are principally families who own cottages there. As each year revolves, the explorations of our countrymen extend. The visit to Egypt and Turkey, which only a few years ago was scarcely practicable, and undertaken but by few, is now so common that tourists are seeking new routes and new objects of curiosity. This year a good many will visit Russia and the Scandinavian States. The Russian Government, ashamed of the exposures of its absurd police regulations, made during last year by the travelers who were present at the Coronation, has relaxed its system, and a visit to that Empire is now possible without too great a disturbance of one's equanimity of temper. It would be too hazardous to pretend that bribes were not still as powerful in securing certain immunities from the Police as before, but the rigore of police inspection, and the delays of repeated examinations within the interior of the country, are very much modified. Spain, for a reason difficult to explain satisfactorily, remains untraveled and unsought for, by the tourist of modern days. After England, Spain presents the most historical interest to the American; but the American rushes off in preference to the monotonous lowlands and dykes of Holland, to the steppes of Russia, or the desert sands of Arabia. Out of many hundred voyagers whom one encounters every year in Paris, he rarely meets one that has passed the Spanish frontier. It is a kind of fashion not to go to Spain.

With the return of Spring and fine weather, fashion deserts the asphaltum of the boulevards and the alleys of the Bois de Boulogne, for the Summer retreats of the Rhine, the Alps and the Pyrenees, and gives place to an incursion of nondescript tourists from the other States of Europe that is not difficult to recognize. The melancholy children of merry England form the principal part of this class of tourists. But such tourists! The real English, the traveled aristocracy of the British Isles, whom we encounter in the Winter saloons of Paris, take their flight from the French capital on the opening of Parliament, towards the month of March, for then the fashionable season begins in London; and they are soon replaced, in the streets at least, by a crowd of motley country merchants and Manchester and Birmingham industrials, that dislocate completely one's knowledge of natural history. The males are coiffed in pointed Scotch caps, with vests that resemble jackets, jackets that resemble vests, and pantaloons too short for legs that are too long; the females are easily distinguished in the street by a total absence of crinoline, by the flat bonnet and plume, by the pirogues which serve them for shoes, by their complexion of wax, eyes of porcelain, and freckles. This graceful variety of the Britannic species, are the terror of cheap restaurants at fixed prices, an Englishman never using the right to command "three plates at choice" but to order three consecutive beefsteaks! Even then they "eat and grumble," and some swallow afterwards the bowl of rinsing water, not forgetting to protest against the singularities of French habits!

The Summer English (and in this category must be ranked very many newly-arrived Americans) are parsimonious and suspicious to a point that destroys all the pleasure of their visit. I can conceive of nothing more offensive to good taste and good manners, than this constant and persistent depreciation of everything that is met: the blue sky is too blue, the river is too narrow, the gardens too large, the people dishonest, the merchants impostors, the servants thieves, and so on. This class cannot even find a word of praise for the admirable police system which protects them, and which they do not have to pay; it is too numerous and offends their eyes. They "jew" a poor man on the price of an apple, on a vague suspicion that they are being cheated, and they "jew" a cabman on his fixed tariff. They find nothing good nor nothing honest but in their own country; they leave with a bad impression of France, and what is worse, give France a bad impression of them.

Baden-Baden will be this year more than ever the terrestrial paradise of the borders of the Rhine. During the season a series of fêtes of a superior order will be given, and this Summer rendezvous of the fashionable world bids fair to rival Paris in the brilliancy of its saloons, and the quality of its operatic and theatrical representations. The American residents are mostly to be found in the Alley of Lichtenstein, where they occupy the finest villas of the place.

At the last ball at the Hotel de Ville, given in honor of the King of Bavaria, the public, or rather "the million" that garnished the approaches to the city palace, were the spectators of a singular circumstance in the onward and upward progress of crinoline. The husband and wife were almost in every carriage separated: the husband mounted on the box beside the coachman, the wife occupying alone the interior. But it was not this fact that excited the ridicule of the crowd; the hoops were so enormous and the dresses so precious, that their wearers could not sit down so that when the doors were opened, the ladies were found standing up in the carriage, the body bent forward, the hands fastened to the cords, offering a side profile that resembled a jockey at the outcome of a race. It was hard work, for the queue of carriages was long and the halts frequent, so that they arrived with faces the color of a boiled lobster; but they were amply compensated for their perseverance by immaculate skirts and faithful hoops.

There is a good deal of amusement this year at the expense of the village of Nanterre, which for the first time for more than half a century, failed to crown its annual rosière. This village, situated near Paris, and renowned for its irreproachable butter and eggs and its more or less irreproachable young women, is in the habit of crowning every year that one of its maidens who has offered the most evidences of womanly virtues during the course of the year. The proximity of the place to Paris was the instigation of this commendable ceremony; it was found that an annual premium was the only salvation for the morality of the town. The Mayor usually selected the rosière: but this year there was competition; the curé of the village church presented a candidate, the daughter of one of his assistants, as the greatest model of virtue within the parish. The Mayor adhered to his own candidate, the curé to his, the village divided on the question, and to put a stop to the quarrel, it was decided that for this year no crowning should take place. The circumstance has been already proposed to the Palais Royal Theatre as the subject of a comic piece.

There is no question of Mademoiselle RACHEL returning to the stage, at least for the present. Her health continues to demand the greatest precaution. Neither is there a word of truth in the pretended conversion of the daughter of Israel—and Melpomene—to the Catholic faith, much less to the Protestant.

The King of Bavaria leaves Paris this evening to return to Munich. On Saturday evening a ball was given by the Emperor to his Bavarian Majesty at the Palace of St. Cloud. At this ball, to which the invitations were very limited, and confined to the diplomatic corps, the first dignitaries of the Empire, the spiritualist HUME was invited! After that, Paris is ready to make its preparations for the comet of the 13th! There is very little doubt in the minds of the Parisians but that HUME is a bold, but cunning impostor, and they do not understand the nature of the strange infatuation he has known how to inspire in the court circle.

The Emperor was asked the other day by a diplomat who is on the best of terms with his Majesty, how it was that he gave so much more personal attention to the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE, who was not a monarch and but lately an enemy, than to the King of Bavaria, who was a monarch and a friend to France? NAPOLEON replied: "Is there not more rejoicing in heaven over one sinner who repents and returns, than over the entry of the hundred elected?"

You have all read of JULES GERARD, the lion-killer, and of his wonderful encounters in the jungles of Africa. When GERARD came back to Paris the last time from his favorite amusement in Africa, he suggested to DEVISME, the well-known gunmaker of the Boulevard des Italiens, the idea of inventing a ball that would explode when it arrived in the animal's body. M. DEVISME went to work to realize this idea, the utility of which in the chase of lions, elephants and other wild beasts, is but too obvious, and it is pretended that he has perfectly succeeded. The new projectils is about the size of the Minié ball; its penetrating force is equal to the common ball. Arrived in the animal's body it explodes like a bomb, and, of course, causes the sudden death of the animal. If shot into the lungs of an elephant for example, the ball in exploding, disengages carbonic acid gas, and the animal, which from its size might otherwise survive for a short time, will suddenly fall asphyxialed. A few days ago a party of gentlemen accompanied M. DEVISME to a horse slaughter-house in the environs of the city. There the new projectile was tried on five horses who were standing tied to a fence waiting to be shot. They were each shot in the lungs, the ball exploded, and the animal fell dead. The experiment was completely satisfactory. Since then, M. DEVISME, to demonstrate the practicability of his new projectils as a substitute for the harpoon in the destruction of whales, has gone to Havre, not with the hope that a whale would present itself to be killed, but to try the experiment on an artificial whale that would respond in its resistance to a real one. The experiment was entirely successful, and those who witnessed it assert positively that the substitute for the harpoon is found. But if this ball will penetrate the blubber of the whale to a sufficient depth, its utility over the harpoon is so great that the use of that instrument must suddenly cease; for the harpoon is not only an uncertain but a dangerous instrument to those who use it, while the ball of M. DEVISME is both certain and safe. Making a due allowance for French exaggeration in the matter of inventions, there yet remains a hope that this invention is a serious and a practicable one.

A singular accident, more or less connected with crinoline, was observed a few days ago on the Boulevard. Two young women, elegantly dressed, with an abundance of the expansive material, were crossing the street in the most fashionable and crowded part of the Boulevard, when one of them was suddenly seen to be in a blaze of fire. The other girl ran to her assistance, and her clothes being light, the flames were communicated to her as well. A crowd hastily collected, and the flames were extinguished, but not till the first one had all her outside clothes and her bonnet burnt off her, and her skin slightly hurt. The second one only had her dress spoiled. How could such an accident have happened? The girls had been sitting at a restaurant taking their coffee. A lighted cigar, by some means, found its way under the lady's dress on the floor; the balloon-like form of her skirts and the confined air served the double purpose of restraining the flames and of preventing the fire from touching her person, until the movement of walking in the street renewed the air and caused the flames to break out suddenly, in the manner already described.

The death of young GRELET in the Eldridge-street prison has served as a text for a series of criticisms on American humanity and American administration of affairs, which I am sure would not flatter you if you were to read them. They cannot understand how the management of a prison and the nourishment of the prisoners is left as a matter of speculation to the officer in charge, or how prisoners are placed absolutely at the mercy of one man, in a great measure irresponsible for his acts.

A Russian journal, speaking upon good authority, contradicts the report that the American Company had already raised several of the ships sunk at Sebastopol, and then details the division of operations in that work. The Americans are employed only to raise those vessels sunk by Prince MENSCHIKOFF, at the mouth of the Bay, to prevent the entry of the enemy's fleet, and they have not yet commenced operations. The Russians, on their part, are already at work on the raising of the vessels sunk higher up in the Bay, and especially those sunk on the north bank the day after the taking of the south side of the city by the Allied Army. In this operation they have already raised six or eight vessels.

The death of M. BAIFFANT, who has been an occupant of one of the forty chairs of the French Academy since 1826, leaves two vacancies in that distinguished body of savans. He was the ninth occupant of the chair, his immediate predecessor, who was elected in 1787, being the Marquis of AGUESSEAU.

Last evening's Presse contains a long study on the character, the works, and the style of THEODORE PARKER, of Boston, from the pen of M. CHARLES DOLLFUS. This writer places THEODORE PARKER between CHANNING and EMERSON, and asserts that he belongs to that class of men who will one day reclaim the American people from the reproach, still too much merited, of materialism. The transcendental style of the Boston theologist has struck a vein of admiration in M. DOLLFUS, and his translations are so faithful to the original, that if the French reader will kindly accept these as evidences of American immaterialism, the country will be saved from the reproach that has long weighed it down.

The Revue des Deux Mondes, for June, contains a twenty-five page criticism on American literature, from the pen of M. ETIENNE. It is but the first article of a series, and this one is devoted to a preface on the general character of American literature, and to NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE. The general appreciation of American literature is exceedingly interesting, and ought to be republished at home. The writer, like most French critics since the appearance of the works of EDGAR A. POE in France, and the marvellous tales of the spiritualists, seems impressed with the belief that all American literature must necessarily smell of the graveyard and of the supernatural. He admits, however, that our literature has a character of its own which has its charm, dark, gloomy and mathematical as it may be.

The June number of the Revue Contemporaine contains a long article on "The History of Pain," in which the discovery of anæsthesia by WELLS, JACKSON and MORTON, is carefully, impartially and most amusingly described.

Amylène, the new anæsthetic agent discovered by Dr. SNOW, of London, lately received the honor of a discussion before the Imperial Academy of Medicine of Paris. VELPEAU, MALGAIGNE and other distinguished surgeons who had given the new agent a careful experimentation in their hospital practice, pronounced it inferior to chloroform, and the Academy voted its condemnation. Unfortunately for the Amylène, a case of death had just occurred from its use in the hands of the inventor, Dr. SNOW, and this circumstance, it may be imagined, did not contribute to its reputation as a practical agent.

The Ministry, in concert with the Faculty of Medicine, are about to establish the rule that all students of medicine in presenting themselves as such to the Faculty, must exhibit not only the diploma of a bachelor of sciences, already required, but also that of bachelor of letters.

MORMONISM.

Movements of the Saints—They Will Celebrate the "Fourth"—Some Additional Facts.

The Mormons in the neighborhood of New-York are circulating in the most lively manner.

President CANNON has been preaching Mormonism during the past week, in the vicinity of Northfield and other points in Connecticut.

The "Saints" are invited to assemble on the Fourth of July at Norwalk, Conn., for a grand celebration, in which patriotism and Mormonism are to be mingled in equal proportions. President APPLEBY, the High Priest of the Eastern Conferences, is to deliver an oration, and a pilgrimage is to be made to Nauvoo Island, an ancient gathering place of the Saints in Norwalk Bay. They all go down there in a sloop.

Elder PETER HARROCKE has arrived in town from Salt Lake City, on his way to England, which he visits on a mission tour.

Elder CHRISTIAN HYER, a missionary appointed to labor among the Scandinavians in the States, has also arrived here from head-quarters. He has preached in Illinois and Wisconsin on the way. It was up-hill work.

Twenty-five Mormon missionaries, whose departure from Utah with hand-carts was noticed some time since, have all arrived at St. Louis, in the jolliest possible manner. The Mormon states "that they have brought a good portion of the spirit of Zion with them."

The Mormons threaten the Government through their organ this week, that it will be unsafe to try extreme measures upon the Saints in Utah.

MORE DEVELOPMENTS.

A communication from a "Gladdenite," one of the seceding Mormons, is published in the Washington Star. It gives some curious statements concerning the aims of the Mormons:

"Their object from the first has been to occupy and hold the whole Territory of Utah exclusively, making and executing their own laws and appointing their own officers of every kind, civil, judicial and military, so that everything shall be exclusively Mormon throughout the Territory. Hence not only their officers, but also their juries and witnesses being Mormons, they can carry out any measure they desire; and, therefore, any Gentile officer, whether Governor, Judge or Marshal, would have nothing to do but to be constantly on the alert for his own safety from the secret machinations of the famous Danite Band, who are sworn, on the peril of their lives, to do the bidding of their august leader, BRIGHAM YOUNG.

It need not be expected that BRIGHAM will oppose openly any force to the army sent there this Summer, or openly refuse to receive and obey (in the presence of the army) the newly appointed officers; for, in their organ in New-York City, they say as much. This same Mormon organ, noticing the suggestion that the Government shall offer protection to all Mormon seceders to enable them to return to the States, declares that they have the matter with the greatest pleasure and gratitude, since it will save them the trouble of driving them out, as they have always done, and declare they will still do. This illustrates the idea of free speech or a free press, which cannot exist among the Mormons (save in name, notwithstanding all their pretensions to the contrary.

A few years since a small law and order party, openly professing true loyalty to the Federal Government and a purer religion, arose among them. They were termed, by the Brighamite Mormons, Gladdenites, all of whom (who were openly known) were mobbed, their lives threatened, and were, finally, forcibly compelled to leave the Territory. They are now in the States, waiting to return when they can have the protection of the Government as good citizens. It appears, by late advices from that country, that this party have again attempted a demonstration, causing BRIGHAM considerable fears and trouble, and, also, their own expulsion from the Territory. They number, at this time, some two thousand. It seems that the weapons the Brighamites use against their enemies are slander, falsehood and the concealed dagger, which latter they appear to have handled pretty freely among the Gladdenites. When the Gladdenites can have the protection of the Government, as good citizens should have, they will, by fair means, oust BRIGHAM and his hand from their strongholds. Indeed, this body of seceders is all the dependence of the Government for a foothold in Utah, and hence they should be encouraged to return and remain in the Territory; as their presence (to act as Jurors, witnesses and Territorial officers, as well as friends to the newly-appointed Federal officers and the army,) would be very important at this time.

Of course, as now generally suggested by the press, the Government can do nothing with the Mormons as a religious body; but they can be dealt with as rioters and insurrectionists, and as criminals so far as their acts of murder, theft, perjury, counterfeiting money, &c., can be proved against them. Organized as they are in their fanaticism, BRIGHAM YOUNG and others of the leading Mormons are justly responsible, and ought to answer for the many horrible atrocities of the past, and such as may be hereafter committed by his ignorant, miserable dupes. They are especially amenable to trial as the ringleaders of the late riotous proceedings and insurrectionary movement in breaking up the Federal courts and destroying their records, papers, &c., as stated by Judge DRUMMOND, and confirmed by the rest of the returned officers and others.

The course, then, for the new Governor to pursue would be, upon his entrance into the Territory to issue a proclamation to the effect that the presence of the troops in Utah is for the purpose of suppressing the insurrection, and for the protection of all good citizens of the United States; also to demand the arms of all the inhabitants of the Territory, until order and peace be perfectly established throughout that region. In case this demand be not complied with, then let warrants be issued against all offending and accused criminal parties, that justice may take its course, (and should resistance to the Governor's orders be offered, the remedy is at hand,) which course would, in the end, so expose the real character of certain interested individuals, that they would probably soon come to think that even Utah, their chosen earthly paradise, was too hot for them. So they would prefer some part unknown; and as they hoist on a large church in the Sandwich Islands, perhaps they might go there. In that case, the United States would be rid of the hated presence of those who survived the halter and the penitentiary. If the course here suggested is taken, it would seem that Utah would soon no longer need the presence of the United States to preserve order, as well as to protect life and the sacred rights of citizenship. When the foul and now spreading ulcer is healed, she will be able to take care of herself, and her remaining inhabitants being good citizens, she will become an important and useful community in that far-off country. If a course contrary to this is pursued, the expedition to Utah will accomplish nothing; and, consequently, another set of officers will return in everlasting disgrace."

The Police Gazette has a letter from Salt Lake, signed "One who was once a Mormon Elder," which says:

"But a short time ago I had an interview with LUCINDA STRATTON, a "spiritual" of HEBER C. KIMBALL. She formerly lived in Ohio, where herself and family were respected, loved and esteemed by all. But a Mormon preacher, or missionary, entered her once happy home, and taught his pernicious doctrines, which lured that peaceful family to this city. Mr. STRATTON was murdered in one month after he reached here, because he cried out strongly against the plurality wife system. His wife died soon after, and then their only child was in the hands of this destroying band. Only fifteen years of age, yet beautiful and accomplished much beyond her years. But not long was she to enjoy the calm, innocent, retrospection. The tempter was there in almost every form, and the destroyer in one. That man is HEBER C. KIMBALL, whose white hair tells his years of crime to be over a half century. His harem is filled from the elite and educated of many once happy homes. He has fifteen "spiritual" and forty-two illegitimate children! Sisters have married the same man, and their offspring both call him father, and both sisters claim him as their husband.

We send you with this letter an embrotype of a young female, who lived two years ago in the State of New-York, but was decoyed from home and friends to become a being of shame and crime. Her name we shall not disclose, as her family are enjoying the respect and esteem which is due them in that State. She has become a sort of queen in the harem of one JOHNSON, and seems to enjoy the life she leads regardless of the future. She has more iron firmness and determination when once aroused than any woman in Utah. A short time ago another brother became enamored of this fair but frail wonton woman, and while JOHNSON was absent to a settlement about sixty miles from the city, he went to brother JOHNSON's and tried to persuade his "spiritual" to leave her lord and go to live in his house where he had but five wives, while JOHNSON had nine. But she promptly refused to go, and plainly told him not to come there again. Not from any virtuous scruples, by any means; but she did not like him, and enjoyed herself with JOHNSON. But this brother would not give up the chase so easily; he went again, and BRIGHAM with him, to see her. The Prophet told her that it was the will of the Lord that she should be divorced from her former husband, and be "sealed" up to this brother; but she told the Head of the Church plainly that she would do no such thing, and that they might leave her house. This from a woman, and to the Prophet, who feels himself all-mighty and powerful, made him angry. He told the brother who had come with him to "take a kiss and then they would go." The other done as he was bid, or at least attempted to do so, when she flew at him like a wild cat, scratching him in the face and tearing his shirt bosom entirely out! The lover could make but a feeble show against this woman, and soon called to YOUNG to "take her off."

When he was released he presented a truly laughable sight. The "claret" was running profusely, and the prime of her nails were visible on every part of his lustful visage. YOUNG was so full of laughter at the sight that he was laughing as he passed our boarding house, while our whipped brother was by his side, with coat buttoned to the throat to hide the loss of shirt and collar.

As it has been my misfortune to have been a Mormon Elder, I am well acquainted with the heinous [illegible] deluded people. I shall write the history of villainy, for in no other way can I do my duty to myself and the whole American people.

I should have left this priest-cursed land long ere this, but my repugnance to the spiritual-wife system has long since "marked" me as one who "shall never go from the hive" with the secrets I hold. To attempt a departure from the city would insure my certain imprisonment, and perhaps death.

The Crisis in our Shipping.

A leading article in your paper of 24th inst., took my attention. The crisis in shipping is likely to prove of growing importance to the public. My attention has leaned toward this subject for some time past, and I have thought, on reading your article, that I might place a few ideas in juxtaposition, as briefly as possible, at your service.

Ship-building had been for some years, until quite lately, a very flourishing business. The stimulus given to trade universally by the gold discoveries, and, subsequently, the employment afforded to a large amount of tonnage by the Eastern War, have caused investments in shipping to an extent that was altogether unwarranted.

The reaction, ever consequent upon inflated business, the release of one large fleet from the transport service of European Governments, the diversion of another from its accustomed route homeward from California, viâ China—these have contributed largely toward the existing depression.

But an over-supply of shipping for the ordinary wants of the carrying trade is only the natural result of the causes first stated, and would probably have been sooner felt and acknowledged but for the temporary relief afforded by the war above alluded to.

As it is, there are more ships in the world than the world has use for just now, and this would be the case at the present time, equally, whether the carrying service were performed entirely under canvas, entirely by steam, or in the mixed manner in which it is at present done.

Mainly apart from this present depression, however, which time would of itself alleviate, there are other elements of consideration bearing upon the prosperity of our mercantile marine that demand attention.

1. Steam has at length attained the point of perfection that enables it to compete fairly with the sailing ship, on some lines of passage at least, in the general freighting and passenger business.

2. Iron has been so successfully substituted for wood in the construction of hulls, that its preferability, more particularly for steamships, seems to be pretty well established, on English authority.

3. The irregularity and delay in receipt of shipments from Europe by sailing ships, during our last two severe Winters, has placed them unfavorably in contrast with European screw-steamers now running; and there is no reason to doubt that Great Britain, particularly, will exert, and is exerting, every effort to sustain and improve her position in this competition.

4. Great Britain will work in this contest with materials that are peculiarly her own—Iron, Coal, Capital, Mechanical Skill, and Cheap Labor—the sum of her resources is epitomized in the screw-steamer.

5. Dependent upon Great Britain chiefly for our supply of iron, and with a heavy import duty upon it, we certainly cannot hope to build iron hulls for ourselves for some time to come. Economy requires that the screw-propeller be used instead of paddle-wheels; and it is said that wooden hulls have been proved to be unfit for propulsion by the screw. Worst of all, our trans-oceanic steamers hitherto have not proved successful in competition with those of Great Britain.

No doubt we are now on the point of a crisis—"a new era in shipping." Europe will work with all the materials she can command, but we are not without our own resources.

It is not improbable that the ingenuity of our shipbuilders may devise means in the construction of wooden hulls to secure all the strength and solidity necessary to endure propulsion by the screw.

In the management and working of such hulls in service, it is more than probable that enterprise and promptitude would fully compensate for any deficiency in the structure, resulting from difference of material.

It is quite certain that very great advantages may be secured by a more judicious combination of sail with steam-power than has yet been arrived at,—that perfection in the mould of hull has hardly yet been attained, so as to secure highest speed with greatest capacity, on a given length of keel,—and that there is a wide field yet open for improvement in the economical as well as mechanical arrangements of the steamship.

In the use of steam from the first on shipboard, the error seems to have been entertained that its introduction was incompatible with the use of canvas to any extent. The fact is, that for ordinary merchant-service, the wind, during two-thirds at least of every ship's passage, on the average, will drive her on a direct course at a good fair speed; and costing nothing in the supply, is certainly entitled to hold a place against any other motive power whatever.

Furnished with auxiliary steam-power (screw) and fore-and-aft rigged, a vessel would probably use her canvas five-sixths of her whole time at sea. There would be only about four points of the compass from which the wind could blow on any passage, that it would be unserviceable to her. Then it would be optional with her to work to windward under canvas, or steam head to wind, and, in calms she would have all the advantage of her steam-power.

Calms, however, are the exception; winds are the rule of the ocean. Over nineteen-twentieths of the navigable surface of the globe, the winds may be calculated upon to blow two days out of three, or thereabouts, upon the average, either from one or the other half of the compass; whilst over nearly one half of all the earth the trade-winds and monsoons blow.

Respectfully,

TROY, Thursday, June 25, 1857.

A lovely day, a new race course to be inaugurated, and two well-matched horses to contest for the neat little sum of $1,000, all combined to draw a large crowd at the race yesterday. The horses were the heroes of the hundred-mile trot last Spring, from Albany to Whitesboro', and although they bear the classical appellations of Broker and Doctor, are better known, the former as the Sheehan or New-York horse, the latter as the Dalton or Albany animal; you will remember that the former, after many stoppages on the part of both horses, won the hundred-mile race by a very few minutes, and their relative speed has been a subject of much dispute, to settle which the present twenty-mile match was made. Let me first describe the course.

Upon the largest of the many islands that cover the Hudson near its westerly bank, between Troy and Albany, is located the Empire Race Course, the property of WM. P. PAFF, Esq., the only track in the Union owned by a private individual. It is level as a floor, and a good square mile in circumference. In the centre is a large and commodious stable, and contiguous thereto a building where the alcoholic wants of sporting humanity are attended to. The legitimate entrance to the island is across a long floating bridge, almost equal to that of JULIUS CÆSAR's, but many came on from boats. I grieve to say most of them crossed from Troy on the track of the Hudson River Railroad. The admission to the Course was one dollar for every member of the human race. This was universally conceded to be too much, and, although Mr. PAFF should have a benefit for his enterprise in laying out the track, and to repay him for the damage caused by the freshet, (the island was about twenty feet under water, and the bridge carried away,) yet in future races it will prevent large numbers from attending, and on the present occasion many took a great deal of trouble to go by boat who would cheerfully have paid fifty cents. But when the crowd got on the island all were pleased with the track. Although not posted up in sporting matters, I prophesy a long career for the "Empire Course."

No public event ever yet came off at the precise hour it was set down for, and the crowd just began to get impatient when the judges, Messrs. SMITH, WATERMAN, ELIJAH SIMMONS, GIL CRANE and C. B. DEXTER assumed their places in a sort of lighthouse, and the horses made a good start for their twenty-mile goal. First came the Sheehan horse, with a light yellow trotting buggy, and close at his heels the Dalton, with a buggy whose wheels were somewhat darker, and away they went. And thus it was for seventeen long miles, light yellow and dark, one right behind the other, sometimes a very little further off than at others, but always the same position, until it seemed that they were to continue so. By no means! "The Dalton's caught him!" "Passed him!" "He's ahead!" "Hurrah!" Sure enough, on the eighteenth mile the positions were reversed, and on the nineteenth, in spite of many brushes and skirmishes, the Dalton preserved his lead as they came around. Now came the tug of war. Everybody stood up as high as nature would permit him. "Dalton's ahead!" "Sheehan's run passed him!" "Dalton ahead again!" "Sheehan's run by!" until the light yellow wheels came in ahead, and Mr. SHEEHAN exultingly drove back, while DALTON more sensibly put his jaded animal into the stable. Then all was uncertainty, whether it was fair, a sort of question of constitutionality, and the judges, somewhat more prompt than their brethren in the Court of Appeals, decided that it was not fair on Mr. SHEEHAN's part to run during the last mile, and that Mr. DALTON, though in some four lengths behind his competitor, should yet win the money; and this American Think Bonny had the credit of going twenty miles without being touched by the whip, and of only breaking once. The time, as you know, was 1 h., 12 min., 54 sec.

A grand rush was made for home forthwith. Also for the vanity of human expectations! "Frustis descensus Averni, sed revocare gradum." The floating bridge was broken. It seems that while we were disporting ourselves and looking at the race, the crowd on the main land charged the bridge en masse instead of the bridge charging them one dollar. The sappers and miners in the employ of the proprietor resisted, and the consequence was a general disruption of the elements of the bridge, and their floating to New-York. Until they were replaced we had to wait. Fortunately there was plenty of material for conversation, and bets were paid, &c., during the interval, but at last we were off. Some went straight home, some to the numerous hotels which line the Troy and Albany road, and some ons set fire to the barn near the toll-gate, which made a bright light and sent the crowd in search of some new excitement.

A crowd will have some amusement: generally they prefer those upon which the law frowns. Sweet—so called on account of the effect produced upon its votaries—was indulged in. King Alcohol—that potent monarch—had his subjects, but not on the island; I did not see a single drunken man on the course. One individual with a red trotting wagon, insisted on keeping up with the race, until put off by the police. Several fights ensued during the afternoon, besides the battle of the bridge, which was quite a serious affair, and produced several bloody countenances, besides submerging every one engaged in it, by the bridge sinking some distance under its increased weight. The scene larceny were rather more numerous than those of assault and battery, which generally occupy more than half of the calendar.

Thomas Welsh was a very decent looking laboring man in overalls. He stole a barrel, June 22, from James Coyle, No. 60 West Broadway. Judge Osborne—Well, what have you got to say? Prisoner—I took it, but I did not know exactly what I was doing: I had been drinking at the time. Judge—He don't look like a thief, and this is his first offence. We find him guilty and suspend sentence. The property was worth only a dollar.

Mary Ann Wilson (colored) appeared with her face badly cut to testify that Margaret Allen (also dark-complexioned) had committed an assault upon and cut her with a cleaver. The occurrence took place at the corner of Worth-street and Mission-place, June 22. Judge Osborne—She's a bad wench; I know her. We find you guilty, Margaret, and send you to the Penitentiary for 6 months.

Martin Delany, a boy about 13 years old, stole a pair of garters worth $1, from Samuel S. Rennan, June 24, at No. 233 Greenwich-street. Judge Osborne said he was an old offender, and it was well known in that neighbood that he obtained his living by thieving. He was sentenced to the Penitentiary for 6 months.

John Wagner, a Swedish sailor, was charged with stealing a table cover worth 75 cents from Peter McCluskey, No. 57 Baxter-street, June 23. The evidence showed that the prisoner was "kind a' sky-larking" when he took the cloth and had no intention of stealing it. The Judge asked the prisoner if he had any statement to make, but he could not speak English. The complainant acknowledged that he had promised to let him off if he'd pay 75 cents. Judge—I'm satisfied this is a trick played on this man, who is a stranger here. We acquit him. Complainant—And can't I recover the value of my table-cloth, Sir? Judge—No, Sir, not from us.

Patrick Duffy stole some curtains from Francis Fitzsimmons, No. 8 Astor place, April 16. They were found in his pocket, though how he managed to stuff them in was a problem. He was sent to the Penitentiary for 4 months.

Thomas Wade, James Henry Webb, and Henry Walker, all boys, and one (Walker) a negro, were charged with stealing some plumber's tools and other articles from Thomas Cochrane, Ninth-avenue, corner of Fortieth street, June 23. A police officer testified that he caught them with the articles in their possession. The mother of the two white boys pleaded for their discharge. Judge—Did you not yourself acknowledge to me yesterday that they are both addicted to stealing? Mother—Yes, but the little boy is so young. Judge—We find the two big boys guilty, and sentence them to the Penitentiary four months each. Let the little boy go home with his mother. James, the youngest, was very small, and looked as if he was naturally capable of better things.

Gilbert Demsrest, also a boy, was accused of malicious mischief, in damaging the property of Margaret G. Maad to the extent of $100. He pleaded not guilty. The prosecutor only wantad him to be discharged from committing the offence again. Judge—Well, he pleads not guilty. (To prisoner)—If you're guilty, you had better say so, and save the trouble of examining witnesses. Counsel—You had better plead guilty, my son—you know you did it, and were caught at it several times. Did not you do it? Prisoner—(with hesitation)—Well, I did some of it. He was found guilty, and sentence suspended, with the assurance, that if he did not behave in future he would be punished.

Owen McGee committed an assault and battery on officer Matthew H. O'Connor, who caught him stealing vegetables, and tried to arrest him, June 24. Judge Osborne—He ought to have been tried for petit larceny, too. He has been here before, I recognize him. We find him guilty and sentence him to the Penitentiary for six months.

Mary Ann Brown, a young woman dressed à la mode, flounced and hooped and with straw-colored ribbons in her hat, had stolen a clock, worth $3, from Julee G. Jaccord, No. 21 Sixth avenue, June 22. This was her fourth appearance before this tribunal. It seems another woman, her accomplice, went into the store and was seen to put the clock under her hoops. When she went out she let it drop on the sidewalk, and the prisoner picked it up, put it under her cloak, and was walking off when she was arrested. Judge Osborne—What have you to say for yourself? Prisoner—A woman dropped the clock under my feet, and I had just picked it up when they came up and charged me with stealing it. Judge—You've been here so often before, Mary Ann, that we find it necessary to punish you to the full extent. Penitentiary for six months.

George Stebbins and Edward Ramsen, boys, stole from Anthony Sweckert one lead pattern, and pleaded guilty. They were sent to the House of Refuge.

Louis Winter took some cabinet-maker's tools, belonging to Herman Kettel, No. 51 Hudson-street, May 22, intending, he said, "to set up business for himself." "It's a poor way to commence business, my friend," said Judge Osborne. His counsel pleaded that he had never committed a crime before. Judge Osborne—He's been in the State Prison at Sing Sing. Sentence, Penitentiary for four months.

Joseph Perry pleaded guilty to stealing some silver coins from his emp oyer, Lymnn Andrews, No. 13 Carmine street, June 23. He was remanded that further inquiries might be made about his character, with a view to mitigate his punishment.

Georga Davis was charged by Abram Levy with assault and battery, in that, to wit: "he took him by the arm and used horrible language." Judge Osborne—We don't try prisoners for using bad language. The prisoner said he "had an argument" with the prosecutor about the school question, and the latter used as bad language as he did. He was found guilty, and ordered to go the Jeffarson Market Police Court and be bound over to keep the peace.

William C. Vandorn recently became a Washington Market cartman. It is a custom with the cartmen down there to make each new comer treat the crowd. Accordingly, June 18, Ambrose Horton and other carmen came to Vandorn and told him he must treat. He wouldn't do it, and they undertook to "put him under the board" and hold him till he promised compliance with their demands. Horton pushed his hat over his eyes with a view to this object, when Vandorn called him "a son of a b—h" Horton hereupon struck him and broke his nose, for which assault Vandorn appeard to prosecute him. The friends of both were numerously examined, and the prisoner was fined $10. Chauncy Schaffer, Esq., (for the prosecutor,) said, on hearing the sentance, "I advise my client to carry a revolver hereafter."

James Smith, June 22, stole a bag of bams from the grocary of Wm. R. Drayton. Judge—What bnve you got to say? Prisoner—A boy came and told me he'd give ma a shilling to carry this bag to Broadway. Judge, (laconically) — Guilty — Panitentiary, four months.

John Greene (colored) hit little John Boniface with a stone, No. 103 Thompson street. The complainant's father only wanted the prisoner bound over not to hit his boy again. Greene's employer said he was a quiet, peaceable man. Judge Osborne—Will you go bail for his good behavior? Employer wouldn't do that, but promised to see that he behaved himself, and sentence was suspended.

Catharine Colby was charged with stealing $20 in bank bills from Margaret Kenny. The Judge said there was not sufficient evidence to bring it home to her.—so she took herself home.

Henry Force, charged with assaulting John Kane of the First Ward Police, was permitted to go, the officer not appearing.

In the case of Charles Harrison, (a well-known thief, said the Judge,) charged with stealing a coat from Daniel Lynch, an officer was a principal witness. The Clerk called him and ba did not appear Judge Osborne—It's of no use to call an officer, I'll make complaint against every one of them. Remand the prisoner till Saturday.

Rachel Ingraham was charged with stealing wearing apparel worth $2 from Andrew Pryor, June 19. He did not appear and she was discharged.

John Murray, charged with assault and battery on James Hearne June 23, Matthew Monahan, charged with assault and battery on Windfred Menahao June 7, Peter Quinn, charged with stealing a coat from Martin Finch June 20, and John Williams, charged with stealing a bag of peas from Dennis Sullivan, were all discharged, the complainants not appearing.

James H. Moore, charged with stealing from John Harbett, was remanded for the same reason to Saturday.

Wilhiot Carroll pleaded guilty to assaulting Hugh McGowan, June 14 The complainant wanted to let him off and sentence was suspended.

George Schmidt made a similar charge against Thomas Delany. Judge Osborne (to prosecutor)—Want to let this man go? Prosecutor—I Dutch—not understand. Judge—Well, it don't amount to much. Let him go. (Aside)—The Court is good-natured today.

John Finnegan had kicked Peter O'Reilly, a Twentieth Ward Policeman, June 21. The officer did not appear, and John was discharged.

Emma Crocker was complained of by James Ryan, (who sells liquor in the first story of the house No. 3 Rector-street, the basement of which she occupies,) for keeping a disorderly house. It appeared to be a nuisance to him only and not to the public. She was acquitted.

Susan McCarroll on St. Patrick's day in the afternoon, going into the house No. 93 Elm-street, which her mistress and George Schuchardt and family conjointly occupy, was asked by the wife of the latter what she was doing there. She answered "none of your business," whereupon George struck and kicked her on the leg and body. It appeared that she had drank a little that morning, but she vowed she was never drunk in her life. Her employer (an Irish citizen) gave her an excellent character, and said there was no one present at the assault "Nayther man nor marrid" but George, his wife, and Susan. Counsel questioned Susan closely about her fondness for "the craythure." The Judge thought that, however she might have a right to liquor, he (the prisoner) had no right to lick her. He was found guilty and sentence suspended.

Thomas Welsh, charged with assault and battery on Margaret Rooney June 21, was discharged, no witness appearing, and the Court adjourned.

Crop Prospect.

From the Cincinnati Price Current, June 24.

The weather, during the past week, has been unusually cool for midsummer, and a large quantity of rain has fallen at intervals. With the exception of corn, the growing crops are doing well, and the premise of an abundant harvest is good. Corn is backward, and owing to the wet state of the ground cannot be worked, so that it cannot be called in a favorable position, and the weather during the coming two months must be of a most favorable character to make a full crop. Wheat is doing well, and in the vicinity of this city is now in bloom. The wheat harvest will be three weeks later than usual. A subscriber writing from Tennessee says the crop in that State will be a very large one, but the harvesting will not commence before the middle of July.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

No news from the Court of Appeals, nor any promise of the time when there will be any news. If we do not get the decision next week, the probabilities are that we shall have to wait until after the 4th of July, before we can know what is to be the fate of the Metropolitan Police.

We are happy to learn that the health of General WOOL has greatly improved. A letter from Troy, dated last evening, says: "the General is now entirely out of danger. The crisis of his disease arrived on Tuesday morning, at which time Dr. MCNAUGHTON, of Albany, and Dr. WATKYNS, Mayor of this city, were called in to counsel and advise with the General's regular physician, Dr THORN, who had been attending him alone since the Sunday previous. During the whole of Tuesday the General's life hung in the balance of uncertainty, but towards evening he improved, and was then out of immediate danger. Since that time there has been no relapse, and he has been gradually getting better, and even yesterday a return of the disease was considered almost out of the question. This morning he was sitting up in a chair. His recovery has been almost as sudden as his illness."

The Mormons in this vicinity are making preparations for having a "great time" on the Fourth of July, at Norwalk, Conn. An oration is to be delivered by President APPLEBY, the High Priest of the Eastern Conferences, and other ceremonies will take place. In the meantime, we publish on our second page, this morning, two letters—one from a "Gladdenite," giving some very interesting statements respecting the aims of the Mormons in Utah, and the other from a man formerly a Mormon Elder, detailing some of the disgusting atrocities which are of every-day occurrence at Salt Lake City, and in the Territory of which it is the capital. They are both well worthy the attention of the reader.

The Georgia Democratic State Convention met at Milledgeville, on Wednesday. Resolutions were passed indorsing the Cincinnati Platform and denouncing Governor WALKER's policy in Kansas. Much difficulty was experienced in selecting a candidate for Governor—twenty-one unsuccessful ballotings having been had. At last, on the twenty-second ballot, one of the candidates having withdrawn, Mr. LUMPKIN received 179 votes, and Mr. LAMAR 174, and a Committee of Conference was appointed to devise means to heal differences.

A stir has been made in Norfolk, Va., by the discovery of defalcations to a large amount by the Teller, PANNELL, of the Farmers' Bank in that city. It appears that PANNELL has for years carried on a series of robberies of the Bank, and when detection became imminent, attempted, as is alleged, to take the lives of the officers, by mingling arsenic with the beverage used at their usual morning lunch. A warrant was issued for the arrest of PANNELL, but he has fled to parts unknown.

At the Dutchess County Circuit, ABRAHAM COLE, indicted for the murder of CHARLES SALPAUGH and AARON COLE, at Steep Rock, pleaded not guilty, and the case went over to September Circuit, the Court refusing to admit him to bail.

A Post-Office clerk, named COWLAN, at Portsmouth, Va., has been detected in robbing the mail-bags in the office. He acknowledged the theft of $1,800.

The City Inspector increased his street-cleaning force yesterday to some 1,000 men. They are working in all the Wards but the Seventeenth, which still lacks a dumping place, but boats are to be procured soon for its rubbish. The intention is to go through the Wards regularly, not to commence at the dirtiest spots first. Where double forces are engaged the system has been adopted of starting each gang simultaneously on parallel streets, a block apart. This has stirred up an old-fashioned country emulation among the men, which is telling well, besides that it keeps them directly under the eye of the Inspector. Dirt carts continue scarce, and that is why a larger force is not employed. The prospect is, however, that the streets will be comparatively respectable by the 4th of July.

In the Supreme Court yesterday the Street Commissioner's case was continued before Judge PEABODY. Mr. FIELD opened the case for Mr. CONOVER, and Mr. BUSTEED for Mr. DEVELIN. The substance of their arguments on the legal questions were embraced in their points, published in The TIMES on the 24th and 25th inst. The room was crowded, and the interest does not much abate yet. The Court adjourned until to-day at 11 o'clock, when Mr. BRADY will speak.

The Eucleian Society of the New-York University held their anniversary meeting last night. BENJAMIN V. ABBOTT, Esq., delivered the address, and speeches were made by the graduate and under-graduate members.

The measure-worms on the trees of the Park, and in the streets, are becoming more troublesome since the rainy weather is over. In another column some timely suggestions on this subject are presented.

The Summer, yesterday, was fairly inaugurated by the hottest day of the year. The thermometer was above 80°, and umbrellas and sunshades were numerous in the streets. There has not yet been indications of a pestilence.

Four of the old Police of the Second Ward went over yesterday to the Metropolitan Commissioners, and as many more from the same Ward are expected to do the same to-day.

EMIGRANTS FROM AFRICA.—The most remarkable instance we have lately seen of the performance or that not very difficult operation, commonly called "whipping the devil round the stump," is afforded by the Charleston Mercury, in an article on "Emigration from Africa." The Mercury has the grace to admit that reopening the Slave-trade with Africa is not advisable, on account of its being illegal; but then it thinks the law against the importation of slaves may be very easily avoided, and we must admit that, though the plan proposed by the Mercury is just the reverse of chivalric or honorable, it would be strictly feasible provided no one should interfere to prevent it. The Mercury supposes that:

> "Emigrants from Africa may just as legitimately be brought into the United States as emigrants from Germany or Ireland. Nor will the circumstance of an agreement being previously made for employment and wages at all affect the legality of the importation. Hundreds, thousands are being imported daily from Europe, under agreements with the manufacturers of New England, to carry on their factories. If the Government of the United States shall, therefore, determine that the importation of negroes from the African coast, by England and France, as emigrants into the West India Islands, is not the African Slave Trade, then the whole trade of bringing negroes from Africa is also open to the Southern States."

Very ingeniously stated, beyond a cavil. There is certainly no law, that we are aware of, to prevent Africans from hiring themselves out to do a certain piece of work, and then coming over here to fulfill their contracts. But this is not exactly what the Mercury aims at; it is, in fact, as might be supposed, nothing than African slaves that it would convert the emigrants into the moment they touch our soil. Here is a new interpretation of the principle of State sovereignty:

> "What becomes of the negroes after they are imported into a State will be an affair of the State. The general Government can have nothing to do with it. The enforcement of any contract for wages will be entirely within the jurisdiction of the Courts of the States. And if public opinion, or the real understanding of the emigrants, establishes practically that they shall be slaves, there is no redress by any other authority than that of the States in which they are located."

British Military Reform.

The subject of military education is just now exciting a great deal of discussion in England, and though, to a foreigner who casts a careless glance over the newspapers, it may seem simply and purely a question of momentary and of professional interest, it nevertheless possesses an importance not only far greater than the name indicates, but far greater than many of those who handle it even dream of. It involves not merely the manner in which officers shall be trained for the army, but the selection of the class from which they shall be drawn. The army is one of the last strongholds of the aristocracy, and in defending their right to lead it against the attacks of military reformers they defend themselves against the remorseless onslaughts of an insatiate democracy. Ever since the commencement of the present century the pace with which England has been traveling in our track, if not rapid, has been at least steady. The Reform bill, the repeal of the Corn Laws, the abolition of the Stamp duty, the adoption of the principle of competitive examinations for the civil service, the rapid rise of commercial men, or scions of great commercial houses into positions of political eminence, have all been absolute triumphs of the principle of equality which lies so broadly at the base of all great political changes in our day. The Crimean war inaugurated on the part of the popular party a sort of general supervision of the military operations through the medium of the press; an inroad upon aristocratic privileges, the importance of which can only be estimated by those who remember that the feeling is still strong in England amongst the "territorial interest," which died out in France with the Revolution, that war is a game at which only "gentlemen" should play, and which only monarchs should criticise. The cry which was raised by the disasters which marked the Winter campaign of 1854–5, for the abolition of the system of purchase of commissions, means in reality not simply—"give us better officers," but give us officers of a different class. Strange as the assertion may seem to those who fancy, and there are many such in this country as well as on the Continent, that an English military commission can be bought and sold in the market like bank stock or a government annuity, the great evil of the present mode of officering the English army lies not so much in the sale of appointments, as in the manner of selecting those who may buy them. The country is not seriously injured by the regulation that any man who enters the army must have £500 to £1,000 sterling at command, but it is seriously injured by the fact that no man, rich or poor, can obtain a commission without being able to bring special influence to bear on the authorities at the War Office. The field of choice is not so very much narrowed by confining it to men of means, as to seriously interfere with the public service. The finest army in the world might be well officered without going in search of cadets below that class of English society which keeps a brougham and two footmen.

It may be necessary to explain, for the information of many of our readers, that commissions are not sold in market overt. The process is this: When an officer wants to retire from the service he communicates his intention to all the officers of the regiment below him in rank, and learns from them whether they are prepared to compensate him for doing so. As promotion in any other way is uncommonly slow, they nearly always are ready to make it worth his while to take his departure. Now there is a price fixed by the War office for each Commission, and the regulations allow no officer to receive anything above that sum. But as is usual in such cases in civil as well as military life, the regulation is broken through, and each regiment has a price of its own attached to each rank, over and above the regulation price. Thus when a captain wants to leave the service—suppose his Commission to be worth legally £1,000—the subalterns of his company club, and make it up to £1,500 for him, and each rises one step, having each contributed in proportion to his rank. So far, and saving individual cases of hardship in which some unlucky wight, being unable to contribute his quota, is left behind in the general rise, the system is not very much worse than promotion by seniority which prevails in our own service. The outgoing officer simply receives back from the regiment the sum which he spent in getting into it. It is in supplying the place left vacant at the bottom of the ladder, that the real virus of the abuse shows itself. This part of the proceeding is entirely in the hands of the Secretary at War. He has on his list some hundreds, in time of war generally some thousands of names of candidates for Commissions, all of them ready and willing to pay the prescribed sum for a Commission, either in the cavalry or infantry. So far the Manchester Cotton Spinner and the Devonshire Squire are on a footing of perfect equality. If money were all that was necessary, a Howard or a Percy would have no advantage over a Buggins or a Muggins. But in making the selection of names to fill vacancies, far from being guided either by merit or money, the authorities are invariably and notoriously guided solely by the amount of influence, whether territorial, or political, or domestic, which can be brought to bear on them. A sprig of nobility is consequently sure of a Commission in a few months; a man of small connections can "get his name down" without any difficulty, but he may feel pretty sure it will stay down full long enough. It is only the favored few who are allowed to buy.

The reform for which the public are clamorous has been for some time in operation in the artillery and engineers, as in those corps preliminary instruction is absolutely necessary. Its application to the other arms of the service, and particularly to the staff, is imperiously demanded, and the demand resisted with all the tenacity of which time, tradition, prestige and esprit de corps can lend to an old abuse. The popular party ask for military schools open to all classes on examination, and for the bestowal of branch commissions upon the most meritorious students, degrees of merit to be ascertained, also, by examination. A test of this sort would, undoubtedly, cause the transfer of the army, within a very few years, into the hands of a totally different class of officers,—men of less means and less polish, but of equal courage and greater skill. It would, no doubt, be followed ere long by promotion on a limited scale from the ranks, and the infusion into the whole service of a democratic spirit. The effect of the change upon the mass of the people would be immense. The wider the field opened to merit the more impatient do the masses become of all distinctions which rest on a purely arbitrary basis, and as soon as privileges, in a country possessing a free press and representative institutions, begin to be questioned, their speedy downfall may be safely predicted. We know of no political change except the abolition of the State Church, likely to produce graver results than Army Reform, and yet, probably, to the superficial observer few changes may seem more restricted in their operation and results.

As the time appointed for launching the mammoth steamship Great Eastern approaches, it becomes a matter of interest to know at what American port she will terminate her first voyage across the Atlantic. There are but few of our seaports that have a depth and expanse of water sufficient to accommodate "this Triton of the Minnows." Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore are out of the question; and this fact has encouraged some of our smaller ports to compete for the honor of welcoming the monster ship, on her first visit to America. The rural districts, bordering on the seashore, from away Down East to the Capes of Old Virginia, are greatly excited in the matter; and are discovering their own wonderful excellences and advantages, with an ease that astonishes themselves and greatly amuses their neighbors. The ecstatic Governor of Virginia is firmly persuaded that Norfolk is the only suitable harbor for the ship on the American Coast; while the cool Yankees of Portland, in the State of Maine, "rayther guess" she'll have to tie up there "any how"—since there is no harbor as deep as Portland harbor. As the season advances, we shall probably have an analysis of Holmes' Hole, and other provincial bays that boast of deep channels or good anchorages, and whose people are impressed with the idea that all which a monster ship, like the Great Eastern, requires in her port of destination is ample room and verge enough to float safely when she gets in, and to turn around easily when she wants to get out.

In regard to this competition, which has long been vexing our neighbors East and South, New-York has, up to the present time, preserved a "masterly inactivity," which is characteristic of her commercial greatness. The citizens of New-York have felt that, if the owners of the Great Eastern are influenced by those motives of gain which influence other men embarking in great commercial enterprises, they will send their ship to that port (capable of receiving her) where she can make the most money. The ship must seek a port that can furnish business for her—business sufficient to pay her expenses, and leave a reasonable profit for her owners. Looking at the matter in this light, it must be allowed that New-York, as the commercial metropolis of America, is the only proper destination of the Great Eastern.

Those who have invited the Great Eastern to other ports, have been careful to state, in all their calculations, that the ship cannot enter this port because the water on Sandy Hook bar, which is twenty-three feet deep at low tide and twenty-seven feet at high tide, is too shallow for her draught. The statement is true if the ship will draw, as is said, thirty feet with her coals and cargo aboard, and twenty-six feet without them.

But, unfortunately for the effect of these statements, the ship channel by Sandy Hook is not the only entrance from the sea to our harbor. There is another entrance by way of Long Island Sound, which has entirely escaped the notice of our anxious friends in Norfolk and Portland. By this entrance the shallowest water in any part of the channel is twenty-eight feet at low tide, and the Spring-tides rising eight feet, give a sufficient depth, even on these shallows, to accommodate the Great Eastern, with all her coals and cargo aboard. A ship entering the Sound, between Montauk Point and Block Island, has an average depth, in the channel of over one hundred feet, all the way up to the Narrows, at Fort Schuyler, which is twenty miles from the Battery. The chart of the Soundings made by the Coast Survey gives a depth of eighty-six feet in mid-channel off Fort Schuyler. From this point, approaching the City, the mid-channel soundings on the chart vary from 39 feet up to 179 feet, until we come to the point of Astoria, where, in one spot, 32 feet is given at low tide. The natural landing-place of the Great Eastern, entering our port by this channel, will be at Morris' Wharf, near the foot of One Hundred and Sixth-street. The shallowest water at this wharf is thirty-two feet at low tide. Were the channel through Hell Gate improved, by removing certain rocks, and regulating the currents in accordance with the plan proposed by the Coast Survey, and by our late Board of Harbor Commissioners, the Great Eastern could easily pass up into the East River, through the channel on the westerly side of Blackwell's Island, where the soundings range from fifty feet to eighty-one feet at low tide.

The extreme length of the Great Eastern is 680 feet. The wharf at Port Morris is 600 feet long, and will therefore furnish ample room for loading and discharging the ship. From the wharf a railroad-track runs up to the Harlem Road, furnishing direct railroad communication with the lower part of the City for one shilling; and, by the connections of the Harlem Road with all the large cities of New-England, Canada and the West, at a less expense than they can be reached from Portland. Why, then, should any one believe that the Great Eastern must go to Norfolk or to Portland to find moorings?

We have lately become accustomed to large ships. We have talked about the Niagara, the Persia, the Vanderbilt and the Adriatic as large ships; but a comparison of their dimensions, which we annex, with the dimensions of the Great Eastern, shows the latter to be the real "Triton of the minnows"—the great ship of all ships—fit only to find her destination in the harbor of the great Metropolis:

	Length.	Breadth.	Depth.
Vanderbilt	335 feet.	49 feet.	33 feet.
Niagara	345 feet.	55 feet.	31 feet.
Adriatic	354 feet.	50 feet.	33 feet.
Persia	390 feet.	45 feet.	32 feet.
Great Eastern	684 feet.	86 feet.	70 feet.

It is said that this monster ship will be able to stow 10,000 tons of coal and 5,000 tons of freight, and will at the same time accommodate 20,000 persons, including 4,000 first-class passengers. Where, but in the port of New-York, can such a ship find business enough to pay her expenses?

Highway to the Pacific.

There is no ignoring the fact that a large preponderance of public sentiment is in favor of a central route for the California overland mail service, and the Pacific Railroad, of which it is the pioneer, and by which it must some day be superseded. If any man doubts the prevalence of this sentiment, a single glance at our newspaper exchanges from all parts of the country, would convince him that it is almost unanimous. It would show him, also, that the comparatively small number whose local prejudices or interests naturally lead them to favor the Southern route, scarcely attempt an argument in support of their plan. Indeed, the facts are so manifestly against them, that their silence is "masterly," as was the "inactivity" which Mr. CALHOUN advocated on a certain occasion.

On the other hand, those who would have a route selected with due regard to the great centres of commercial enterprise and industry, have over and over again presented substantial reasons for their faith, and pointed out the manifest objections to the route which rumor designates as the one informally decided upon at Washington. The Administration cannot be insensible to these indications of popular sentiment, and the evidences of its wisdom and sagacity. We still trust, therefore, that, upon a careful consideration of the whole case, the President and his Cabinet will repudiate the extreme Southern route, and so manifest their determination to regard national rather than sectional interests.

That there are differences of opinion in the Cabinet upon this subject is probable. The fact that the Washington Union has recently published a series of valuable articles in favor of a central route, may be taken as an indication that the views we have expressed find influential supporters at Court,—else the Administration organ would not have indorsed them with so much force and ability. On the other hand Secretary of the Interior THOMPSON and Postmaster-General BROWN are known to be zealous partisans of the route deemed most advantageous to the extreme Southern portion of the Confederacy. To their energetic advocacy, doubtless, that proposition is indebted for toleration in opposition to the almost unanimous sentiment of four-fifths of the Union.

It was formerly urged in behalf of the Southern route, that it was much shorter than any other. Indeed, the late Secretary of War, Mr. DAVIS, so reported to Congress after examination of the Pacific Railroad surveys. That supposition is now known to be erroneous. The report made by Captain WHIPPLE, of the Army, and which will soon be published, shows that, instead of the Texas and El Paso route being the shortest by 230 miles, as reported by Secretary DAVIS, it is, in fact, 116 miles longer than the middle route, for which St. Louis would be the natural Eastern terminus. WHIPPLE's survey is by far the most careful and accurate yet made of the central route, and its reported results are entirely reliable. His route is almost free from arid desert, contains abundant water, grass stone and timber, and is, therefore, one upon which healthy settlements may be expected to spring into life, and over which emigration will naturally and advantageously find its way. It is free, also, from obstruction by snow, at all seasons; its climate is represented to be salubrious in the highest degree, and a railroad over it would require no grades so heavy as some which the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad use without difficulty.

If Mr. BUCHANAN overlooks all these manifest advantages, and makes selection of a route utterly destitute of any of them, he will expect to furnish the public with good and substantial reasons therefor. Unless he can do this—and we believe it is impossible—we have little fear that the ardent zeal of Messrs. BROWN and THOMPSON will be permitted to outweigh the important considerations suggested in behalf of the central national route.

Neptune's Car.

The heroine whom we were so slow to recognize when she was in the midst of us, is winning honors now from all the world. When Mrs. PATTEN reached New-York with the husband whose life she had saved by her care, and the ship which she had preserved by her courage—she was suffered to take her way again to her home in Massachusetts, almost uncheered by the voice of uttered sympathy; and oppressed with pecuniary anxieties which the small sum advanced to her by the underwriters whose property she had rescued from destruction was quite insufficient to dissipate.

The simple story of her bravery and her affection, of her true womanhood and her glorious wifehood, however, had gone before her, and it is echoing back to us now from the lips of eloquent orators at home, and from far foreign shores.

Her name was coupled, not unworthily, with that of FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE by EDWARD EVERETT, in his address at the inauguration of the statue of WARREN, and a recent London paper informs us that while a generous Briton has been moved by the tale to the production of an occasional poem, just published in London, another has been impelled by it to the humbler but not less expressive homage of a handsome contribution in aid of the heroine, who, after all, can neither be fed with praises nor lodged in poems.

The merchants of Boston have taken up her case, too, with proper spirit, and have resolved that she shall be provided for permanently. Her husband, be it understood, has recovered from his dangerous illness, with the utter loss of his hearing and his sight. He can sail the seas no more, and the noble wife who braved for him the storms of the great deep, and the temper of mutinous men, must now meet the harder and wearier trials of a life of such labor as society offers to women, unless the community to which she belongs, and upon which her achievement will reflect so much permanent distinction, shall do itself and her the justice to adopt her into its fostering care. When, in years to come, the name of Mrs. PATTEN shall be made the theme of song and speech, let not any recollections be coupled with it which shall make our descendants blush for their ancestry.

The Bostonians propose that the women of America shall at least be offered the opportunity of honoring their sex, in the person of this young wife. The proposition is most just—and we trust that no time will be lost in organizing such a subscription among the women of the metropolis as shall make the loving labors of our Boston neighbors a generous superfluity. Who will begin the good work?

Favors to the Enemy.

We regret to say that another candidate for the bad eminence attained in our history by those exceptional wretches, BENEDICT ARNOLD and AARON BURR, has been discovered at Washington. It is to the States, a journal recently established at the seat of Government, that we are indebted for this melancholy information, and we are only waiting upon the further developments promised by the States to blast the name of the offender with a brand of just and everlasting scorn. For, it appears to be still uncertain upon which one of the two suspected parties the vengeance of an outraged nation ought to fall.

One of these persons bears the name of FLAGG—the other that of HUNTER. Both are officers employed by the Government in the State Department, HUNTER having filled the responsible post of Chief Clerk in that department since 1829. It was upon this gentleman that suspicion first rested—but in a telegraphic correspondence of yesterday it was intimated that "HUNTER's guilt was not conclusively established"—and a dark innuendo has been thrown out which would tend to exonerate both HUNTER and FLAGG, and to fix the crime upon no less conspicuous a person than Ex-Secretary of State MARCY! Precisely what the measure of this crime is of which the imputation has thus been bandied back and forth, our readers may, perhaps, be anxious to know—and we grieve to be obliged to state that as at present defined it cannot be treated as anything milder than high treason. For it surely is high treason to afford aid and comfort to a natural enemy—and the States plainly charges that some one in the confidence of the Government has been doing just this thing.

"But to what enemy?" asks the bewildered reader, heretofore unconscious that the Government of his native land was engaged in active hostilities with any foe more formidable than the Plug-Uglies or the Mormons. Listen, bewildered reader, and be informed!

It is averred with solemnity by the Washington States that, by some clerk or clerks employed in the Department of State, copies of public documents have been forwarded to two "Know-Nothing" Journals in the West—and this, we are requested to understand, is a "bestowing of favors on the enemy," and therefore an act of high treason.

There is nothing jocular in this proposition. It is made by the States with seriousness and solemnity. It becomes a topic of telegraphic information and of excited discussion. It is gravely met and answered with authority by one of the "accused" parties, Mr. FLAGG, who exculpates himself by declaring that Secretary MARCY is the guilty party—that venerable statesman having ordered (no doubt in a moment of jubilant and inconsiderate generosity) that the public documents should be forwarded to certain leading journals throughout the country, "irrespective of party."

It is really somewhat difficult for us to decide how such a proceeding as this should be treated. If we consider merely the nature of the charge, we must dwell upon it as the most amusing instance of illimitable impudence which has of late engaged the public attention. If, on the other hand, we regard the way in which it has been received, we must point to the matter as one of the most melancholy of the many melancholy proofs of the degradation inflicted upon our politics, and our public life, by the spirit of party which our recent history affords. The editor of a partisan journal comes forward and denounces an official of the National Government for extending the usual courtesies of the Department to which he belongs to two respectable and influential newspapers, whose publishers, editors and subscribers are presumably citizens of the United States, even though they do not happen to agree in their political sentiments with the individual who assails them. And lo! instead of exposing himself to universal scorn and inextinguishable ridicule, by this act of monstrous and absurd assumption, the offender is honored with controversial statements from the officials whom he has insulted by treating them as sworn and harnessed hacks of a particular party!

Is there nothing here for good citizens to ponder upon? And would it not be well for Washington journals, like the National Intelligencer, which find space in their columns for elaborate jeremiads over the decay of law and order in New-York, to bestow some little attention upon the demoralization which has evidently made such formidable progress in the nominal heart of the country, and actual seat of the National Administration?

A SMALL NIBBLE FOR ARCHITECTS.—That generous American merchant, Mr. GEORGE PEABODY, having made a free gift of nearly half a million of dollars to the city of Baltimore, for the endowment of an academy of music, library and reading, the trustees of the fund have offered the small sum of five hundred as a reward for the best plan offered in competition, for the building to be erected, with the privilege of employing the author of the accepted plan or not as they may choose. It can hardly be expected that such an insignificant premium as this should tempt any architect of ordinary ability to waste his time in making designs for a building of so much pretensions. The generosity of Mr. PEABODY ought to have infused a more liberal spirit into the trustees of so munificent a gift. Double the sum offered would be small enough for the work required, and even at that, there are few architects whose plans would be likely to prove acceptable, who would be tempted to risk the loss of their time in a competition for such a reward. We do not know what the precise nature of the Peabody Institute is to be; but to be worthy the noble gift of its founder, it ought to be a more magnificent structure than the very small premium offered for a design seems to promise.

We are permitted to make the following extract from a letter received by a merchant of this City, from his correspondent in Norfolk, Va., giving details of a case of remarkable rascality, concerning which the Norfolk papers furnish little information. The writer, a well-informed authority, says:

NORFOLK, Monday, June 22, 1857.

We have had quite a stir in this place a few days past. It seems that certain sums of money have been missed from the vaults of the Farmers' Bank for several years past, and a number of depositors have been short credited from time to time from $20 to $100. It now appears that the Teller, WILLIAM PANNELL, is the rogue, and that he has been swindling the Bank ever since he has been there. PANNELL entered the Bank as runner, and was promoted to the position of Teller upon the death of Mr. HATTON, the former Teller, who died during the fever. The late Cashier Mr. CHAMBERLAIN, had to pay some $1,100 deficiency, and in consequence left the Bank. The present Cashier, Mr. TUNSTALL, had to make good a special deposit of $800. It is understood that the former Teller had, in more than one instance, to refund amounts that were found to be short. It has been the custom of some of the officers of the Bank to retire up-stairs in the Bank building at 11 o'clock in the morning to partake of a lunch. They went up the other day as usual, and found that arsenic had been introduced into their favorite beverage, which they fortunately discovered in time. PANNELL borrowed the keys of the Bank the afternoon previous to this, and was seen to come from the room. It is generally considered that he knew something about the breeding. You will ask, what will be done with PANNELL? A warrant was given to an officer on Saturday night to arrest him; but he concealed himself when PANNELL's promise to appear on the following morning. He, however, took his friends' advice, and left town for parts unknown. Truly, crime in high places is better protected in Norfolk than any place I know of. The press here have not a word about this affair—I suppose because he was a good Locofoco, and entertained Gov. WISE when here, upon money which no doubt he had stolen. It would take too long to sum up all PANNELL's rascalities.

PANNELL is the son of WM. PANNELL, the late respected auctioneer of Norfolk, well known to the entire portion of Eastern Virginia.

> "The public mind in our community has for some days past been painfully exercised by rumors touching a defalcation of the Teller of the Farmers' Bank in this city; and various exaggerated statements are abroad respecting the amount alleged to have been abstracted. Upon this subject we can only say that nothing is known officially. We learn that a committee of the directory are investigating the matter, but at present we are assured nothing has transpired to authorize the over-wrought statements that are in circulation, or to cause serious alarm either to the Bank or its Teller's securities. On an affidavit before the Mayor—not emanating, however, from the Bank—that officer issued his warrant for the arrest of the Teller on Saturday night, but it has not yet been served."

Personal.

There is an old gentleman in one of the city pauper institutions at South Boston, who was for many years the President of one of the largest insurance companies in the country. He was for a whole generation the associate and friend of the Thorndikes, the Brookes, the Lymans, the Amorys, the Cabots, the Perkinses, and other merchant princes of Boston. He has insured millions upon millions of property in a single year, and is now in his old age maintained at the public charge.

M. ARY SCHEFFER is now in England, having come to paint the portrait of MARIE AMELIE, Ex-Queen of the French—long time a patron of the artist.

Sir WALTER SCOTT's name and family are continued in the person of a little grandson, recently born. He is the son of Mr. HOPE SCOTT, of Abbotsford, who married Sir WALTER's only surviving grandchild.

We learn from the Burlington (Iowa) Gazette, that the libel suit instituted some time ago by HORACE GREELEY in the District Court of Des Moines County, against Messrs. THOMPSON & SHEWARD, of that journal, has been dismissed.

DODWORTH'S SALOON.—Signor ALBITES gives a very interesting concert to-night at Dodworth's. He will be assisted by Mad. GAZZANIGA, Signor BRIGNOLI, Signor AMODIO, M. de VILLANOVA, (on the Orgue Alexandre,) and M. GUYOT, pianist. It is not often that such a favorable opportunity for hearing great artists is presented.

FUNERAL OF EX-ALDERMAN CORNELL.—There was a very large attendance at St. Mark's Church, yesterday afternoon, at the funeral of Ex Alderman CORNELL. The Freemasons, of which body Mr. CORNELL was a member, were present in large numbers, in full regalia, and the apron, the emblem of the membership of the deceased, was laid upon his coffin. The procession reached the church at 5 o'clock, the body of the house having been reserved for those who accompanied the remains, but the galleries were filled with spectators some time before. Rev. Mr. JONES, of Stanton street, officiated, and the choir of the church gave the appropriate services, Mrs. BRINKERHOFF singing the solo, "I heard a voice from heaven." Among those who took part in the ceremonies were several members of the Common Council and officers of the City Government. The procession numbered nearly a thousand persons. The body was deposited in a receiving vault.

A HOUSE TORN DOWN FOR FIREWOOD.—The rickety two-story frame house No. 12 Thames-street, belonging to the Clinton estate, was yesterday torn down by a mob for firewood. It was formerly occupied as a tenement-house, and of late as a cooper's shop, but a few weeks ago it was left tenantless. Since that time the washboards and lath have been gradually disappearing at the hands of the chiffoniers. They yesterday turned out in force, and deliberately leveled the building. When it fell three boys were inside, wielding axes with a will. They were jerked precipitately into the street, without other damage, however, than a fright. At 4 o'clock scarce a vestige of the building remained.

BOAT CAPSIZED AND TWO MEN DROWNED.—Two men named BENNETT and TIFFANY, both fishermen, were drowned on Wednesday afternoon, at Athens, Greene County. It appears that TIFFANY, with a man named HALLENBECK, left the village in a boat for the fishing grounds of Mr. BOSSMAN, both intoxicated, though they succeeded in getting there safely. The other fishermen, finding they were too drunk to be of any service to them, requested BENNETT to row the boat back, and leave them. When near the shore, by some accident the boat capsized, and all were thrown out. BENNETT and TIFFANY were seen to sink together, but never rose again. HALLENBECK clung to the keel of the boat and was rescued.

SEGUINE'S POINT.—The rainy weather has delayed operations somewhat, upon the buildings at Seguine's Point, but it is now expected they will be ready for the reception of patients in the course of two weeks. The Commissioners paid a visit to the place yesterday, and found all things progressing quietly. Since one of the ringleaders of the malcontents among the quarantmen was ordered outside the lines about a week since, nobody has come near to interrupt proceedings. Should it become necessary, in defending the property, or for enforcing the Quarantine regulations within Dr. THOMPSON's jurisdiction, the revenue cutter, or the marines from Fort Hamilton, will be called into requisition, but such a contingency is not expected.

ACCIDENT TO A SLEEP-WALKER.—A carpenter from this City, named JOHN MURRAY, who has been employed in Poughkeepsie for some time past, on Wednesday night, while fast asleep, jumped from a second-story window of his boarding-house, in Barcaux street, to the ground, injuring himself severely. He was brought to his home in this City by the Thomas Powell.

☞ JOHN HUNTER, Esq., the agent at Liverpool of the New-York Associated Press, has resigned that situation on account of ill health, and his place will be supplied by RICHARD STUART, Esq., who has been employed in the office of the Association in this City ever since its establishment.

APPOINTMENT OF LIGHT-HOUSE KEEPERS.—The Secretary of the Treasury has appointed the following light house keepers:

SIR: The following abstract from the letter of a gentleman known in the literary and religious world of London, may not be uninteresting to your readers, and the friends of the Niagara:

Did you hear of our river picnic? It was a most enjoyable day—I shall never forget it. We went on board our little steamer at one o'clock. There was a goodly company—the Bishop, his brother, &c. The manager of the Times, and four "A"s of Kings were late, and kept us waiting. The party numbered 65, and soon the bell rang and away we sailed. After steaming through the shipping past the Tower docks, building yards, &c., we came to off the Great Eastern, and had to go ashore in small boats, six at a time. She is to be launched sideways, dragged down a kind of wooden railroad in the "cradle" in which she is built. Standing under her bows, one is astonished at her narrowness. She seems as if she would never sit upright. It was a great scramble to get off in our boats again, but at last we succeeded, and then the order was given to steer for Gravesend to see the American frigate. Lunch was served en route, and by the time that was over we came in sight of the towering masts and the well-known ensigns. First we passed the Susquehanna, a splendid paddle-wheel sloop, with her full (and a very heavy) armament on board, but we had not time to visit her. The Niagara lay a little below, and we soon came within hailing distance. Our Captain wanted to lay right up to her ladder, but the Lieutenant (Mr. GUEST, whom I had been introduced to before,) thought we had better keep our distance. He disappeared, and we began to feel rather sulky, when we heard the shrill whistle of the boatswain, and the cry "corteo a bay." In a moment down scrambled the crews, and the oarers were manned and pulled off to us. There must have been half a dozen, each with the stars and stripes floating at her stern. They took us all in a body, like so many troops. It was quite a sight to behold, and the ladies were immensely affected by this gallantry. After the perilous ascent we got on deck. Mr. A. wished me to go first, and introduce his party. Lieutenant GUEST received us with great courtesy, and immediately sent an orderly for Captain PERSONS, who is second in command. He is a fine, intelligent man, full of fun, and amused the Bishop immensely.

About the middle of our inspection a gun announced the arrival of Captain HUDSON himself. He was introduced to the Bishop, and they soon were fast friends. He has a pleasant, seafaring face, and looked quite the Admiral in his embroidered coat and gold-laced cap. They wanted us to stay much longer than we could, but time flew, and we were obliged to say good-bye. The Captains hoisted upon helping every lady into the carriers again. Directly we were under way, we all got ready and gave them a hearty cheer, and dipped our flag. You may suppose how flattered we felt when down came her broad pennon to us, and at the whistle up went the crew into the rigging, and returned the cheer with three times three. The Susquehanna evidently could not make out who we were, but she thought it best to follow suit, and as we ran close past her, she, too, gave us a graceful salute.

The Bishop enjoyed it greatly. He told me "He could hardly tear himself away from the Niagara. He should so like to go back in her with those noble fellows."

Jacob Barker's Claim on the Government.

Your report, in stating some of the material facts of the case now pending before the United States Court of Claims at Washington, in relation to my War Loan, erroneously says an arbitrary settlement was made of the issue of 10 per cent. supplemental stock. Such a settlement was attempted by the Treasury, which was resisted, when the President interfered and caused the supplemental stock of 10 per cent. to be issued without a release for further benefit, or in anywise impairing the rights or embarrassing the remedies of stockholders. Full proof of this fact is before the Court, and although a compulsory settlement, without consideration, would not be a bar to a claim otherwise valid, it may be considered of importance by some of the Members of Congress, who will, of necessity, have to pass on the decision which the Court may render in the case. Publishing this note of explanation will, therefore, oblige,

Sir, your obedient servant,
JACOB BARKER.

A SNAKE REMOVED FROM A WOMAN'S STOMACH.—The Logansport (Ind.) Pharos states that Dr. A. MEYERS, of that city, who has acquired some celebrity as the inventor of a trap for the removal of tape worms, has recently performed a cure that is worthy of more than ordinary mention.

Mrs. E. RYAN, of Fort Wayne, about 20 years of age, has been severely afflicted for four years with a sensation in the stomach, as though there was some reptile moving in it. During that time she was treated for various diseases by numerous physicians of skill, and by several for tape worm. Hearing of Dr. MEYERS' new process for the removal of parasite from the human stomach, Mrs. R. went to Logansport and placed herself under his charge.

Within two weeks Dr. M. removed from her stomach a snake about 2¼ feet long, and 1½ inches in diameter, instead of aggravating it, as had been the result of previous treatment she received. The latter part of her illness she was unable to attend to the domestic care of her family or even to take care of herself. It took two hours to prepare for retiring a night, an equal length of time before she could lie down—and often she was deprived of sleep for night together. Frequently she would walk the floor until exhausted, because unable to lay down without the most excruciating pain. Mrs. RYAN's own words are that her sufferings were such that she often prayed for death to relieve them. Mrs. R. supposed she swallowed the snake, which was apparently of the water species, while drinking from a spring in the evening at her former residence west of Fort Wayne. She left the care of Dr. M. for home, feeling as though she was saved from worse than death.

THE END OF THE UNITED STATES BANK.—Last week all the old books, papers, drafts, checks, letters, &c., that had been preserved on file as vouchers in the long course of the immense business of the United States Bank were sold in a heap in Philadelphia, and purchased by a paper-maker to be reground and manufactured into new stock. The whole mass weighed over forty tons. The tons of this vast amount is of correspondence—autograph letters of the first statesmen, politicians, and financial men of this and other countries. Drafts upon the Rothschilds for hundreds of thousands of dollars, certificates of stock transferred to the leading bankers in Europe, checks and drafts from Cabinet officers, Senators, Congressmen, editors of newspapers, &c., all lie scattered ready for the important transformation into clean, unsullied, white paper. This huge mass of books and papers strikes the visiter with astonishment. A faint idea may be formed of the colossal character of the institution which at one time occupied so important a part in the history of the country. What a vast storehouse those papers would be for individual histories; and perchance they would illustrate some unexplained passages in the history of the political parties of the day.

A MAN CARRIED OVER HADLEY FALLS.—The Holyoke Weekly Mirror relates the following story of a singular and daring attempt to cross the river at that place, and the consequent death of the navigator:

"On Friday morning, about 7 o'clock, an Irishman of twenty years of age, who had been but a few days in this country, attempted to cross the river in a small boat from this place to South Hadley Falls, in search of work. Not having any oars at hand, he substituted some strips of board, little calculating the force of the current, and also of the wind, which was blowing strongly at the time. When near the opposite shore, he allowed his boat to head down stream, thinking to land at the abutment at the head of the canal; but before he was aware, his boat was beyond his control, and rapidly nearing the fatal falls. He was seen to struggle manfully against the current for awhile, and heard to scream loudly for help, but all to no purpose. When he knew that he must go over the Falls, he lay down in his boat and resigned himself to his fate. The boat came to one of the foaming waters much broken, and floated away down stream; but nothing could be seen or has since been discovered of the body of the man."

THE RUNAWAY SLAVES.—Yesterday we announced the elopement of three slaves from Henry County, Ky., on Sunday—the arrest of one in Indiana—the escape of the second, and death of the third, by being shot by WILLIAM MEAD, one of his pursuers. We have since learned that an inquest was held on the body of the murdered negro, and a verdict rendered in accordance with the facts stated, and that a requisition will be made on the Governor of Kentucky for MEAD, on the charge of murder. We are also informed by Capt. CLAXTON, of Carrollton, Ky., that MEAD, after pursuing one of SANFORD's negroes three hundred yards, caught him, when an unknown elderly white man approached MEAD with a rifle, threatening to kill him if he did not release the negro. MEAD, having discharged the contents of his pistol previously, when he killed the other negro, deemed it best to obey the command, when the fugitive disappeared into the woods. The unknown intruder was supported in the background by a young man, supposed to be his son. Who they were, or where they came from, is still a mystery.—Cincinnati Com.

WITNESSES BEFORE THE NAVAL COURTS OF INQUIRY.—The Secretary of the Navy has written the following letter in relation to the traveling expenses of witnesses summoned to give testimony before the Naval Courts of Inquiry:

NAVY DEPARTMENT, June 22, 1857.

SIR: In future, when a witness who has been summoned to appear before the Court of Inquiry, of which you are President, does not report within a reasonable time after the mailing of the subpœna for transmission to him, allowing a sufficient interval for him to have reached the city by the ordinary mode of travel, you will not indorse upon the subpœna that he has reported, as such indorsement would be equivalent to an order for the payment of his traveling expenses.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,
I. TOUCEY.

LEAVENWORTH, K. T., Thursday, June 18, 1857.

The returns of Monday's election come in very slowly, but enough are received here to show that the whole affair has proved a most complete fizzle.

The number of votes polled here was 595. The whole number of votes in this county (which is the most populous in the State, and could poll several thousand votes) does not exceed 500. Jefferson County, which has also a large population, is said to have polled but 50 votes. Douglas County, which includes Lawrence and Lecompton, and embraces a large and populous region in that portion of the territory, gives 175 ballots. In Franklin County it is claimed that there are 500 voters, but I am assured by a gentleman just arrived from there, that there has been practically no election there. When he left he could only hear of about 30 votes that had been polled in the whole county.

It is believed here, by those who have the best facilities for knowing, that there have not been more than fifteen hundred votes given in the whole Territory. The Pro-Slavery residents are greatly disconfited, and declare that the Free-State men are a "d——d stubborn set of people."

A young man named ALEXANDER WARE, a native of South Carolina or Georgia, while in charge of a claim held by another man, on the Shawnee lands, a few miles south from this city, was ordered off on Tuesday, by one CEBAM, who professed that the claim belonged to him. He referred CEBAM to the man who employed him, and who was near by; but CEBAM insisted that he should leave. He still refused, when CEBAM drew his revolver and commenced firing. Two shots missed, but the third took effect in his heart, and he died immediately. His remains were brought here for interment. CEBAM is not yet secured, though the officers are after him. A. D. R.

P. S—I open this letter to give you information of the horrible massacre and destruction of an overland emigrant train to California, of which intelligence has just been received here.

The train, which consisted of seventeen wagons, when about a hundred miles west of Fort Kearney, was attacked by a party of SIOUX or Cheyenne Indians, who murdered every person in it—men, women, and children—burnt the wagons, and drove off the cattle.

The number of persons on the train is said to have been about twenty.

STRENGTH OF THE PRO-SLAVERY PARTY IN KANSAS.—A comparison of the votes cast at the recent election in Kansas, wherein only the resident Pro-Slavery men took part, with the votes at previous contests, when droves of Missourians went over to help their nigger-breeding brethren, shows not only what the actual strength of the nigger party is, but the extent also of the frauds that have been heretofore perpetrated. This time it was well understood that the Free-State men would not vote; hence another invasion of the Border-Ruffians was unnecessary. They stayed at home; and now we know exactly what the resident Pro Slavery force is—not over 1 500 in the whole Territory! Of course this figure does not accord with the aggregate of the registry lists; but as the Missourians on those lists were busy at home, and there was no pressing occasion for them to cross the river, we must excuse them for not coming up to the expectations of their friends.

Let it now be remembered that, if a Pro Slavery Constitution is formed for Kansas, it is the work of only meagre minority, backed up by STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS and the National Administration.—Chicago Tribune, June 24.

RIOT IN WESTPORT—FOUR HOUSES AND A LARGE AMOUNT OF PROPERTY DESTROYED.

Our neighboring town was the scene, on Wednesday evening last, of one of the most disgraceful mobs we have known to occur in the upper country.

From all we can learn it appears that a fight occurred at a butcher shop, kept by a German, between a butcher's son and a citizen of the town, named BUCHER. This led to a rather free fight between the friends of the two parties. In the evening the friends of BUCHER attacked the house of the butcher, drove his family out of doors, destroyed his property, and completely demolished the premises. They next moved to another part of the town and destroyed three other German houses, upon what pretext we have been unable to learn, except that the occupants were Germans.

TERRIBLE POISONING CASE IN VIRGINIA.—The Petersburg (Va.) Express details a terrible poisoning case in the family of Mr. EDWARD GILL, in Chesterfield County. The family is composed of Mr. and Mrs. GILL, and, up to four weeks ago, six children, as follows: Miss FRANCES, aged about 16 years; AURELIUS, about 13; WILLIAM, about 8; MARY, 6; ELLA, 4; HATTY, an infant. About one month ago little HATTY was taken mysteriously ill, and died a few days after. Subsequently, the entire family began to experience a singular sickness, which changed the color of their skin to a dull, pallish hue, and bore the character of inflammation of the stomach. On Saturday last every member of the family were prostrated, and physicians from all points were sent for. A consultation was held, auspicions of poison excited, and an examination instituted.

In the apartments of REBECCA, the cook, which were also occupied by a house servant, MARIA, and her husband, JACK, were found secreted several boxes and vials, one containing sugar of lead, and the rest a quantity of the carbonate of lead, both of which are slow but deadly poisons. A light was here developed, leading directly to the conclusion that the disease then under treatment was no other than the lead colic, superinduced by the consumption of food containing the carbonate and sugar of lead. This, it was ascertained upon further investigation, had been introduced daily into the food cooked for the family for a long series of weeks. The scheme was deeply laid, and upon a principle which one would scarcely suspect of being resorted to by an ignorant negro. There is some ground, therefore, for further suspicions, involving a more intelligent principal in the affray.

On Monday evening, the next to the youngest child, ELLA, too young to withstand the potency of the deadly drug, expired. The eldest, FRANCES and AURELIUS, were on Tuesday lying in a very critical condition, while Mr. and Mrs. GILL were improving, but still exceedingly weak and nervous. The three slaves mentioned above were immediately arrested, and lodged in the jail, but will be taken before the Chesterfield Court for examination at the proper time. The two women are owned by Mr. GILL—the man by SYLVESTER PEARCE, Esq.

POST-OFFICE ROBBERY IN PORTSMOUTH.—The Norfolk Herald, in reference to mail robberies in the Post-Office at Portsmouth, by young COWLAN, says: "On many occasions, letters containing money directed to the Portsmouth Post-Office, having failed to reach their destination, a plan was laid to detect the pilferer, who, there was every reason to conclude, was some one in that office. A letter containing a sum of money, directed to go by the Southern mail, was thereupon put into the Post-Office, and the mail agent was directed to open the mail bag before it reached the next Post Office, and ascertain whether said letter was in it. He did as directed, but the letter was not there. Suspicion was at once directed to the delinquent, who confessed his guilt upon the spot. He acknowledged having spent $1,800, and stated that the balance of his embezzlements was in his trunk. He was arrested of course, and committed to jail."

ROTTEN CROPS.—We have conflicting accounts from the country round about Norfolk, as to the ravages of the so-called army worm. In some of the tide-water Counties, says the Norfolk Herald, the wheat and corn, and the pastures, have been very seriously damaged, amounting in a few cases to almost entire destruction. A gentleman informs us, that in riding through his wheat-field, the stench arising from the mass of dead worms was exceedingly offensive. This will give an idea of the vast number of these destructive pests on some estates. The worms, though numerous throughout the whole tide-water country, have done but little mischief on many plantations.

POTOMAC TIMBER.—The splendid timber upon the Potomac has attracted the attention of enterprising lumber merchants from the North. A Company from New-York have recently purchased a considerable tract of territory on the Virginia shore, a few miles below Quantico creek, and have erected thereon houses, and a large sawing establishment, for the purpose of procuring ship timber for the New-York market. Their tract is said to be one of the best timbered in that section.

STEAMSHIPS FROM NORFOLK TO NEW-YORK.—A Norfolk paper states that in consequence of the large amount of freight from New York to that city, and the damage which shippers sustained by the inability of the present steamers to accommodate them, it is desirable to have one or two more to run twice a week direct between the two cities. With this view meetings of the merchants of Norfolk are called.

HIGH PRICE FOR TOBACCO.—A hogshead of tobacco sold in Richmond, Va., on Saturday at $100 per hundred pounds. This is considered possibly the highest price yet obtained in Virginia for tobacco in the leaf. It was grown immediately upon the line of the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad.

ANOTHER SPIDER BITE.—A blacksmith in Newton Upper Falls, named STANLEY, while at work a few days since, felt what he supposed was the bite of a mosquito upon his arm, and being very busy, did not give any attention to it for several minutes, but finally noticed that it was a small spider, its body not being larger than a pin head, which he crushed, and thought nothing of it. In about half an hour the part became painful, began to swell, and turned nearly black. He immediately rubbed the wound with table salt very thoroughly, till the swelling subsided, in great measure, and afterwards applied poultices of bruised catnip, when the spread of the poison was checked; but a spot round the wound, the size of a man's hand, is now a mass of pimples, filled with matter, the effect of the poison.

WESTERN RAILROADS IN TROUBLE.—We learn, upon what we believe to be unquestionable authority, that legal proceedings are about to be instituted by Robert and John H. Kinzie and others interested, against the Illinois Central and Michigan Central Railroad Companies for the recovery of fifteen acres of ground on the bank of Lake Michigan, south of the river, upon which the freight and passenger depôts of these companies are built. The contestants claim this ground by what they believe to be a valid title, derived years ago from the Government, before the channel of Chicago river was altered.—Chicago Trib.

From the Chicago Tribune.

We print below the remarks made by a veteran one hundred and seventeen years of age, at the Pioneer Festival in Madison, Wis., on Thursday last. What events have been crowded into this man's life! When he was born, FREDERICK the Great, now a historical character, was on the throne; Austria was engaged in a furious war, and ANSON was making his remarkable voyage around the world. He was a "chunk of a boy" when FRANKLIN made his great discoveries in electricity, of which the electric telegraph is the result. At the time of BRADDOCK's defeat, he was as old as many a lad who carried a musket under the lead of WASHINGTON twenty years later. He was 25 years of age when resistance to the Stamp Act in Massachusetts began, and was qualified by his years to occupy a seat in the first Colonial Congress, in 1765. He might have accompanied BOONE in his exploration of Kentucky—a State that now contains more than a million of people. Had he gone to Europe when he was over thirty years of age, he might have seen and heard HUME, BURKE, JOHNSON, PITT, GOLDSMITH, VOLTAIRE, KLOPSTOCK, and LESSING—all long since dead, and historically valued by their successors. He was a middle-aged man in the full vigor of life, when the war of Independence closed, and WASHINGTON was President of the United States. He saw the rise and opening of the French Revolution; he was a witness of the whole career of NAPOLEON. He was old—more than three score and ten—when HULL surrendered at Detroit; yet, how few who was there then live to tell the story now! He has seen this country grow from a collection of English, French, and Spanish colonies, containing a population of less than two millions, to the rank of a first-class power. But, in one hundred and seventeen years, what has he not seen!

JOSEPH CARLIN, whose remarks we copy from the Madison Journal, is probably the oldest man in the United States. He said:

FELLOW PIONEERS; I have looked forward with deep interest to this meeting. Permit me, an old man, with the frosts of one hundred and seventeen Winters now whitening my brow, to greet you to-day, and to you express the hope that you may live these many years to meet together on similar occasions. My own pioneer life has been peaceful, rather than eventful. A native of Detroit, I was partly raised at Kaskaskia and Prairie du Roche, in Illinois, and subsequently became an inhabitant of St. Louis, under Spanish rule, and for many years of the last century was engaged as a voyageur between St. Louis and Prairie du Chien, viâ Wisconsin and Fox rivers and Mackinaw. I was, in 1814, a participant with the Americans in the conflict at Prairie du Chien, and served as an express carrier in the Black Hawk war, when a companion was shot dead by my side by the stealthy Indians in ambuscade; being myself a Frenchman, and my wife related to the Indians, I have reason to believe I was purposely spared. Forty one years ago I located at the Wisconsin Portage, and nearly a third of a century since I was a mail carrier between Mineral Point and Green Bay. It has fallen to my lot to live successively, in the same country, under French, British, Spanish and American Governments—and I have defended the latter at the hazard of my life. Though I have thus spent my life upon the frontiers, my memory is too frail to permit me to go into dates, and could I recall them, I fear they would only serve to fill up the picture, already but too well known, of border dangers, difficulties and privations. I have been three times married, and of nine children but a single one survives—the seventh by my first marriage—and she has nearly reached the age of three score and ten, allotted to our race. But I have grand children, almost without number; and for the benefit of some of the latter, I hope yet to obtain some bounty land from Government for my early services. I come down to you, fellow pioneers, from a former century—an old man, with the habits, customs and feelings of the simple-hearted, contented race of a century ago, with few wants, and no ambitious aspirations. I can in truth say that I love my native land; I have cheerfully risked my life in its defence, in repelling the British and Indian foe; and I trust there are none here to-day who will fail to stand by our country in every hour of trial and danger—none who will ever, under any pics, lend themselves to the disreputable work of weakening the ties that bind together our glorious Union. I have lived here in the West, under despotic sway, and know full well how to appreciate the blessings of free government, which I heartily commend to your final love and protection.

In conclusion, fellow-pioneers, I can only give you—it is all I have to offer—an old man's prayer and blessing.

Of the proceedings the Argus and Democrat says:

The old pioneers went off into the most jovial repartceing of their own, telling stories, making comments on the progress of the West, and indulging in not a few hearty old-fashioned jokes. An occasional scintillation of wit from a rough and hearty "old settler" would convulse the house in laughter, and again a sudden outburst of natural feeling not unfrequently brought a moist sparkle or a full, round tear into the eyes of those present. The occasion was one of extraordinary and peculiar interest, and all seemed to feel it so, from the new-comer to our State to the first adventurers within its wild territory years ago. Quite a number of the fairer sex, who were pioneers also, and had shared in the joys and sorrows of frontier life, were present, and joined in the convivialities. Some of their children, men and woman grown, were also there, and pointed out with pride by the speakers, who fairly ran over with enthusiasm.

☞ The buildings of the Union Iron and Coal Company, four miles below Scranton, on the Lackawanna and Bloomsburg Railroad, were destroyed by fire on Wednesday. Loss $50,000; insured in four Companies for $20,000. The fire was caused by a defective flue.

Of the proceedings the Argus and Democrat says:

The old pioneers went off into the most jovial repartceing of their own, telling stories, making comments on the progress of the West, and indulging in not a few hearty old-fashioned jokes. An occasional scintillation of wit from a rough and hearty "old settler" would convulse the house in laughter, and again a sudden outburst of natural feeling not unfrequently brought a moist sparkle or a full, round tear into the eyes of those present. The occasion was one of extraordinary and peculiar interest, and all seemed to feel it so, from the new-comer to our State to the first adventurers within its wild territory years ago. Quite a number of the fairer sex, who were pioneers also, and had shared in the joys and sorrows of frontier life, were present, and joined in the convivialities. Some of their children, men and woman grown, were also there, and pointed out with pride by the speakers, who fairly ran over with enthusiasm.

☞ The buildings of the Union Iron and Coal Company, four miles below Scranton, on the Lackawanna and Bloomsburg Railroad, were destroyed by fire on Wednesday. Loss $50,000; insured in four Companies for $20,000. The fire was caused by a defective flue.

NEW-YORK CITY.

NEW-YORK ACADEMY OF MEDICINE.

Paper on Chloroform—Discussion of Puerperal Fever—The Filth of the City Streets.

A special meeting of the New-York Academy of Medicine was held on Wednesday evening, Dr. Mott in the Chair. A letter from Dr. Antisell, of Washington, in reference to the hotel epidemic, was referred to the Section on Theory and Practice. The communication from Dr. Bailey, late Inspector of Drugs for this port, which had been referred to the President, was ordered to be read at the next meeting of the Academy.

PAPER ON CHLOROFORM.

Dr. Squib, of the U. S. Navy, now stationed at Brooklyn, read a paper on Chloroform. He premised with some views respecting the current opinion which had become almost an adage respecting the uncertainty of medicine. He thought a distinction should be made between the science and the means employed, and that perhaps the statement might advantageously be modified by saying that nothing was more uncertain than the tools or appliances of the medical art.

Formerly, in a very much greater degree than now, the profession compounded their medicines themselves; subsequently it was made by the dispensing apothecary, but now it is fabricated in large quantities, and dealt with by a class of persons still further removed from the consumers. It is an article of trade, subject to the incidents of merchandise, sold as such, without reference to its ultimate purpose—the object being to make as good (or as poor) an article as can be sold to the most advantage. Some articles could be bought independent of the guarantee of the maker, and could be tested, (although generally not analyzed by the dispenser, and still more rarely by the prescriber;) of many others the value depended entirely upon the reputation of the manufacturers. Prussic acid and many others would cost more to analyze than to make new, while the value of compound extract of colycinth and others was entirely out of the reach of analysis.

The paper of the evening would treat only upon the manufacture, properties and tests of chloroform. He then entered into an elaborate description of the manner of its manufacture, giving the exact proportions of chloride of lime and alcohol from which it should be distilled, its various washings and other methods of rendering it of its various impurities. In general it was made in this country from whisky, and often from the alcohol redistilled, after being used in the making of various alkaloids. These were considered "good enough" to make chloroform for commercial purposes. It would sell, and that was all the manufacturer thought of especial importance. The impurities formed in its making from pure alcohol, and the decomp ositions liable to occur when alcohol was in excess or deficient, could be removed and the slight quantity remaining he did not think of great importance practically, but the impurities consequent upon using drugged alcohol were insusceptible of relief, and the consequences serious. The faintings, headaches, delirums and deaths resulting from the use of chloroform, he considered solely owing to this kind of impurities in it. In the Navy, out of many pounds of chloroform manufactured by the Government, he had not seen a solitary instance of any bad result, however trivial. Neither in Scotland, where great care is used in the making, had but one death occurred, and the cause of this uncertain, in the very many thousand trials which had been made of it. He thought the objection which many had to its use, and the preference of the profession for the use of ether, was owing to the bad chloroform with which they had experimented.

A certain and easily practical test for the purity of chloroform was ever at hand, (and it was this which was wanted for all medicines,) viz., to mix with some of the specimen of chloriform an equal quantity of sulphuric acid. If pure, no change was perceptible; if impure, it was manifested by a change of color, and an increased heat of the bottle.

In almost all chloroform there is a slight change from the purity of color, but in those partially decomposed, it is of a quite dark brown tinge. This, though somewhat impure, is of little comparative importance; but, when heat is evolved, (recognized by the heat of the bottle when it is not warmed by the hand, and by the force with which the stopple is thrown out, from the rarefaction of the vapor,) the chloroform has foreign ingredients in it, which the acid sets upon. Where the impurities are solely from an excess in one or the other of the materials of the article, or from the decomposition of an article originally made from pure materials, no serious injurious effects follow its use; but, where the impurities are from the admixture of foreign elements, then all the sad results generally attributed to chloroform may be expected.

In answer to a question propounded by a member, Dr. S. stated that impurities, when separated from the chloroform, are very different in their character; they are changed from what they are when in solution. The actual impurities when made of the best materials, and with the best care, are themselves extremely toxious. He had known a mouse to be killed by the gases exhaled from them, and falling by their own ponderosity to the floor.

The paper was read with much satisfaction, and after some commendatory remarks from members, a vote of thanks to the author was referred to the section on Materia Medica for consideration.

DISCUSSION OF PUERPERAL FEVER.

The subject of Puerperal Fever, the special business of the meeting was then entered upon. Dr. Clark resumed by recapitulating some of the points in the pathology of this disease, of which we gave a synopsis in the report of a previous meeting. That the disease in its germ and essence was inflammatory, not a peculiar disease, not agreeing with the views of Gooch & Simpson, who say it is a disease without inflammation, but that there is always inflammation and pyæmia, the result of inflammation: that in some cases when inflammation was not supposed to be present that it really was, being a hitherto concealed inflammation of the inner lining of the uterus, in reality an endometritis. He wished now to add two recent cases of pyæmia, where fibrine existed in the cavity of the uterus, pus in the sinuses and in other parts of the body, in the liver, joints, &c. Since the last meeting of the Academy he had seen another form of disease where there was prevalent inflammation and deposits of lymph and pus, but characterized by the extreme protraction of the disease to twenty, twenty-six and even thirty days. It was very insidious in its approach, in its symptoms much resembling typhus, and sometimes even mistaken for that disease, the idea of puerperal disease being discarded, mainly from the entire absence of all peritonitis and pain. The Doctor read a very remarkable case from the notes of Bellevue Hospital of this character.

SYMPTOMS.

The symptoms of puerperal fever have not the regularity that might be supposed. There are few if any persistent, ever-present symptoms. Even that of pain, as just seen, is not the invariable attendant. The Doctor expressed his regret that he had not been able to give but one hour to preparing for this meeting since the last. From many cases he had been able to tabulate but nine with peritonitis, and five without, all fatal, selected so that, being proved by the subsequent post mortem, the question of the disease could not be raised. The Doctor here read a table of carefully-recorded statistics, confirming this statement—the uncertainty of the first symptoms and the fatality. In regard to this latter, he said that more recovered of those having peritonitis than of those not having it—3 in 11 proving fatal with endometritis, while the mortality was decidedly not so great when accompanied by peritonitis.

On some future occasion, the Doctor said, he would give his views of the treatment.

Dr. Barker wished to move that this subject be continued to the next meeting, for he held entirely different views respecting the cause, character, and perhaps treatment of this disease from those promulgated and held by the gentleman who had just spoken, and he much desired an opportunity to express them. On motion the discussion of this subject was deferred until the next meeting.

A letter to the President on a new method of reducing inguinal hernia was referred to the section on Surgery.

Seventy-five copies of the proceedings of the State Medical Society were presented to the Academy.

DIRTY STREETS.

Dr. McNulty presented a preamble and series of resolutions for the adoption of the Academy, declaring that the streets of the City were in a horridly filthy condition, and expressing the opinion that disease would be engendered thereby.

Dr. Detmold said everybody knew that; the Press with thousand tongues had proclaimed it, and he did not think any good would be effected by any resolutions from the Academy. The Academy had petitioned the State to interfere in sanitary matters, and were not heeded, and he did not think it would do any good to repeat the statements.

After some little debate, and in consequence of the lateness of the hour, the matter was laid on the table till the next meeting, and the Academy adjourned.

Medical.

Criminal Abortions.—At the monthly meeting of the Suffolk District Medical Society, May 30, according to the report of the Boston (Mass.) Medical World the Herculean labor of the evening was the consideration of the Report of the Committee upon Criminal Abortions. This Report had been presented at a former meeting, but laid upon the table and printed for the use of the members. It had been noticed in the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, and somewhat severely criticized by a correspondent, signing himself B. Dr. Storer, Jr., the Chairman of the Committee, made some remarks, and read those portions of the Report which he wished adopted, (leaving out the laws, which the original Report contained,) to be recommended to the Massachusetts Medical Society, and from them to the next Legislature, if they saw fit. Instead of these drafts of Laws, he offered several resolutions to be presented to the parent society, the substance of which was, that the Suffolk District Society consider these abortions a very wicked thing, and ask the parent Society so to consider them, and to request that Society to take action upon the subject by requesting the next Legislature to pass such laws respecting the matter as they may deem expedient.

As this was, in effect, a new report, and, as it was difficult to trace the parts which were left out, and those which were retained from the former Report, Dr. Buckingham moved that this new Report with the resolutions, be laid upon the table, and printed, to be acted upon at a future meeting.

Dr. Storer, Sen., was very much surprised that any member of the Society should hesitate for a moment to adopt this Report. He assailed, with considerable severity, the following sentence, in the Journal of May 28, 1857: "Argue as forcibly as they may, to their own satisfaction, the Committee will fail to convince the public that abortion in the early months is a crime, and a large proportion of the medical profession will tacitly support the popular view of the snoject." He (Dr. Storer, Sen.,) was surprised that any member of the profession should write thus, and, especially, that the man who would make such a statement should not put his whole name to the article, instead of signing it B. He thought he was bound so to do, that the public might know who he was. He had run his eye over the B's in the Society, and could think of no one that would have done it, except a man by the name of Brown, who had been expelled. He was equally surprised that the editors of the Journal, whom he held responsible for all that was published in it, should have admitted an article containing such immoral sentiments, &c.

This brought Dr. Morland, the senior editor of the Journal, to his feet. He should not be accused of entertaining such sentiments by any man, as had been imputed to him by Dr. Storer, &c.

Dr. Lyman defended the editors of the Journal, and thought Dr. Storer in the wrong.

Dr. Buckingham (with no small share of the dauntless courage of his father, in the days of the "New England Galaxy") arose and said that he was the author of the article in the Journal, and he did not shrink from assuming the responsibility of all that was there said. He believed it was all true, and was ready to defend it; and that it contained no such sentiments as Dr. S. had tried to make it contain, &c.

Dr. Storer read it again, and renewed his former statements.

Dr. Cornell hoped the motion of Dr. Buckingham would pass; not that he had any objection to the Report, but for the following reasons: first because this was a report of the Committee, with resolutions, and he wished to read them, in order to know exactly what he was voting for; and, secondly, because there was ample time to attend to the matter, as "the Great and General Court" had once more days, adjourned, this day, and there would be some respite before they came together again. After still further discussion, Dr. Buckingham, by leave of the Society, withdrew his motion.

Upon the motion to adopt the resolutions,

Dr. Burrs thought this Society had no cause to vindicate its character upon the subject of Criminal Abortions, as that already stood fair before the public upon this point, in the fact that they had already expelled Dr. Caulkins for such practice. He thought we were under no obligations to take the lead in questions of moral reform, and hoped the whole matter would be indefinitely postponed.

The first resolution was adopted, 19 voting for it, and 17 against it. The second resolution was rejected by about a similar vote. The third resolution was adopted, and so they were sent up for the action of the Massachusetts Medical Society at their next meeting. The same Committee that had prepared them was appointed to present them to that Society.

The fact is, there is no necessity, not the slightest, for any more law upon the subject. The law now is strict and severe against the practice, and the penalty high for the offence; but who ever knew of a conviction under it? The maximum penalty now, by the present law, is twenty years' imprisonment in the State prison; and is not that sufficient? But if it were ninety-nine years, or death, it would make no difference. The difficulty is, in getting the proof, which never has been found to result in a conviction.

P. S.—I forgot to name above, that one doctor stated that a female physician had been traveling up and down Cape Cod, teaching the ladies that it was not immoral to produce abortions, and how it could be done! Will not such female doctors also teach the ladies how to escape the laws recommended by male doctors, and made by male legislators? "Montes laborant: ridiculus mus nascetur."

Wire-Cloth in Orthopedic and General Surgery.—Dr. Louis Bauer, of the Orthopedic Institution, Brooklyn, recommends, in the Buffalo Journal, the use of wire-cloth for splints, and other surgical purposes. He also claims priority in its application. The advantages Dr. Bauer claims for the wire splints are that they are light and permeable, keeping the limb cool, and permitting the application of fomentations, warm or cold, without losing in their firmness; exceedingly useful, therefore, in combination with the so-called "permanent bath" of Langenbeck. In fractures, Dr. Bauer fills both splints with loose cotton wool, and fastens them by a roller to the extremity. Inflammation or swelling should take place, the cottou wool will compress sufficiently to avoid the necessity of removing the dressing. Either some peculiar property of the cotton wool, or the great coolness or permeability of the splints, seemed in Dr. B.'s cases to prevent inflammation and swelling.

Caving in of a Well.—Heartrending Affair.—On the 15th inst. Mr. Casper Hibler, residing near Dallastown, York County, Pa., went to his well, in the yard, for the purpose of drawing water, when the walls caved in, precipitating him down the well, a distance of seventeen feet, (the well is about forty feet deep,) where he was firmly held by earth and stone, unable to extricate himself. The Eagle says:

"At the time the accident occurred Mr. Hibler was alone at home, his wife having gone to visit his mother, who was ill. She returned about 5 o'clock, and not finding her husband in the house, she called and received an answer, when, on searching for him, she found that he was in the well. The alarm was immediately given, and strenuous efforts made by the neighbors to rescue him from his perilous situation. They worked faithfully, and, at one time, were within eighteen inches of him, the unfortunate man conversing with them all the time. Their exertions, however, seemed to avail but little, for as fast as they succeeded in removing the earth and stones, fresh quantities would fall in upon him. Finding their exertions in his behalf of no avail, the doomed man, shortly after midnight, requested that his wife might be brought within hearing of his voice, that he might bid her a last farewell. His request was complied with, and we leave the reader to imagine the scene—the anguish of mind of her who, on the 14th of April last, he led to the altar a bride. At 1 o'clock on Tuesday morning he ceased to exist, and his lifeless body was found about 4 o'clock, much bruised, with one hand off."

Florida Army Intelligence.—The Tampa Peninsular of June 13, reports several changes in that Department, of which Col. Loomis still retains command. The Fifth Infantry, which has seen a good deal of hard service in the Everglades, goes to Jefferson Barracks, Mo. Companies A and H, 114 strong, under command of Capt. John A. Whitall. Lieuts. W. A. Webb and A. T. A. Forbest, came on to New-Orleans in the Calhoun.

In consequence of the departure of this regiment, Companies A, C and K, Fourth Artillery, have been ordered from Forts Manatee, Kissimmee and McRae, respectively, to Fort Myers, whither Major W. W. Morris, now in command of Fort Capron, has also been ordered.

Capt. Cotten's Company Mounted Volunteers is ordered to take post on Lake Harney. The detachment at Houston will be withdrawn, and Fort Catlin abandoned. Capt. Kendrick's Company Mounted Volunteers was mustered out of service the 6th inst., at Fort Brooke. Capt. K has received orders to raise another company, to be completed by the 22d inst. Capt. Turner is raising a company of experienced woodmen, forty five in number, to enter Government employ in the capacity of guides, bostmen, &c., at $45 per month.

Major Leonard, United States Paymaster, has received $50,000 for the payment of Sparkman's, Lesli's and Bullock's Companies Mounted Volunteers.

Extensive scouts are out, but there is no Indian news of importance.

Men over Niagara Falls.—On the 17th two bodies were found that had gone over the Falls. One was found on the American side, just below the ferry in the river. The other was on the Canada side, and supposed to have come over the Horse Shoe Falls. The first body had no clothes on, and was a strong built man, high forehead, Jewish nose and black hair; the head slightly bald, and black whiskers. His upper lip has been shaved lately. The second man had no clothes but his shirt collar around his neck, dark whiskers and an imperial. Can't find what kind of hair he has, it being all covered with froth. This man is tall and stout.—Rochester American.

The Late Fatal Railroad Accident in West Broadway.—An inquest was held on Thursday by Coroner Gamble, upon the body of Eliza Tinbrook, the colored girl, aged 6 years, who was run over and killed on Tuesday night, by car No. 11, of the Eighth-avenue Railroad, in West Broadway, near Franklin-st. The Jury, in their verdict, censured the driver and conductor of the car, for the rapid rate of speed at which the car was going at the time of the accident, and they were each held to answer in the sum of $500 each.

The Rival Houses.—The "Municipals" and "Metropolitans," however they differ politically, unite in their praises of the Knox Summer Hat. We don't wonder at it. It is certainly a splendid specimen of Knox's skill, and, what is much more important to the manufacturer, it is a universal favorite. Call at No. 212 Broadway, and make your selections.

Notice—Sunday Morning Boat for Peekskill and Sing Sing.—The steamer Island Belle, Capt. J. J. Bergen, will leave New-York from Pier foot of Jay-street on Sunday morning June 28, at 8 o'clock, for the above places, making the usual landings. Returning, leaves Peekskill at 1½ P. M. See advertisement.

☞ Murray & Lanman's Florida Water, if not an immortal perfume, is the most lasting in the world. Like all that is invaluable, it has been imitated. But it survives and triumphs, while the imitations die. Purchase only the genuine article, Murray & Lanman's, which for fifteen years has been the national perfume and cosmetic of Spanish America. Look to the label. Sold by Lanman & Co., wholesale druggists, No 60 Water-street, New-York, and by all druggists at 50 cents per bottle.

☞ Regardless of expense, the wealthy sometimes purchase at a terrific advance on first cost; but at an establishment like R. T. Wilde's millinery warerooms, No. 251 Broadway, this is impossible. A vast wholesale, as well as retail business, built up by moderate prices, is maintained on the same plan. His summer assortment of French pattern bonnets and dress caps and coiffures, as well as of millinery generally, is not surpassed out of Paris.

Teas.—The Canton Tea Company have on hand every variety of Teas for Grocers, Tea Dealers, and private families—Souchong, Oolong and Young Hyson, from 25c. to 40c.; Gunpowder and Imperial from 35c. to 60c.—all other qualities equally low. Also, 5-lb boxes good Family Tea for $1. Call and examine—No. 125 Chatham-st., between Pearl and Roosevelt streets.

☞ S. Coates, manufacturer of Portable Gas Works, under the patent of the Maryland Portable Gas Company, desires to call public attention to the improved apparatus sold by him, and designed chiefly for country residences, factories, hotels, &c.

The City in an Uproar.—Although New-York has been in an uproar for some time in consequence of the attempts to arrest the Mayor, general attention has not been for an hour diverted from Knox's great hat depôt, at the corner of Broadway and Fulton-street. Those whose heads were in danger did not forget to employ Knox to cover them. A head covered with one of Knox's superior hats commands respect even in the most dangerous affray.

Catarrh Cured.—It is beginning to be understood that Dr. R. Goodall, at No. 385 Broadway, is introducing an invaluable remedy for the cure of this disease, and that he is doing just what he proposes to do, viz.: effecting complete and radical cures of the most inveterate cases of Catarrh. The remedy is in liquid form, to be inhaled or drawn into the nostrils. Further particulars soon.

☞ Counterfeits of Holloway's Pills and Ointment are in the market. Look to the book of directions. If the paper on which they are printed is water marked "Holloway, New-York and London," the medicine is genuine, but not otherwise. In looking for the water-mark, hold the paper between the eyes and the light. Sold at the manufactory, 80 Maiden lane, and by all druggists, at 25c., 63c., and $1 per box or pot.

Last Time of the Sybil's Cave.—This afternoon and evening will positively be the last performance at Barnum's Museum of the new and popular local drama of the "Sybil's Cave." The coming holidays crowd it off the scene. Other novelties take its place. The new Panoptinon Studio is an immense attraction now at the Museum.

Gas! Gas!!—Gas fixtures of new and beautiful designs will be found at the great manufactory depôt of Archer, Warner & Co., No. 376 Broadway. The best gas cook stove in the world. Call and see it.

Purdy's National Theatre.—The great new military drama of "Bonaparte, or the Seige of Moscow," is to be repeated to night, with the pantomime of the "Frisky Cobbler," and drama of "Tom Cringle," an excellent entertainment.

LONG ISLAND.

The Affray in Prentice's Hat Factory.—Thomas Morrell, who had his skull fractured Thursday afternoon at Prentice's hat factory, by a blow given by James McDonnell, was yesterday much better, and there are now strong hopes that he will ultimately recover.

Following a Good Example.—Mayor Powell, of Brooklyn, has given directions to have all of the fire bells rung at noon and 9 o'clock at night, on and after July 1; the time to be taken from the New-York City Hall, which can be seen from the cupola of the Brooklyn City Hall.

Bail Forfeited.—Timothy P. Mearn, principal witness for the defence in the Smith and Conselyea seduction case, recently tried in the Brooklyn City Court, and who was indicted for perjury, committed in that trial, was called for yesterday in the Kings County Court of Sessions, and not appearing his bail was declared forfeited. The brothers Conselyea were his bondsmen, for $2,500.

The Long Island Railroad.—The Common Council of Brooklyn at their last meeting, passed resolutions withdrawing from the Long Island Railroad Company the privilege of using steam in Atlantic-street, and directing them hereafter to have the cars drawn by horses. Should this measure be carried into effect, there is no doubt but the company will feel themselves compelled to abandon the Jamaica road entirely. We understand that some of those interested have already examined the country between this place and Brushville, with a view of ascertaining the feasibility of a connection with the Flushing road, and that in a short time an experienced engineer will make a thorough inspection of the route.

Hereafter the only place on the East River accessible by steam will be Hunter's Point, and every railroad on Long Island, extending into the country, will be compelled to connect itself in some way with the Flushing road.—Flushing Times.

Military.—The National Guards, Brooklyn, commanded by Captain Spragus, celebrated their anniversary, Thursday, by a parade and drill. At 3 o'clock, P. M., the corps was reviewed by His Honor Mayor Powell and several aldermen, after which they marched through some of the principal streets of the city, and at 7½ o'clock, last evening, partook of a supper at Gothic Hall.

NEW-JERSEY.

Fourth of July Celebration.—Preparations are being made for an extensive celebration of the Fourth of July in Jersey City. The arrangements are in the hands of a Committee of the Common Council, who are exerting themselves to get it up in a creditable manner, and the prospects are that their efforts will be crowned with success, and a celebration will take place which in point of attractiveness and interest will far exceed any celebration heretofore held in Jersey City. The military, the civic societies and the Fire Department will participate in the affair. The butchers will also appear in the procession in a body, mounted. The Common Council has appropriated a liberal sum towards the expenses. David Scott has been invited to act as Marshal of the day, and Charles H. Winfield as the Orator of the day, and A. S. Hutch as reader of the Declaration, to which they have consented. The day will close with a magnificent display of fireworks. The Committee of Aldermen having charge of the arrangements are Aldermen Roosevelt, Baum, Sinclair and Hardenbergh.

Friday, June 26—P. M.

The general Money report to-day is a diminished Street activity, but continued full offerings at the large Banks. The movement in Stocks continues heavy, though it emplovs, relatively, a light amount of means, as the speculation is mostly for the Fall, and a vast proportion of the business on time contracts. The Discount Brokers are well employed at the advanced rates quoted yesterday, 8@9 ₱ cent. on prime, and 10@12 ₱ cent. on fair or second choice names. The Sub-Treasury received to-day $184,210, disbursed $482,338, and held at the close $10,879,176. The balance has fallen below ten millions for the first time in many months, and our estimate made as early as April, of a reduction to about ten millions by the close of the fiscal year on 30th inst., is near being realized. The demand for Foreign bills for the steamer sailing for Havre and Southampton to-morrow is moderate, and lower terms are made, both on Paris and London. Some good transient Sterling was done, at 109¼@⅜, and leading bills at 109½. Francs abundant, at 5:20@5:18¾. We understand that some considerable parcels of Havana Sugar is being reëxported to England and the Continent. The Fulton takes about $700,000 in Gold to-morrow.

The Stock Market continues in the control of the Sellers for a further decline, and, although most of the Stocks actively dealt in are gradually leaving the Street, and the amounts subject to transfer are reduced almost without precedent, they are sold at such reduction on sellers' option as to force lower quotations than have hitherto been known. This afternoon 126¼ was bid for any part of 100 shares of Illinois Central for the opening of transfers on Wednesday next, without eliciting a single share, and yet 500 shares are registered on the list of the Second Board at 122, option of the seller to deliver in 30 days! Erie shares, of which less than 8,000 are on the Street—including 2,500 or 3,000 shares in the money list not within the ownership of the brokers—were sold down to 27⅞, seller 30 days, while 29⅛ cash, was paid for immediate transfer this morning. Sales were made in the afternoon at 28 for delivery to-morrow, the sellers taking the chance of alarming some real holder on Saturday to part with his stock or to make the tempting difference of 1 or 1½ ₱ cent. between cash and 30 days. These are but examples of the general game being played by the Bear speculators. How long a time is yet to intervene before it is played out, we cannot undertake to determine. On New-York Central and Reading some steadiness obtained for cash stock, and a considerable amount of buyers' options is registered on the same terms. Southern Michigan was finally done as low as 39¾ against 42¼ yesterday afternoon. La Crosse at 49½, and Milwaukee and Mississippi at 49, seller 15 days. The list of Railway Bonds and State Stocks, though ruling low, is moderately steady, and but few parcels offered. The Cleveland and Pittsburg Company have changed their dividend days to October and April, to make a more equal division of their yearly earnings. The President, Mr. C. W. Rockwell, telegraphs that a half-yearly cash dividend at the rate of 8 ₱ cent. per annum, will be made on the 1st October. The general market left off feverish and unsettled.

Some considerable feeling has been excited among the New-York and Erie people by the singular and arbitrary conduct of the managers of the Buffalo and State Line Road, in breaking their contract arrangements in regard to ticketing passengers and connecting passenger and freight trains to and from the West. The surprise is the greater as the Treasurer of the New-York and Erie is, individually, one of the heaviest holders of State Line Stock. We understand, to-day, that the difficulty referred to not only did gross injustice to the New-York and Erie, but to all the lines to the West operating on the American or South shore of Lake Erie, and is (or was) of so serious a nature as to call for a general railway conference at Buffalo on Wednesday last, where the proper corrective was applied and a mutual good understanding for the future arrangement of trains and fares agreed upon. The following communication makes reference to the subject, and was no doubt suggested by the threatened rivalry between the lines running to and around the American and Canadian shores of Lake Erie—including the two great lines of New-York, and the two Michigan roads. The necessity for our correspondent's appeal may not be so pressing, under the reported settlement at Buffalo, but his suggestions are not the less forcible:

To Directors and Stockholders in Railroads.

Is it not an acknowledged fact, and seriously felt by all parties interested in Railroads, that the tariff of rates for passengers and freight is not sufficient to maintain the Roads and keep up dividends, which such property ought to pay; and yet with this fact prominent before the minds of all, we find the Directors of some of the leading Roads have, within the last two months, commenced a ruinous competition by the reduction of fares, for the control of the travel going Westward. Not only is this resorted to, but a large number of runners and extra agents are employed, private deductions made, and the results, smaller receipts, and depreciation of the property.

I appeal to the Directors of these Roads, as to what can possibly be the object of this reduction of fare. As soon as discovered in one line, its rival follows suit, and the two roads stand relatively in the same position, the public receiving the benefit. If these gentlemen would only reflect, that travel to and from the great West must come over their roads, and that by exercising a conciliatory spirit, could agree on a tariff of rates, which would not be onerous to the public, and yet remunerative to the property which they control, and do the same amount of business.

Let the Erie and New-York Central, or the Michigan Southern and Michigan Central act in concert, by reducing the number of trains, dismissing their runners, and by establishing enhanced rates and the evil is cured at once. No longer could the Bears of the Stock Exchange hold away in selling the securities at lower prices from day to day, and it rests with the managers of these roads to change the market value of the whole railroad interest of the country. A convention should be called at once to agree upon a higher tariff of rates, not least 25 ₱ cent. on passengers, and 10 ₱ cent. on freight, and if this is not done, ruin must result and stockholders be sacrificed. Is not the policy now pursued suicidal? and when we reflect on the loss which the community has sustained by this reckless system of financeering—of the widow and orphan,—whose all is here invested—is it not time that the community should awaken to the true position of things, and by their influence and that of the press, save so large a portion of our country's wealth from sacrifice? I appeal to the Press generally throughout the country to direct the minds of their readers to this important matter, and protect the interests of MANY STOCKHOLDERS.

The Canadian screw steamship Indian, with advices from Liverpool of the 17th instant, passed the River du Loupe on her passage to Quebec and Montreal, at an early hour on Saturday morning.

The steamship City of Baltimore, from Liverpool at 1 o'clock the afternoon of Wednesday, the 17th of June, arrived here at an early hour this morning.

The steamer North Star, (Vanderbilt Line,) Captain LEAVER, also arrived early this morning, with advices from England to the 17th. She left Bremen on the 13th, and Southampton the 17th.

The United States steamer Hermann, Captain E. HIGGINS, left both the above-named ports on the same days. Captain HIGGINS being about to relinquish the command of the Hermann, a deputation of the inhabitants of Southampton, headed by the President of the Chamber of Commerce, waited upon him on the 15th, in the saloon of the ship, and presented him with a very elegant silver tea and coffee service, bearing an appropriate inscription, as a mark of the esteem and respect in which he is held in that town. The gallant Captain acknowledged the presentation in a neat address.

The steamship Niagara arrived out at Liverpool at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of Sunday, June 14, and the screw steamer Caledonia, from Quebec, arrived there on the morning of the same day.

The American ship Pobera arrived at the Woolwich Arsenal on the 13th, having on board six breech loading guns manufactured in New-York by order of the British government.

It was understood that arrangements had been perfected for running the Canadian line of steamers between Liverpool and Quebec weekly instead of fortnightly as heretofore. A contract was also to be immediately entered into for building a number of new and more powerful steamers.

The funeral of DOUGLASS JERROLD took place on the 15th, and was attended by a large number of the most eminent men of literature and art.

The great Handel Festival took place at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, on the 15th inst. The band and chorus numbered twenty five hundred persons, and the attendance was very large.

The baptism of the infant Princess of England took place in the chapel in Buckingham Palace on the 16th inst. She was named BEATRICE MARY VICTORIA.

Great Britain.

Both Houses of Parliament were engaged in considering the Jews' Oath and Disabilities bill. The Roman Catholic amendment had been defeated by 383, and on a test question the bill was sustained by 341 to 201.

Sir F. THESIGER moved the insertion of the words "on the true faith of a Christian" as at present used, but after a debate the amendment was rejected by 341 to 201, a result which is generally hailed as a testimony of the spread of liberal sentiments in the country. In reply to a question during the debate, Lord PALMERSTON said, that with the passage of this bill there was nothing to prevent Jews from holding the offices of Lord Chancellor or Prime Minister.

On Tuesday evening the Marquis of BLANDFORD gave notice that, on the motion for the third reading of the bill, he would move that it be read that day six months. This opposition will of course prove futile.

The London Times advocates the abolition of Slavery in Cuba as the only effectual means of checking the Slave-trade.

A public meeting had been held at Ashton, under the auspices of the New Cotton Supply Association. Resolutions, similar to those adopted at Liverpool were passed.

France.

Election matters remained without change. In Paris the opposition tickets were divided.

The Orleanist republican fusion was in full force, doing all it could to insure the return of at least a few deputies.

It was rumored that NAPOLEON would have an interview with the Emperor of Russia in Germany, in July.

The fine appearance of the crops gave rise to a good deal of speculation.

Austria was making further concessions to the Hungarians.

Rumors were rife of a conference of the potentates of the Italian States. The Pope of Rome, the Emperor of Austria, the King of Naples, and others, it was said would also be present at it.

The Emperor and Empress were to embark at Cronstadt on the 23d of June, for a tour in Germany, and to have, it was reported, an interview with the Emperor of France at Wildbad, in July.

The trade reports from St. Petersburg describe business as very dull, with very few arrivals of foreign orders for grain.

Prussia.

The whole of the Kingdom of Saxony, and most of the Saxon Principalities, were visited on the 7th of June by a shock of an earthquake. The walls of houses trembled, and great consternation prevailed, but no serious consequences ensued.

Russia.

A treaty of commerce between France and Russia has been formed.

The French Moniteur de la Flotte published a letter from Sebastopol, which asserts that the vessels raised in that harbor were those which were grounded in shallow water, receiving but slight damage, while those sunk as barriers were embedded in the sand.

The Berlin correspondent of the Manchester Guardian says that all doubts are at an end as to the adoption by the Russian Government of the modified Customs Tariff, official intelligence having been received that the Czar's sanction and signature had been accorded.

Italy.

The catastrophe reported by last steamer to have occurred at the Florence theatre took place at Leghorn. In other respects the calamity was as before stated—43 persons having been killed and 134 wounded.

The London Star learns that arrangements are either completed or in contemplation for a conference of the Italian potentates, including the Pope, the Emperor of Austria, the King of Naples, and various minor Princes.

The object of the meeting is said to be to concert measures to relax the rigor of Government in the Peninsula, to improve the administration of the law, and generally to ameliorate the political condition of the people, with the hope of giving the Governments themselves a larger and securer basis.

It is intimated that the Pope will preside, and that his journey has had something to do with the scheme.

DREADFUL CALAMITY.

Upwards of Three Hundred Lives Lost.

QUEBEC, Saturday June 27.

The steamer Montreal, one of the regular steamers running between Quebec and Montreal, left this port at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, having on board between four and five hundred passengers, of whom a majority were Scotch, and other emigrants recently arrived from Europe.

Nothing unusual occurred after leaving the wharf until the Montreal had reached a point (Cape Rouge) about 12 or 15 miles above this city, when the wood work near the furnaces was discovered to be on fire. Almost at the very moment that the smoke was first discovered the flames broke forth, causing the utmost consternation amongst the crowded passengers.

The fire was first discovered at about 5 o'clock, when the steamer was nearly abreast of Cape Rouge.

Every effort was made to arrest the flames, and for this purpose the engines were stopped so as to lessen the draft; but finding it impossible to save the steamer Captain RUDOLPH ordered her to be run towards the shore, and at the same time the officers and crew exerted themselves to get out the life boats. The flames spread with the most astonishing rapidity, and in a few seconds after the steamer began to move forward; the wildest confusion and despair prevailed throughout the ship, and numbers of the passengers threw themselves overboard, and were in most cases drowned.

Fortunately the steamer Napoleon, also bound for Montreal, was but a few miles in advance of the burning boat, and as soon as the fire was discovered, put back with all possible expedition, and succeeded in rescuing from the burning wreck 127 passengers.

Capt. RUDOLPH and the purser of the Montreal were among the number of those who threw themselves into the river, and they being excellent swimmers, succeeded in reaching the steamer Alliance, and were saved. It is quite possible that others may have succeeded in saving themselves by swimming, but as the steamer became unmanageable when a considerable distance from the land, there is no doubt but that most of those who threw themselves from the burning boat found a watery grave. Sixteen of those saved died within a short time after they reached the deck of the Napoleon, and from present information it is believed that the total loss of life by this terrible disaster will not fall short of from three to four hundred.

The steamer Alliance arrived here, this afternoon, with forty-five dead bodies, and another boat is known to have recovered sixty bodies, but we have not been able to learn the names of any of those lost except Mr. PHILIPS, of the extensive lumbering firm of NORCROSS & PHILLPS, of the Three Rivers.

The Montreal had on board two hundred and fifty-eight immigrants, recently arrived here from Glasgow, together with several German families and raftsmen and several American passengers.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Return of General Cass—Changes in the Treasury Department—Southern Attacks upon Governor Walker and the Kansas Policy of the Administration, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, June 28.

General CASS arrived here yesterday morning, and resumed his duties. He is looking remarkably well.

It is rumored that several changes will be made of heads of Bureaus and clerks in the Treasury Department, which has caused a great fluttering and trepidation among the bees in the hive.

The Commission of Marshal HOOVER does not expire till February next, consequently Mr. BEVERLY TUCKER will not be received into the President's household until that time, should a change be made.

The vituperative attacks of the Mississippian and other ultra papers in the South, against Gov. WALKER, of Kansas, are regarded as direct attacks upon the Administration, by President BUCHANAN. It becomes the duty of our Southern Representatives of the Democratic conservative class to sustain Gov. WALKER before the people, and thus give to the Administration that healthy support against the festering excrescences which fanatics are trying to beslime it with.

ARRIVAL OF U. S. FRIGATE WABASH.

The U. S. Steam Frigate Wabash, bearing the broad pendant of Commodore H. PAULDING, arrived yesterday in 9¼ days from Aspinwall to Sandy Hook.

This is a good passage for a side-wheel steamer, and a remarkable one for a frigate whose steam power is auxiliary. She has proved herself to be a very fast ship, going 13 and 14 knots under canvas, and 10 knots under steam alone. She brings 121 officers and men, 131 women and 5 children, who served under Gen. WALKER in Nicaragua. Seventy are sick and wounded, some very seriously.

Alexander Leggett, of Ireland, aged 21, gun-shot wound.

Lieut. Goodwin Brown, of Massachusetts, aged 23, gun-shot wound of left hand at Granada.

The officers of the Wabash represent the situation of these persons, on coming on board at Aspinwall, as the most pitiable that could be conceived. Long protracted sufferings and starvation had reduced them to skeletons; they were covered with loathsome ulcers, their amputated stumps of arms and legs still unhealed, while others were suffering from every form and kind of gunshot wounds; some had nothing upon their persons but a shirt, a poor one at that, while others had only a pair of drawers.

These poor creatures were immediately provided with the best portion of the ships between decks, where hammocks were slung for the most infirm, and blankets, and other bedding supplied to them. They were all taken in hand by the Surgeon and his assistants, their persons washed, their wounds dressed, and everything done to relieve and make them comfortable, but the labors and trials of the officers in this short voyage, has probably been the severest experience of the kind they have ever seen, and the hospitable manner in which they have cared for these sick and helpless persons does honor to human nature, to say nothing of the glory it reflects upon the character of the officers of our Navy. Contributions have twice been taken up among the officers and crews to relieve their necessities, and clothing of all kinds has been given them.

The men generally speak in the most contemptuous terms of General WALKER and his management in Nicaragua; the women, some of whom are very intelligent, use terms of the most scathing rebuke towards WALKER and his whole operations. Some who were present at the burning of Granada speak of that affair as a most wanton and useless outrage, and say the soldiers were occupied in plundering the town and drinking wine at the time they were surrounded and driven into the church, where they sustained the memorable siege.

Some revelations may fairly be expected from this fag-end of the Nicaraguan forces, male and female.

Serious Fight in the Eleventh Ward—The Thirteenth Ward Police badly beaten—Capt. McKenney not expected to live.

A most serious disturbance took place yesterday afternoon on Avenue C, which resulted in the serious injury of several of the Thirteenth Ward Police, and in all probability will result in the death of Captain MCKENNEY.

At about 4½ o'clock an alarm of fire was sounded in the Sixth District, and immediately Captain MCKENNEY, with eight of his men, proceeded to the fire. As they were going up Avenue C they noticed a Hose Company coming down, and when near Tenth-street they were set upon by a gang of rowdies, who began to pelt them with stones. Capt. MCKENNEY immediately repaired to the spot, where he found one of the Assistant Engineers having a man in custody, and who, on seeing Captain K., immediately handed him over to the officer and requested that he be locked up.

Capt. MCKENNEY took the man in custody and was proceeding towards the Station House with him when a crowd again made an attack upon the firemen also the policemen.

Stones were thrown in every direction, and an attempt was made by the crowd to free the prisoner; finding they could not rescue him a stone was thrown at the Captain which struck him in the forehead, knocking him down. The crowd then rescued the prisoner and ran into a hall with him but Capt. MCKENNEY'S men being close behind followed and succeeded in again securing their prisoner. They had no sooner got into the street than they were set upon by the rioters, and beaten with stones and bricks in a most shocking manner.

Capt. MCKENNEY, who had somewhat recovered, had rejoined his men and was also beaten; he was for the second time struck in the head with a stone, and this time knocked senseless to the pavement.

Several citizens seeing the condition the Captain was in immediately went to his assistance and conveyed him to Dr. STAFFORD'S store on Avenue B. They had hardly arrived there when Sergeant VAN WART was brought in badly bruised, and was shortly followed by one or two more officers, who were also cut in several places. The Doctor made every effort to assist the suffering men, and had just commenced to dress the wounded when the rioters again made their appearance and stones, clubs and bricks, were thrown into the store with great fury. Every glass in the window was broken into many pieces, and many of the jars and bottles were smashed. One of the Lieutenants of the Thirteenth Ward informed our reporter that a bushel of stones were picked up in the store after the affray.

Finding it was impossible to save the officers from further injury unless removed, they were taken out; carriages were procured and they were conveyed to their respective homes.

Physicians were soon procured and every attention paid them.

On examination Capt. MCKENNEY was found to have three serious wounds upon his head, besides bodily injuries.

Among the officers injured were officers MCGILL, STRUCK, MCMANN, PEARY and FRIEDMAN, all of the Thirteenth Ward. They were not seriously injured, but received many cuts about their bodies. One had his leg badly hurt by a stone.

Lieut. O'KEEFE, of the Thirteenth Ward, on hearing the news immediately telegraphed to the Chief's Office, and men from the Seventh and Seventeenth Ward were soon dispatched to the scene of the disturbance, but arrived too late to be of any assistance.

The Eleventh Ward men were early on the ground, but arrived also too late; they were most of them at the fire.

The number of the Hose Company was supposed to be No. 12; the attack was made upon them by what is called runners. None of the parties were arrested, they having made good their escape before assistance arrived from the adjoining Wards.

It is, however, stated that many of them are known and will shortly be arrested.

There could not have been less than three hundred of them engaged upon the attack on the officers.

Lieut. STEDACH, of the Thirteenth Ward, reports Capt. MCKENNEY very low at 8 o'clock, so low that he does not recognize any of his family.

Capt. WINES, of the Eighteenth Ward, and Capt. LETTS, of the Seventh Ward, were soon on hand, and did everything to assist Capt. MCKENNEY.

There was little of interest occurring in Havana. The island was peculiarly healthy for this season of the year—there being less sickness of any kind than usual prevailing.

NEWS FROM CALIFORNIA.

Great Losses at the Mint.

From the San Francisco Bulletin.

For some months past, various floating rumors have reached us, as to some mismanagement in the affairs of the U. S. Branch Mint in this city; but as they never assumed any tangible shape, and could be traced to no reliable source, we have refrained from mentioning the matter. For the last few days, however, rumor has been rife in assigning a defalcation to various parties, and yesterday it was openly charged on Col. HARASZTHY, the melter and refiner of the establishment. As the vague reports circulated in the morning papers, (which variously estimate the loss from one to four hundred thousand dollars,) may produce an unnecessary panic throughout the mining country, we will lay before the public what information we have been able to gather on the subject, from conversations had with the principal officers of the Mint.

We have not the space at this time to give a minute detail of the workings of the establishment. It will be sufficient, however, to state that the checks placed upon the various departments are such that a discrepancy in the accounts of any of the officers could be readily, almost instantly detected, with the exception of the melting and refining department. In this branch it is impossible to have a final settlement oftener than once a year, without great expense, and retarding the business of the establishment. This happens because a large amount of the gold escapes into the chimneys and flues, which have to be torn down for the purpose of collecting the waste. The officials of the Mint have been aware, for a long time, that there would be a deficiency in the refiner's department, on account of the bad construction of the flues and chimneys. Various alterations and improvements have been made at different times to prevent this was e. No correct estimate, however, of the deficiency could be come at till last Fall, when the Mint was closed for this purpose, and in order to make the annual settlements. The deficiency was then found to be greater than had been anticipated. This was in a measure accounted for in the following way: four years' accumulation of base metal, which had been separated from the fine gold, had been overestimated—the great press of business having rendered an earlier separation impossible, as the Mint had been worked night and day, by orders from Washington, to meet the public demand.

Immediately upon the resignation of Col. HARASZTHY, when a final settlement would have to be made, this refining of the base metal was commenced. No final settlement of the accounts of the Mint has yet been made, and it will be impossible to say what is the actual deficit. At the time when Col. HARASZTHY demanded an examination by the Government agent in this city, the deficiency was considered to be fourteen thousand ounces. It has already been reduced to five thousand ounces. As the examination progresses it may be still further reduced. At the closing of the Mint last Fall, when the wastage was found to be very great, a zig-zag chimney was erected by Col. HARASZTHY, and in the course of two and a half months' work, the amount of eleven hundred and eighty ounces was collected from it. To show how great must have been the loss during the last four years, we have been told that in the sweepings from the roof of DAVIDSON'S building, three hundred ounces of gold was collected. At Armory Hall, which is at least two hundred yards distant from the Mint, one hundred and eighty dollars was collected. Other neighboring buildings supplied a like proportion of loss. Major SNYDER, the Treasurer of the Mint, than whom we believe there is not a more honorable man in the State, and who is extremely cautious in any statement he may make, informs us that to satisfy himself, he went on a frame building near by, and personally collected a considerable amount. The employees and officers of the Mint with whom we have conversed, look upon the deficiency, whatever it may prove to be, as caused by natural means, of frequent communications to the Department at Washington, and means have been asked to enlarge the chimneys and improve other departments of the Mint, but without success.

These are the facts of the case, so far as we have been able to learn. With the various rumors that are afloat respecting Col HARASZTHY, the public may be able to judge from the statements we have made as coming direct from the officers of the Mint. Col. HARASZTHY and his friends all profess to feel confident that when the proper examinations have been made everything will be satisfactorily explained. At any rate, even if a defalcation did exist, the miners, and others who have transactions with the Mint, need have no apprehension that they will be the sufferers thereby. There is no trouble about Uncle Sam saddling the losses on them. The United States Government is their surety, and any attempt to create an alarm amongst the depositors of the Mint will prove futile.

To this letter, Dr. HAMMOND, writing from Fort YUMA, on May 18, after allnding to "the barbarous cruelty, the arrogance, impudence and treachery," boasted nf by HERNANDEZ, replies:

We have reliable information that your force consisted of between 300 or 400 men, or more; also, from an eye-witness, that the men whom you butchered after they had surrendered, died bravely. So the two items in your letter, with regard to these points, I consider as totally false. * * * *

P. S.—I have the charity to think that, as yon have written to me in English, you do not know what you say; for I cannot believe that a man, who pretends to have the sentiments of a gentleman, could write so barbarous a letter as yours.

PROCEEDINGS OF WOOD AND TOZER'S PARTY—

DESPERATE ESCAPE FROM THE MEXICANS.

From the San Diego Herald of May 23d we take the following, which describes the movements in Sonora of WOOD and TOZER'S party, which finally reached Los Angeles:

"A gentlemen, just in from Sonora, has furnished us with the following statement of facts concerning the command of Major R. C. WOOD, (of which he was a member,) who started from Tucson to join CRABB'S party, and when so brave y fought their way back, through a body of three to five hundred Mexicans and Indians.

The Tucson Valley Company, composed of 26 men, was organized the 1st of April, and designed to settle in some portion of Sonora, and thereby, without resort to firearms, to revolutionize that State as to establish therein, agreeably to the wishes of the inhabitants, as they were induced by their representatives to believe, a Republican form of government, and for that purpose to co-operate with Gen. H. A. CRABB'S then emigrating expedition to Sonora.

This company purposing to join Gen. CRABB, agreeably to his instructions, under Major R. C. WOOD, marched for Cavorca, and without delay. At 4 o'clock P. M., of the fourth day, we arrived at a point, midway between Cavorca and the town of Pitiquit, where they were met by from 300 to 500 Mexicans and Indians, in a dense forest of mesquit trees, under command of Capt. MORENA, of Altar.

Upon halting, the Americans were informed that the Governor of the State had ordered MORENO'S command to arrest them; that, however, if the Americans would lay down their arms, they should be unmolested, and allowed to depart from the country, under the protection of his (MORENO'S) force; to consider which, they (the Americans) were allowed ten minutes, which time they occupied in defensive preparations, and, at its expiration, moved onward a few hundred yards and halted. By this time they were completely surrounded, and being fired upon from every quarter. The fight lasted until dark, and was ended by the Americans charging, under a heavy fire, through the enemy's line. In this engagement the Americans lost no men, and had but one wounded (slightly.) The Mexicans had eleven killed and many wounded.

The Americans then made their way to within a few hundred yards of Cavorca, where they learned that it would be impossible to join Gen. CRABB, by reason of his being surrounded by 1,500 Mexicans and Indians. By this they were induced to return to their own territory, and for that purpose at once began the march, retracing their steps. The following morning they were set upon by about seventy horsemen and a running fight kept up during the balance of the day. In the engagement more than twenty Mexicans and but three Americans were killed.

On the night of the third day thereafter, a party of Mexicans, French and Indians, who were in ambush, twenty miles north of Tubutama, attacked from the hill tops (their hiding place,) the Americans, as they passed below. The engagement lasted but a few minutes and resulted in the loss of one of each party. No further fighting occurred.

The names of the Americans, who fell in the different engagements, are: Joseph Thomas, A. A. Woods (generally called Bill Woods,) —— Hughes and —— Chambers,

THE MASSACRE AT SONOITA.

The San Diego Herald also publishes a letter from Capt. WM. J. ANKRIM, dated Fort Yuma, May 7th, in which the writer gives the following particulars of the massacre at Sonoita:

In reply to the inquiry you made in reference to the facts connected with the murder of four American citizens in the vicinity of Sonoita, Sonora, by Mexican authority, I would say, that I was in that place at the time the outrage was committed, and the facts are as follows:

When Gen. Crabb resumed his march upon Cavorca, he left three invalids and one other of his command at Sonoita, on the Sonora side of the line, with orders to join him as soon as their health should be restored. In the meantime, as rumors had reached Sonoita through the Indians, (the only channel through which any information had been received concerning Gen. CRABB and his command for fifteen or twenty days,) that a party of Mexican soldiers were on the march from Cavorca to Sonoita, for the purpose of intercepting and searching for any straggling filibusters that might be in that part of Sonora, these four men concluded that, as a matter of precaution, it would be better for them to cross on our side of the line, which they did on the evening of the 14th of April, and took possession of a house that had recently been occupied, and was owned by E. E. DUNBAR, Esq.

There they remained until the night of the 17th, when a detachment of 25 Mexican soldiers, under the command of a Chileno, arrived, and during the darkness surrounded the house and took them prisoners, without resistance, tied them, and about 5½ o'clock the next morning, led them out a short distance from the house and shot them, where the bodies were left and soon after buried by the Papago Indians.

While this tragedy was being performed, the captain of the company, with a part of his men, came to the house adjoining the one in which Mr. SLATER and myself were lodging, and inquired of the proprietor, a Mexican, if there were any other Americans about there; he was told there were two, but that they were not filibusters. He replied that he did not wish to molest any but filibusters, and after searching for some time, without success, for an Irishman named MCNULTY, who had accompanied Gen CRABB from Sonoita to Aquitobac, as interpreter, and returned from that place, he left for Cavorca, taking with him as a prisoner, young AINSA, a brother-in-law of Gen. CRABB, who was captured in the same house with the four Americans.

In reference to the location of Mr. DUNBAR'S house, there has never been a doubt expressed as to which side of the line it was on, and as an evidence that the Mexican authorities considered it beyond the reach of their jurisdiction, they suffered Mr. DUNBAR to sell many thousand dollars worth of what would be classed nnder Mexican laws as contraband goods, in the same house, during the past six or eight months.

IMPORTANT FROM UTAH.

Objects of Brigham Young's Journey North—Great Egress of Missionaries—Serious Dissensions among the Saints—Mormondom Breaking up.

The Sacramento Union publishes some important Utah intelligence received from THOMPSON, the Carson Valley expressman. His latest datee are from Carson Valley to the 17th May, and from Salt Lake to 25th April.

On Saturday, the 16th May, jost before Mr. THOMPSON left the Mormon Station, a party of ten men arrived there from Great Salt Lake City, which place they left on the 25th of April—24 days later than our former advices. The party consisted of KEMPTON and brother, from Bear River, in this State; MERKLEY and BAKER, of Carson Valley; PRICE, of Washoe Valley, and Missionaries on their way to the Sandwich Islands. Mr. KEMPTON had with him three wagons and 19 American horses, in fine condition, which he was taking to his ranch on Bear River. They passed, on the Humboldt, a party with 15 wagons from Great Salt Lake, on their way to Carson Valley, and three droves of cattle designed for this State. They intended to move on in a few days.

KEMPTON'S party was accompanied the first day as far out as Bear River, by President BRIGHAM YOUNG. On the 26th of April he left them for the North, intending to go by Fort Hall to Salmon River, in Oregon Territory. His object was to look out for a new station in that country, Whether he was preparing to move there himself or not, was not known.

At Great Salt Lake there had been little or no money during the Winter. Wheat was selling at $1 per bushel, and good cattle were very cheap for cash. Provisions were plentiful. A train of forty handcarts, with three missionaries to each cart, had left for the States, and President YOUNG had sent on forty tons of flour to supply his stations between that place and the Missouri River.

The Sacramento Bee mentions the arrival, at Placerville, of a train from Great Salt Lake, which left there April 26. It brings news of divisions among the Mormons.

A company numbering from 120 to 130 missionaries had left the States with handcarts. Their object is to get proselytes. Fifty or sixty tons of flour had been sent on by BRIGHAM YOUNG, to supply the Mormon stations between Salt Lake and the Missouri River. Large droves of stock are on the way to California. Numerous pack trains are leaving Carson Valley for Placerville to obtain supplies. Several parties in and beyond Carson Valley, had been met endeavoring to turn emigrants by the Big Tree Route.

A company of over one hundred emigrants is now encamped within two miles of Placerville, and they intend starting for the East across the plains, on Saturday. The party is made up of persons from all parts of the State.

The San Francisco Bulletin says:

The news from Utah is important. The little nation built up by the energies engendered by superstition, ambition and self interest, is divided against itself. It must shortly fall. All are not saints who are in Utah. There are 6,000 "apostates" at Salt Lake, its principal city. They are proscribed and persecuted. They are under the ban of the Church. Neither their lives nor property are protected. Their wives and their children, and the things that in other nations are held sacred, they hold by a tenure which is limited by the caprice of a besotted priesthood. "Destroying Angels," paid and authorized assassins, are the ministers of the justice there meted out. All are transgressors who venture to doubt the divinity of the inspiration which commands a robbery or dictates a murder. Force and fear are the only bands which hold its people longer together. Emigration is forbidden. He who would fly their accursed rule must leave behind his wife and children. Neither is his property under his control, nor can he take it with him. The fruits of his own industry are liable to be taken from him if he attempts to withhold them his life may pay the forfeit.

The Mormons are finding out that they are not as other men, and many of them are beginning to find out that wherein they differ therein they are inferior to their fellows. The spreading of this knowledge and of such convictions is causing discontent. In proportion as the dissatisfaction becomes more and more extended, the power of the priesthood must decline. A public sentiment will be formed, and it will be sure to be in opposition to the church authorities. The protection of the rights of individuals against the tyranny of the Elders, by the troops and courts of the central Government, will encourage this opposition. Others, owing no allegiance to the church or her officers, will venture there when insured of safety. They will form a nucleus around which the discontented will rally. Collisions will ensue. The interference of the Government must become more active. The inhabitants will look to the laws and the Constitution, and to the Courts for their protection, instead of hoping to gain it by a slavish submission to their spiritual guides. Their superstitions may survive as a religion, but it will be divorced from power and politics, and its teachings will be purer and more rational. The people of Utah then will be fully Americanized.

News from the British West Indies.

THE SUGAR QUESTION—CROPS, &C.

Our advices from Kingston (Ja.) are to the 12th inst. The news is unimportant. The Sugar question occupied the attention of local journals. We read in the Colonial Standard of the 8th:

We have learnt, with much pleasure, that, among the passengers for this Island, by the present steamer, is a gentleman named EVANS, who visits Jamaica with the intention of investing such an amount of capital as he may find room for employing in the cultivation of sugar. We have reason to believe that the improved prospects of Colonial agriculture is likely to tempt to this Island a considerable amount of that money export which has for a long time been sought for in vain, and our only hope is, that the influence likely to be brought into immediate connection with the Colony may be sufficient to induce the Government to consider whether some active measures may not be immediately taken for increasing the supply of available labor.

The Northside papers represent the May rains to have been very general and heavy throughout the island. In most parishes the crop was nearly brought to a close, and therefore we are inclined to believe that very little inconvenience will have been felt; whilst the benefit to the young canes in every part of the island will be invaluable.

IMPORTANT FROM NEW-GRANADA.

Departure of the American Minister from Bogota—His Instructions to Withdraw—Expectations of a Settlement of the Difficulty with the United States—Message from President Ospina Encouraging a Settlement—A British Fleet on Both Sides of the Isthmus.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PANAMA, Friday, June 19, 1857.

Mr. BOWLIN, our Minister Resident at Bogota, arrived at Aspinwall on the 9th instant, having left the Capital on the 19th. His last instructions from Washington not having reached him, he took leave of the Executive and people in a very polite note, in which he states that his departure is not due to any misunderstanding there may exist between the two Governments, but from a determination to return to the United States, fixed upon as long ago as last Winter. Mr. BOWLIN expresses his thanks to the members of the Government, and the people of the "beautiful city of Bogota," for their politeness and personal attentions to him during his residence among them; and says that whether he shall return or not, is not a matter within his control. On his arrival at Carthagena he found a dispatch from Washington, directing him, if no advances had been made to him toward a fair settlement of the Isthmus question, to ask his passports, and quit the country immediately.

Mr. BOWLIN, knowing that President OSPINA was much dissatisfied, on assuming the office of President on the 1st April, at the rampant course of President MALLARINO, his predecessor, in rejecting in such insolent and haughty terms the ultimatum of Mr. MOSER, and naturally supposing, in consequence, that the new President would signify his intention to him to open negotiations on a basis that would admit of a satisfactory settlement, remained some five or six weeks after Mr. MOSER left, in order to give him a chance to do so. But during this whole time, Mr. BOWLIN never received the slightest intimation from any source, executive or legislative, that the government would turn upon its steps. At last, feeling that his presence in Bogota looked as if he was soliciting propositions, he did not consider it honorable or advantageous to this government for him to remain longer.

Notwithstanding the silence of OSPINA, there is but little doubt in my mind that the question will speedily be settled, especially if the United States shall act with firmness in the premises. Indeed, there is good reason to believe that one of OSPINA'S first acts was to instruct Gen. HERRAN, Minister of New-Granada at Washington, to assure Mr. BUCHANAN of his disposition to accede to the demands of the United States so far as the indemnity is concerned, and of his determination to arrive at a settlement at the earliest opportunity. But the Administration of MALLARINO so inflamed the public mind against us that the new President is obliged to feel his way along until he can feel perfectly safe in walking boldly upright in the road he is disposed to follow. OSPINA, in common with every intelligent man, does not imagine that the United States will be satisfied with simply a money payment. He is too shrewd a man for that. He looks upon the presentation of the ultimatum of Messrs. BOWLIN and MOSER for $400,000 as a diplomatic ruse. Our Commissioners had made themselves perfectly sure before they submitted it that it would be indignantly rejected, and therefore they could afford to be generous. They wished to show to the world the moderation of the United States in asking no more, and thus gain its moral support, and they succeeded. To suppose that on the payment of this money, the United States is to leave the transit across this Isthmus in the same unprotected state it is now in, is to suppose our Government criminally careless of the rights, interests and safety of its citizens. OSPINA knows this, and he is waiting for HERRAN to find ont the least the Cabinet at Washington will be contented to accept. In view of these facts, it behooves the American Cabinet at once to openly declare its intentions in regard to the Isthmus transit. The quicker it does it, the quicker it will arrive at a settlement.

I have positive information that a day or two before the mail left Bogota, President OSPINA sent in a message to Congress in secret session, asking power to instruct his Minister at Washington, not only to accede to the money demand; but to accept any additional terms of settlement that may not be derogatory to the honor and dignity of New-Granada. It is true that the President already possesses the power he asks, as any arrangement must necessarily be submitted to the next Congress for its approval. But if he can get such a vote now, he will thereby give such assurances of good faith to the United States as will induce her to postpone any hostile action until the treaty can be submitted, and also in a manner bind the New-Granada Congress to approve it when it shall be laid before the body next Winter. Congress will probably not adjourn before the 1st of July, as the President is anxious to keep it together as long as possible, in the hope that Gen. HERRAN may send out some propositions for its approval, which he may have made, and which may have been accepted by the Cabinet at Washington.

There is nothing else from Bogota of interest. An attempt at revolution in the province of Ocana was made a month since, on account of the arbitrary suppression of the Province by the Government, and its annexation to another district, but it is not expected to have any serious result.

Mr. BOWLIN goes to New-York by this steamer, as also Don JUSTO AROSEMENA, first Governor of this State, and at present its Senator in Congress.

You will have observed by the reply of Lord PALMERSTON to Mr. WYLD'S questione in Parliament, that a British fleet is to be stationed on both sides of the Isthmus during the pendency of the American dispute. A portion of the fleet has already cast anchor. Report says that Admiral STEWART has orders to keep four ships at Aspinwall, and that Admiral BAUCH will station a like number in this bay. I doubt, however, if more than two British ships will be stationed at Panama, especially as all the British Pacific fleet that can be spared, must go to China. Besides, the United States has only one ship of fifty guns here, and can scarcely ever have at any one time more than seventy, as her whole force between Cape Horn and California is only 700 guns.

The extra session of the State Legislature, called for the 1st June, I presume has been given up as a bad job. No quorum can be raised. It was generally understood that the object of the convocation was to devise some means of taxation by which the wheels might be kept in motion. As there is not a dollar in the Treasury, and no likelihood of one finding its way into it—no Supreme Court, because no decent man will accept the employ—and no Legislature, the State may be considered as "busted up." Gov. CALVO has asked the National Congress to empower the Legislature to levy a tax of three cents per pound or seventy cents per cubic foot on all articles imported for home consumption. This would amount to the snug little sum of $6 50 on a barrel of flour costing, say, $8; to $2 40 on a bushel of salt costing $1, while $3 worth of silk or lace would be taxed about three cents, and a thousand of cigars, costing $40 in Cuba, would come in for about eighteen cents! Wonder if it ever entered CALVO'S head that such a tax would defeat its own end? The poor can scarcely eat flour now on account of its high price, and all the heavy, cheap articles that are now so largely imported from the United States for the consumption of the people of the Isthmus would be cut off by the tax. His proposition is now under consideration at Bogota, but it is to be hoped that our law-givers, if they confer any power upon our Governor to lay import taxes, will hint to him the propriety of adopting the ad valorem system instead of the lumping one he recommends.

The citizens and foreigners here propose to take the government of the city into their own hands. Robberies, incendiarism and fights are of almost hourly occurrence, without any effort on the part of the authorities to put a stop to them or punish the offenders. In fact, it may be said that we have no City Government, and the State Government deceased and was buried some weeks since.

The United States sloop-of-war Decatur has gone to Costa Rica and Nicaragua. The St. Mary's has gone to Jarvis Island to look for guano. F. W. R.

SUSPENSION OF DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES.

From the Panama Star and Herald.

Hon. JAMES B. BOWLIN, Resident Minister of the United States at Bogota, arrived at Aspinwall en route for Washington on the 9th inst.

Upon reaching Carthagena Mr. B. found a dispatch from his Government ordering him to leave Bogota and break off all diplomatic relations with this Government, unless, in the mean time, propositions for a settlement of the difficulty between the two Governments should be made to him by the Cabinet of Bogota.

As Mr. BOWLIN was allowed to leave the Capital without being approached on the subject by President OSPINA, it would seem that functionary has determined to adhere to the policy of President MALLARINO, justify the massacre of American citizens at this place, and refuse any redress to the United States.

It now remains to be seen what the latter will do. As the course of New-Granada has been condemned by every enlightened nation that has spoken on the subject, it would seem that the United States have but one course to pursue, to wit: take the matter of redress into their own hands. The remarks of Lord PALMERSTON, which we publish to-day, fully indorses the policy adopted by the United States, and it is understood that France has also assured the Cabinet of Washington of her sympathy. New-Granada, therefore, is not supported in her pretensions by a solitary respectable Government throughout Curistendom, and she will yet, unless she change her course, have to humble herself and be clothed in sack-cloth and ashes.

YELLOW FEVER BROUGHT TO ASPINWALL IN THE BRITISH MAIL STEAMER DEE.

From the Aspinwall Courier, June 10.

CENTRAL AMERICAN AFFAIRS.

The Transit Steamship Imbroglio—Secret Mission to Costa Rica by Mr. W. C. Jones—The Grinnell-Garrison Programme—Arrival of the Cyane at Aspinwall with Destitute Filibusters Late from San Juan del Norte—Flurry About a Letter from an Officer of the Independence.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PANAMA, Friday, June 19, 1857.

The Nicarsgua Transit imbroglio in New-York naturally interests us a good deal here. The reopening of the Nicaragua route would, of course, take away a good deal of the passenger-trade that has been so profitable the past year to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and helped to swell the amount of the dividende of the Panama Railroad. But while the Railroad may lose a part of its passenger-business, its freight business must continue to increase very largely. The Nicaragua route can never be made a freight route, on account of the length of the transit and the various changes,—some five or six,—before the goods find themselves on the Pacific. Besides, the Central American and the South Pacific business is constantly and largely on the increase. The last British steamer brought up from Arica and Islay, in Peru, some 200 packages of Alpaca wool and tin barilla, for shipment to Europe across the Isthmus, and if the saving of time will warrant the additional expence, we may at once expect a large trade from the South across the Isthmus.

WM. CAREY JONES, brother-in law of Col. FREMONT, arrived here in the steamer of the 1st June, and sailed, in the sloop-of-war Decatur, on the 8th for Punta Arenas de Costa Rica and Nicaragua.

This mission is a secret one, but is no doubt connected with the re-opening of the Nicaragua transit, and the disposition of the Company's property, now in the hands of Costa Rica. He stated here that he was authorized to offer protection and transportation ont of Nicaragua to such of WALKER'S men as might choose to leave it. If he is also instructed to provide for the destitute American victims of the WALKER foray, now in Central America, he will soon find himself at the head of a forlorn family of some 500 persons. Mr. ANDERSON, erst the partner of WEBSTER in the Costa Rica agency of the transit, and now it appears acting for VANDERBILT, also sought and obtained a passage on the Decatur, being anxious to get to Costa Rica as soon as possible, in order to frustrate the scheme of WEBSTER to place the route in the hands of GRINNELL, DEAPER, GARRISON, MORGAN & Co.

There appears to be a deal of finessing in this Nicaragua Transit affair. SPENCER arrived out here on May 14, bound to Costa Rica, as WEBSTER, who is now here, avers, to operate for the interest of the Grinnell Company. WEBSTER exhibits a receipt from SPENCER for $250, which he says he advanced in the name of this Company to pay his expenses. It now appears, according to WEBSTER, that SPENCER is working for VANDERBILT on GRINNELL'S money! To-morrow three more agents of the Grinnell-Garrison Company, WEBSTER, HARRIS and YOUNG, will start from here for Costa Rica on the steamship Panama, on this same Nicaragua Transit business. There is a pretty English girl in the party, too, but whether Capt. GARRISON, knowing the influence of petticoat lobbying at Washington, sends her along as a bait to trap President MORA, or whether she is on her own hook, I have not been impudent enough to inquire. It is amusing to hear the stories each one of these agents, except HARRIS, who appears to be a discreet man, tell of each other. ANDERSON says WEBSTER is a great villain, and was a partner with KISSANE in the Martha Washington business. WEBSTER says ANDERSON is an old Costa Rican scoundrel, who dined and wined with GRINNELL, sold himself to VANDERBILT, and then slipped off to Costa Rica after giving word that he was going to Albany. SPENCER says that "WEBSTER is a very singular person, whom he don't like to believe a rascal, but he don't know what else to call him," WEBSTER thinks SPENCER is a good deal of a humbug, and would be a rogue if he knew enough. Altogether they are a funny set of fellows—but if President MORA should think as badly of them as they do of one another, he will treat them as Secretary MARCY did PARKER H. FRENCH.

The Grinnell-Garrison programme, as near as I can ascertain it, appears to place the Transit route under the protection of the United States, England, France, and Costa Rica—loan Costa Rica and Nicaragua, jointly, $1,000,000, at 75 cents on the dollar, the interest to be paid by the right of way—GARRISON MORGAN to put in their property, at a fair valuation, for shares, &c. If this route is to be opened, it is probable this plan will be as good a one for the traveling as can be had. If Capt. GARRISON should be the manager of the Pacific portion, the line will be a good one. He understands the wants of travelers on this ocean, and is possessed of more liberality than all the balance of his predecessors put together.

On the 14th, the French friagate Embuscade arrived in the Bay from Punta Arenas de Costa Rica, having left there on the 1st June. She was detained by calms at Las Islas del Rey, 45 miles below here, but the commander sent up a launch with dispatches. Commodore MERVINE received a dispatch from Lieut. MCCORKLE, of the St. Marys, who you will recollect Commander DAVIS placed in charge of the 240 filibusters who capitulated on the 1st May at Rivas. The Lieutenant had reached Punta Arenas, with his charges, having added about 60 to the number before he left Nicaragua, and while on his route. He reports about 400 as waiting passage at Punta Arenas for the United States. On receiving this information, Commodore MERVINE ordered the John Adams to sea, to take MCCORKLE and his command on board for Panama. But after the sails were bent, the order was countermanded. It is probable the Commodore, finding that the steamship Panama was going to Punta Arenas to-morrow, has made arrangements for her to bring them down; or perhaps he calculates the Government of Costa Rica will forward them in accordance with the Proclamation to deserters by Gen. MORA, and the terms of the capitulation with Commander DAVIS.

On the 16th, the U. S. sloop of war Cyane arrived at Aspinwall from Greytown, with 142 filibusters, including 24 officers and 20 women and children. They were put on board the U. S. steam-frigate Wabash, and she sailed with them for New-Orleans on the 17th. A portion of these are the sick and wounded who were sent over from Rivas to Fort San Carlos, and the balance are the wives and children of officers who were sent to San Juan del Sur during the latter days of the siege. Among them is Brigadier-General SANDERS, the hero of the "Jocote races"—the man whom WALKER and HENNINGSEN charge with general bad conduct and incapacity. About half of the number were sick, but there was no contagious disease among them. One youth died on board the Cyane at Aspinwall, who was on his way home to take possession of an inheritance of $100,000.

Our last dates from San Juan del Norte are to the 12th inst., by the Cyane. No information had been received there of any preparation on the part of Costa Rica to send away the destitute filibusters in San Jose and Punta Arenas. Considerable merchandies had gone up the river San Juan in one of the litte steamers. By a public notice, the duties on the river are claimed by Costa Rica, while they are also claimed by the Rivas Government at Leon. The allied States were endeavoring to regulate the question, until the final disposition of Nicaragua should be decided on. There was a good deal of feeling on the subject.

The Railroad Company's steamship Panama will leave for Central American ports to-morrow. She will be absent about twenty days, and will no doubt bring us much interesting information on Nicaraguan and Costa Rican affairs.

The British steamship Dee, from St. Thomas and Greytown, which arrived at Aspinwall on the 5th inst., lost some six or eight of her passengere and crew by yellow fever on her way to Aspinwall. On her arrival there she landed about a dozen men who were down with the disease. Two have died, and the balance are recovering. The disease did not spread among the inhabitants, although the landing of the patients caused considerable indignation among them.

The TIMES, I see, jokingly recommends Gen. WALKER to Mr. BUCHANAN as Governor of Utah. How is it about citizenship? Are Nicaraguans entitled to vote and hold office in the United States, without going through the process of naturalization? Are those who expatriated themselves, American citizens again as soon as they touch our soil?

The Hanoverian bark Helena went on shore some fifteen days since, ten miles south of Buenaventura, on this coast. She was bound from Liverpool to Punta Arenas and Panama, with an assorted cargo, most of which would be saved. The vessel will be a total loss.

A letter from one of the officers of the Independence, in this harbor, to the National Intelligencer, seems to have created quite a flurry in the Navy Department. This letter was a sort of grumbling one. The writer appears to be completely disgusted with his long stay in this port, and lays the blame of it on the disposition of the United States to protect the railroad monopoly. He takes pretty much the same view of the matter as the New-Granadian Government took—says the Americans on the Isthmus are interested in kicking up a row, that they may speculate on the lands they have bought since the massacre, etc.; that the Independence is so rotten and leaky that it is doubtful if she ever gets away from here; that the livers of all the officers and men are enlarging, as the livers of geese used to under the Roman treatment for the tables of the Emperors—and, in fact, gets off a general growl. The last mail brought out a dispatch from Secretary TOUCEY to Commodore MERVINE, directing him to make every effort to discover the writer, and report his name to the Department. So the Commodore summoned all the officers, read the dispatch to them, then the letter, and then questioned each one individually, if he was the author. They all answered "No," except the surgeon of the ship, who responded that he did not recognize the right gitber of the Secretary or the Commander-in-Chief to interfere in his personal matters, and so the matter stands for the present. I will say here, that not a single foot of ground has been purchased on this Isthmus by any American since the April massacre; and further, that not half a dozen Americans, aside from what the railroad company own, are holders of lands in Panama. Those that do hold any would be glad to sell it at less than half its cost to them.

The long letter in the New-York Herald, of May 20, dated at Panama, bolstering up TITUS, no doubt written by that worthy himself, caused considerable amusement here. TITUS claims that he "left" WALKER'S camp in order to go to San Juan del Sur, to intercede with Commander DAVIS to save the great filibuster! This is rather cool, especially after TITUS' admissions here that he deserted WALKER, because he considered him "a mere cut throat and murderer." How came TITUS in Costa Rica, if he went to San Juan del Sur on the 26th of April for such a purpose? The fact is, TITUS deserted, and he did not pretend to deny it here.

PANAMA, Friday, June 19, 1857.

After closing my letter of same date as this, the bark J. R. Mora arrived in 13 days from Punta Arenas, with 302 filibusters, being the men who capitulated at Rivas on the 1st of May, including about 60 whom Lieut. MCCORKLE, of the St. Mary's, who had them in charge, picked up about Rivas and on the route.

President MORA writes to Com. MERVINE that he does not feel obliged to forward these men in accordance with the agreement with Commander DAVIS, because WALKER violated it by destroying the guns and ammunition on his surrender. Nevertheless, he does not feel disposed to imitate his bad faith, and so has sent them to Panama at Government expense. I understand the amount paid for the charter of the bark was $7,500, the Government furnishing provisions, which consisted of rice and plantains.

The men are mostly in good health, but very dirty and almost naked. Many of them are barefoot, with only an old pair of pantaloons, black ragged shirt, and felt or straw hat. I saw several without either hat or shoes. They started from Virgin Bay on the 6th May, and arrived at Punta Arenas on the 19th, stopping several days at Liberia, the first Costa Rican military station. They marched on foot all the way, except when crossing the gulf of Nicaragua in hungoes. But one, a man named JONES, died on the passage to Panama.

The J. R. Mora is a small iron bark of say 250 tons. She was formerly the U. S. revenue-cutter Polk. You may judge that the poor fellows must have had a hot time of it, packed so closely thirteen days in a little vessel, under a tropical sun.

Commodore MERVINE says he has no authority from Government to pay money for the transportation of these men to the United States or across the Isthmus. He offered a draft on the United States, without recourse, for the price of transit across the Isthmus, $25 each man, which was accepted, as the men have gone over. I do not know how they are to get home immediately. The Mail Company has telegraphed that it will not take them, even if their passage is guaranteed. The Wabash steam frigate has gone to New-Orleans, and I presume that the Cyane and Saratoga could not leave with them without orders from Com. PAULDING, who is absent in the Wabash.

The J. R. Mora does not bring any papers or news from Costa Rica.

A telegraphic dispatch has just announced the arrival of the Roanoke, Captain MONTGOMERY, at Aspinwall.

Commodore MERVINE is going over, and will probably get the filibusters off either on the Granada to New-Orleans or the Roanoke. Com. MERVINE had instructions to bring these men from Punta Arenas to Panama, but there his authority ended. He expected them to come on the Decatur. F. W. R.

IMPORTANT FROM THE SOUTH PACIFIC.

Machinations of Flores in Ecuador—Salute to the Ex-President by the U. S. Frigate Independence—Protectorate of England and France over the Chinchas—Deplorable Condition of Peru—Interesting from Bolivia and Chili.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PANAMA, Friday, June 19, 1857.

By the South Pacific British mail steamer we have dates from Valparaiso to May 16, Lima and Callao to May 26, and Guayaquil to June 1.

ECUADOR.

This country remains in the same somnolent state—no revolution, and no prospect of one—not because the people are particularly well-pleased with their present rulers or their present condition, but because they begin to perceive that a change is not apt to better either. FLORES, the old President of Ecuador, who always, when in it, kept it in hot water, and since he has been chased ont of it, has been constantly endeavoring to get himself into hot water by getting back, was here three days since. You will recollect that he headed a filibuster expedition of three hundred Californians in 1852 in an attempted attack on Guayaquil, but was headed before he got up the river. Since then he has been roaming about South America, hoping that "something would turn up" to enable him to revenge himself for his ill-luck, principally relying upon Peru for assistance. But Peru is so constantly quarreling over the spoils of the guano Islands that her rulers cannot get a breathing-spell long enough to help their brother spoilsman of Ecuador. And so FLORES, having got completely cleaned out of cash, went to Venezuela some three months since, of which country he is a native, to see what chance there was of not only making political capital, but of replenishing his lean and hungry purse. So far as the latter object was concerned, he was quite successful. MONAGAS, under the plea that FLORES had done good service against the mother country in the Spanish war, ordered his Congress to vote him the sum of ten thousand hard dollars, and, besides, conferred upon him the title of General-in-Chief of the Armies of Venezuela, with the Sueldos attached. FLORES has now gone to Peru, with the determination, he says, of bringing back his family to Venezuela, where he intends to equat down permanently on the little sugar-patch he has managed to save in that country. If he is compelled to do this—for he will never do it except upon compulsion—it will be the best thing he can do for himself and the world. While here he visited the United States frigate Independence, and was saluted by Commodore MERVINE with 17 guns, as Ex-President of Ecuador. Considering that FLORES is just as big a filibuster as WALKER, it is rather queer that the Ex-President of Ecuador should be honored by a salute, while the Ex-President of Nicaragua was sent away from the Commodore's ship under charge of a guard of marines.

Cacao, the staple of Ecuador, is making the people glad this year. On account of large orders from Europe, unlimited as to price, the article brings nearly double its usual price. It now sells at $20 per quintal. This stroke of good fortune will enable every man in Ecuador to smoke double his usual quantity of cigars this year, and every Senorita to spread herself in an extra new lace petticoat.

In the meantime, the glassy river continues to reflect the same sleepy city of Guayaquil it did a hundred years ago—not a roof more, not a bungo less. And the grassy islets, detached from the shore, are floating up and down past the Malecon—up and down, with the coming and receding tide—typical of the people, who, trusting to the bounties of nature, neither toil nor spin, but float along with the current, hoping, if they don't gain the haven of their desires in this life, they may safely cross the ocean of eternity to a land where Daule cigars are to be had for nothing, and where they may never lack a cup of chocolate, or a partner for a fandango.

PERU.

Peru, being in the last stages of consumption, so that even Cod Liver Oil, or Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cannot save her, Great Britain is preparing to administer upon her effects. I sent you a report by last steamer that the National Convention had under consideration a convention with England and France, accepting from them a protectorate over the Chinchn Islands. This report proves to be true. The arrangement has been concluded and signed by both Ministers, and ships of their respective fleets are now at the Chinchas to enforce the stipulations. The Convention has not been published, so I cannot give you its precise terms. It is to last for ten years, and longer, unless either of the parties at the expiration of that time may wish to discontinue it. Any other nation is allowed to become a party to it. It is to be presumed that British holders of Peruvian bonds will be benefited by it, and it stands to reason that CASTILLA, who, ever since he has been Dictator, has been scheming to make a plum out of the Chinchas, has succeeded in his object. How the arrangement will suit the United States, remains to be seen; but as Mr. CLAY, our Minister, has protested against it, it is fair to conclude it is not favorable to us. The Chilian Minister has also protested against it.

All the ships trading with guano under VIVANCO contracts, immediately hoisted sail and left, some full, some half loaded, and some only ballasted, at the news that the revolutionary fleet had returned to their allegiance. I mentioned in my last, a report that the officers of the Apurimac, 44-gun steamer, had agreed to deliver over to the Government in eight days; but the thing has not yet come to pass. At the last dates, VIVANCO still held her, in the port of Islay, as well as an old steamer, formerly of California, called the Peyton. VIVANCO is in Arequipa, the only province which still holds out against CASTILLA, at the head of some 1,200 to 1,500 men. But as he is entirely out of cash, and SAN ROMAN, of the Government party, is in his vicinity with nearly 200 men, the curtain may soon be expected to fall on the last act of the Revolution. CASTILLA still allows the Government to remain in the hands of his Council of Ministers, pending the canvass for President but he orders and dictates everything. He will probably be elected President—but whether elected or not, he will be President.

It is certain that Peru was never in a worse condition than now. The abolition of Slavery in 1855 threw all the negroes into Lima, Callao, and the Provincial towns, leaving the fine estates, some of which yielded twenty and even forty thousand dollars a year profit, almost entirely without laborers. And this is not the worst of it. The manumisos are vir

LETTERS FROM OVER THE SEA.

MONDAY, April 20.

How strangely new the Old World seems to one who has lived always among things fresh and fair. "Of one blood are all nations of every tongue and kindred," and yet how different! These are our thoughts as we wind lazily up the Weser. It is a muddy, sluggish stream, our little boat is more sluggish still, and we are among a people who have never learned the use of being in a hurry. But they have learned the valne of American markets, and the peasants who live in thatched cottages have become rich with American gold, without leaving the land they till. On the borders of this river they are free, and glory in being the lords of the soil, and I am told that some of them whose farms my eye can span, are worth a million and a-half of dollars—German dollars, we presume—and therefore only four-fifths as much as if they were American. They look very nice and comfortable, which is all we can know of them at a distance.

Bremen is one of the four free German cities, but it is also more than half English and American, in the construction of its dwellings, and the manners and habits of the people. Everything is in a sort of transition state from old to new, instead of from new to old. But as they become modified and modernized they do not lose their love of beauty, and in every plan of erection and extension, there is an eye to the adorning. In front of the Dépôt, which is a grand brick structure, very much like the best in America, they are laying ont a flower bed. The old ramparts, which were necessary only when kings ruled, have been converted into drives and promenades, bordered with trees, and dotted with parterres and fountains encircling the whole city. Our first impression is, as we look abroad, it is very pleasant, and afterwards, as we examine it in detail, that it is a goodly city, in which dwelleth much comfort and happiness, if not righteousness. It is the great receptacle of American tobacco, and the distributing office for the rest of Europe—forty-eight millions of pounds having passed through here from Sept. 1st, 1855, to Sept. 1st, 1856! It has also become a great cotton mart. Ten years ago not 10,000 bales were imported in a year, but now at least 120,000 bales per annum.

Among its curiosities for new world people is the Cathedral, founded in the year 800 by CHARLES the Great. A monastery and convent were connected with it, and as usual all manner of bye and forbidden places were provided for the dark deeds of ignorance and superstition, which are now thrown open to the light and inspection of modern tourists. For two or three hundred years several rooms under ground have been reserved by the State as receptacles for the best wine from the vineyards of the Rhine. So they are lined with immense hogsheads, containing 36,000 bottles, or 120 ordinary hogsheads each, which is disposed of only to the sick, being said to the rich and given to the poor, in accordance with a written prescription of a physician.

A monster statue of Bacchus presides, and in two rooms are rows of cozy little saloons, where a party of six or eight may exclude themselves from the "gaze of other men" and drink Rhine Wine to their hearts' content, and eat various and sundry good things indicated by a bill of fare, and from which we selected Austern mit Kringle, (oysters with crullers,) and confese we dined deliciously. In one small room, called the "Rose," lighted only by one small lamp, are twelve of these monster hogsheads, upon which we read the names of the twelve Apostles, for whom they are sacrilegiously named. In these the oldest and best wine is kept, and in the one called Judas, that which excels all. We can't tell why, unless he would be considered the best judge. In this, the value of one drop of wine, computed at compound interest from the day of its deposit, is 36,000 rix dollars, so that in one glass we swallow a fortune, and do not see that any body is the poorer.

Not the least curious apartment is the Leaden Cellar, where repose, not the ashes, but the bodies of those who are an exception to the rule, that "all things earthly must decay." It is four hundred years since a workman, by some accident, was killed here and remained a long time undiscovered. When found there were none of the usual signs of dissolution. He was left undisturbed, and others were placed here to see if the result would be the same. Birds and animals, also, have been subjected to the same experiment, and all remain, it can't be said untouched by "Time's effacing fingers," for every trace of beauty and comeliness is gone, but perfect in form and feature. The teeth are white and whole, and every fold of drapery still is perfect. Here lies Lady STANHOPE, of giant form as well as mind, and by her side a Swedish General and a German student. Alas, what hideous things we are, when the immortal part has fled. It is merciful to let the earth cover us, when we can no longer tread it under our feet. No chemist has been able to account for the strange preservation, unless it is from the entire purity of the atmosphere. Repeated analyzations have furnished nothing more.

The Whispering Gallery is another curious apartment, where the slightest whisper against the wall is heard distinctly by the ear placed against the opposite wall fifteen feet, or against the pillars which support the centre, and no accounting for it. The Jesuits probably knew, and prodded by the mystery.

Of the pictures and frescoes, and painted windows, we will not speak; no words can describe them, and all who would know these treasures of the Old World, must come and see. The imitations we have bear very little resemblance to the original, and to attempt to give an idea of the wonders and beauties of marble and canvas, is a waste of time and paper.

We should like to take our lady readers into the house of an American lady, who has united the best features of American and German housekeeping, and arrived, at what seems to us, perfection in this rare art. It has always been a continuous wonder to us that improvements are so long in migrating, especially in these days of steam and telegraph, that people are so slow to perceive and adopt a way better than their own.

But American housewives will wish in vain for these stocks of fine linen, in a country where flax will not grow, or where it so impoverishes the soil that no gudeman will allow his wife an acre a year to produce her table cloths and napkins. It was with pride, too, that this Bremen housekeeper, who was born and educated in an American city, showed me the work of her own hands in some dozens of rich damask towels, and allowed me to see her spin. "How does she get time?" exclaim some of my readers. Why, spinning and knitting are genteel occupations in Germany. The ladies meet to spend an afternoon in reading and talking, and spin. The wheel is, of course, on the same principle as the one for the same purpose formerly in use in all New-England, but is painted prettily, and the distaff ornamented with fancy paper and gay ribbons, and all the machinery so delicate that there is very little noise. I have seen a circle of spinning ladies, who converse in five different languages, all of the "best families," who also can paint, and play the piano, and who see so well to the ways of their household, that I am permitted to inspect every nook and corner, without notice, and find them "neat as wax." We have often heard ladies in American cities say it is impossible for the girls to learn housekeeping, there are so many calls upon their time, and servants are so well appointed. But we see here a mother of many children, and mistress of many servants, find time for cultivation, for understanding and ordering every department of her household daily, where company is the rule, and not the exception, and performing all manner of good deeds for the poor and needy beside, and insisting that the daughters shall be equally accomplished. The ladies in these circles do not spin because they could have no linen without, but because industry is a virtue and a pleasure.

In every foreign book of travels we have read, without getting any right idea of these old houses, and the curious mode of entrance and occupation. The common door is very large, and might lead one in think he was entering a stable, and the entrance hall would give the same impression. The lower floor is of earth in some, and in the better ones of stone. The stairs are dark, unpainted wood, sanded, for cleanliness, but the rooms are so constructed that you do not see them within any more than from the street. In Bremen this fashion is yielding to the march of progress, and we saw no family there that did not occupy a whole house, though they do exist. But in Hanover they are all after the good old way, and every building is of a dirty cream-color, looking as if it had passed through the flood. Yet it is a grand old town, and here we first realized a ride through a kingly park, first driving through a long, wide avenue, enclosed by trees, with a promenade on each side for pleasure-strollers, and numerous lesser avenues in every direction for miles and miles around. The grounds include every species of garden on the most liberal plan, where flourish Boterine plants, flowers, and collections of all rare and beautiful things, such as are to be seen only where kings have reigned for centuries. We met a young lady on horseback, galloping gaily, attended by eight gens d'armes, and a little afterwards the King of Hanover leaning on the arm of one. He is a well-made, well-looking man, and well liked by his people, but not so efficient a ruler as his stern, imperious father. But, alas, he is blind. Would he not give half his possessions for the privilege of beholding them?

We have not come to Europe to make a fashionable tour of three months—glancing at cathedrals, and looking in for half an hour upon picture-galleries—but to study the people of these old fogy, yet restless and turbulent principalities, which are pouring forth every year their myriads upon our shores. Yet we hope to do the one, and not leave the other undone.

The Government people are a little sensitive about being asked why so many leave the Fatherland for the toils and hardships of the Western wilderness. Yet there are some even of the "old families" who understand well the reason, and freely acknowledge it. We were amused to-day at being asked about the "Know-Nothing Party," by a gentleman who lives far in the interior, can speak very little English, and seldom sees an American newspaper. Yet, he understood very well about the candidates in the last election, expressing surprise that FILLMORE should have consented to be the nominee of such a party, and his satisfaction on the whole with Mr. BUCHANAN'S inaugural, saying it had at first a very innocent air, but was deeper than it appeared!

Tourists do not often stop in Cassel, but we have for various reasons concluded to learn more than scribblers have told us about the Hessians, who are subject to an Elector, and who are just now under what they feel to be an oppressive yoke. He is cousin to the King of Prussia, but married out of the royal family, so that though his children have been made legitimate Princes, they are debarred from the succession. His wife was a beauty, and divorced from a husband still alive, when the Elector was so fascinated as to be willing to forego the rights and privileges of royalty for his children for her sake. It is doubted whether they have quite forgiven him, and though he has been always a true and loving husband, he is to others morose and misanthropic. He does not say he regrets his choice, but it is evident he is in no manner resigned to the sacrifices it obliges him to make. His wife never appears at Court, because she is not received on an equality with the wives of other Princes, but seems very happy at home, and has been a good mother to his many children. We saw them assembled in Church, but should not have guessed their rank if they had not been separated from the rest of the congregation by an enclosure, in the gallery, a little more luxurious than the rest of the Church, but very plain compared with the cushioned and carpeted New-York Churches. The whole interior resembles almost exactly the old-fashioned New-England "meeting-house," in which we were catechised in our childhood—the seats being narrow benches of the hardest unpainted wood, with high straight backs, where there is no danger of nodding during service. The minister stands in a high pulpit, quite as destitute of luxury, while more than half the "body-pews" are filled with soldiers in full uniform, whom the law requires to be present. Our first Sunday in Cassel was Easter day, and therefore one of more than ordinary parade. The organ is on a grand scale, and the music finer than any we hear in Churches at home.

The palace of the Elector reminds us of the "largest hotel" in our native village, being of the same color and nearly of the same form and dimensions. It fronts on a large platz or open square, and sentinels are strolling to and fro upon the stone pavement before the door. Large gates upon another side of the platz open into the park, which is extensive and of course beautiful. After service, every Sunday, there is a grand military parede, and the people in gala dress fill the streets, and seek in any way they please the amusement which toil denies them during the week.

It is not that they consider Sunday of no consequence in a religious point of view, but that this is the religious way to keep it. Some of my readers would be quite horrified to know that as I write on Sunday afternoon, a clergyman's wife is knitting by my side. Yet they are a truly devout and religious people, thoroughly indoctrinated in the orthodox Calvinistic faith, and as thorough believers in the necessity of faith to salvation as those who think Sunday should be entirely devoted to church, the Bible and learned commentaries. The sermon was upon the Resurrection—the minister not reading, but preaching in a very impressive and animated manner, and making a solemn appeal to his hearers upon the importance of a right preparation for death and the Judgment. All the people were attentive and respectful, without the appearance of mere formality which those often have who attend a service so long and so frequent that the body must necessarily become weary and the mind stupefied. The whole congregation unite in the singing, which adds infinitely to the interest and solemnity.

The present Elector is decidedly military in his taste, and his people groan under the burdens of an expensive Government. There can't be more square miles in the Principality of Hesse-Cassel than in the little State of Vermont, yet it supports fifteen thousand soldiers, who can be summoned in twenty four hours for active service, and compelled to fight, not for their country, their altars or their fires, but to gratify the pique or avarice of some potentate, who has no other thought concerning them than whether they are well drilled in military tactics and obedience to imperial requisitions. Railroads are introducing innovations, and, by opening markets, improving the condition of the people. But standing armies are a scourge, and those who toil to clothe and feed myriads of soldiers must reserve very little for themselves. Many a sad story we have learned concerning the condition of the peasant poor, who have no alternative but to starve in this fruitful land, or sell all that we deem honor; and where the worst features of European slavery are exposed to the light, we conclude that tyranny and slavery are everywhere the same, by whatever name they may be called. Power is sure to corrupt, and those who are dependent must suffer. Alas! the noonday of civilization is not yet where the sunlight of Christianity has been the longest shining. The human heart is the mystery of mysteries.

Every morning and evening the recruits are parading under our window—they have just been summoned from their peaceful homes to perfect themselves in the art of killing, which in this old aristocratic land is the most honorable employment. "It is well for them," said a lady, "that they are obliged to pass through this discipline—it gives them good manners and some knowledge of the world;" but we thought a good school would be better, and cheaper. In this Old World we have things marvelously new and strange.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS.—JUNE 27.

Before Justices Osborne and Brennan.

The list of causes on the calendar was very long, but a great many prisoners were dismissed for the usual cause,—no witnesses. A great deal of time was taken up by the lawyers in examining witnesses, and Justice OSBORNE remarked that if it was not for the time thus consumed by counsel, the session of the Court would be very much less protracted than they are.

John Moran, a gray-hooded man, was brought to the bar charged with stealing a handsaw, worth $1, from Timothy Leary. He was caught in the act. The Clerk said he had been before the Court a dozen times before.

Judge Osborne—Well, you're an old offender, Moran; we sentence you to the Penitentiary for four months.

Mary McDonough, a decent-looking servant girl, was charged by her mistress, Helena Smith, with purloining two pitchers, valued at $2, from her house, No. 80 James street. Mrs. Smith had missed various articles before, she said, and she felt certain the prisoner had taken them. The girl, it appears, had brought a suit for wages against the complainant, which was still pending. The charge was dismissed.

"You go home," said Judge BRENNAN to the prisoner.

Willard Poole and William O'Conor assaulted Benjamin F. Hart at No. 274 Fourth-street, June 24. An Irish witness with a very decided brogue went on to testify that he was putting in coal and saw the whole transaction. "Let's have an interpreter," said Judge OSBORNE. "I can't understand a word he says." Other witnesses testified that Poole and O'Conor struck Mr. Hart with their fists and a shovel. They were found guilty and sentenced suspended.

Frances Conklin came up to officer James B Daly, Fifth Ward Police, at the corner of Welsh and Church streets, June 24, assaulted him, tore his star off and tore his coat. She was drunk at the time. Judge Osborne—How long has this woman been in prison? Clerk—Several days. Judge—Well, that's punishment enough, I guess. (To the prisoner)—We find you guilty and suspend sentence. The Court hope it will be a warning to you in future. Leave liquor alone and you won't get into any of these difficulties. Go.

Joseph Smith stole from John Stillwell, No. 8 Ferry-street, a roll of leather worth $16 83, June 9. Judge Osborne—Well, Smith, were you drunk when you did it? Prisoner—Yes, Judge, I was very drunk; I didn't know what I was about. Judge—Oh, I thought you'd say so. Penitentiary, four months.

There was a row at No. 50 Anthony street, June 23, and Henry Jackson struck Louisa Carson, (both colored.) The complainant came up to the bar of the Court in a state of evident inebriety. Judge Osborne—Officer, just put that wench out—she's drunk. That house, No. 50 Anthony-street, gives us more trouble than all the other houses in the Ward. We sentence you, Jackson, to the Penitentiary for 3 months. The prisoner went off laughing, "3 months, hey? 3 months."

Mary Blohn pleaded guilty to stealing some gold coin, worth $25, from Hugh Trousdale. She was sentenced to the Penitentiary for three months.

No witnesses appeared against the following prisoners and they, also, were set at liberty:

George Calligan, charged with assault and battery on Peter Montegazzo, at No. 190 Church-street, June 24. James Burke and John Murphy, charged with petit larceny, by John Gillack, No. 40 Wall-street, May 6. (They had been in prison ever since.) The same, charged with stealing some bowline from John Kelly at the corner of Leroy and Morton streets, May 6. William Delany, charged with stealing a calico shirt from Charles Aulman, June 25.

James H. Moore, a good-looking young man, acknowledged that he had stolen a black frock-coat from John Hurbutt, No. 388 Bowery, May 16. His story was, that family difficulties had driven him into crime. His father married a second time after his mother's death, and he and his sister did not get on well with their step-mother, and finally left the family. He said he knew he had done wrong. He was found guilty and sentence suspended.

Sarah Halliard was charged with stealing a dress and mantilla, all worth $10. The witness, Margaret Drum, was forthcoming. "Can't you drum her up?" said Judge OSBORNE. "Well, discharge the prisoner."

The cabalistic abbreviation "Dis. No wits.," was written on the backs of the complaints against the following persons:

Charles Harrison, charged with stealing three bank bills from Daniel Lynch, Third-avenue, corner of Eighty-seventh-street, June 20. Francis A. Johnson, charged with stealing a four dollar bill from James Mason, No. One hundred and twenty-second-street, corner of Third-avenue, June 19. Thomas Kelly, charged with assault and battery on Catherine Kelly, No. 504 West Twenty-ninth street, June 24. Honora Ryan, charged with stealing a feather bed from Eliza Fletcher, No. 378 Seventh-avenue, June 23. James Slate and Thomas Potts, charged by Daniel Sutherland with stealing a steel square at the Emigrants' Dépôt, June 25. Samuel Thomas, charged with beating Isabella Thomas, No. 500 West-street, June 24.

James Whalen was charged by Daniel Walters with stealing a gold watch worth $100, $12 in bank-notes, and a satin vest worth $2. The complainant stated that on Thursday morning, at 6 o'clock, while he was lying in his berth in the schooner Americus, at the foot of Roosevelt-street, East River, Whalen entered the cabin, searched the pockets of his clothes, took the property before enumerated, and was about to make off with it, when he (the complainant) sprang up and seized him. The prisoner, however, got away from him, but he afterward identified him on the dock and had him arrested. Another witness testified that Whalen was a well-known dock thief; that he saw him on the dock Thursday morning, when the theft was committed. Counsel—How do you know it was Thursday? Witness—Because I was in existence. Counsel—That's no reason. So was I in existence. Might it not have been Wednesday? Witness—I reckon not. Counsel—We don't want any reckoning here. Will you swear it was Thursday? Witness—Yes. The defendant tried to prove an alibi. His mother and sister testified that he was at home in Brooklyn at the time of the alleged theft. Judge Osborne—What do you say, Judge? Judge Brennan—I say give him the Penitentiary, for 6 months.

Sentence was suspended in the case of Joseph Perry, a boy, who was previously convicted of stealing two shillings from Lyman Andrews, No. 13 Carmine-street, June 23.

Solomon Kleck was accused by Mrs. Julia Beatty, No. 224 Delancey-street, of exposing his person indecently June 20. She said that between 11 and 12 o'clock at night, while her husband was away, he came out of a store in which he was a clerk, opposite her house, in his drawers, exposed his person, asked her if she saw him and told her to come over to him. Corporation Counsel Busteed, for the prisoner, was about to call witnesses to his good character.

Judge Osborne—You know and I know that there are lots of men of good reputation in this City who are guilty of more beastly acts than this daily.

Conclude the character of the accused was, however, admitted.

Judge—Kleck, the Court thinks the evidence not sufficient to convict you. In such cases we like to be well assured. If you are guilty we hope this will be a lesson to you.

Mary Mortimer, living in the same tenant house, No. 76 Tenth-avenue, with Mary Carroll, tore her hat and scratched her face, June 25. Both women bore marks of the encounter. The testimony of William Greene, a witness in this case, produced a good deal of merriment in the Court room. He rushed up in the witness stand when his name was called, with the greatest celerity, and kissed the book before the oath was propounded. He lived "on the landing of these two ladies." They had frequent fights and "disturbed him out of his bed" on the morning of this encounter. The first thing he saw of it was "Mrs. Carroll clinched upon Mrs. Mortimer." He was chatting with a police officer "when the murther was hollered." The prisoner had no family; her husband had gone away for the good of his health. She was found guilty and fined $5.

James Burns and Patrick Cline were both working on the building No. 302 13th-street for Mr. O'Keefe. Pat was tipsy and O'Keefe discharged him May 26. Burns and Cline met in the tool house the same day. Cline charged Burns with telling O'Keefe that he was tipsy, when, Cline alleged, Burns struck him with a piece of wood. Counsel—Didn't you strike a man who was bringing brick that morning? Witness—I didn't strike him. I only left my hoe over his jaw. The prisoner was acquitted.

A complaint of assault and battery was entered by Frederick Bierman, whose countenance presented a damaged appearance, against Joseph Reed, Thomas Smith and Richard McClead. The complainant was a bar-keeper in a drinking place at No. 26 Ann-street, opposite Theatre-Alley. These men struck him with a milk can, a pitcher and their fists, June 22, at 9 P. M. Judge Osborne.—Well, who appears for these men, any one? Have you got a lawyer? Prisoners—No Sir. Judge.—Lucky. It appeared to be an aggravated case. Judge Osborne.—It appears to be well understood among young men that they can go into drinking places and drink as much as they please and not pay for it, and kick up a disturbance when they are remonstrated with. No wonder the proprietors keep clubs behind their bars. There seems to be no extenuating circumstances in this case. It is an outrage and ought to be punished. We find you guilty and fine you $20 each, to stand committed until it is paid.

Frank Leathe is a teacher in St. Matthew's Academy, No. 193 Prince-street. A daughter of Herman Broking, 13 years old, went home from his school which she attended, June 13, with her face all bloody and told her father that the teacher had struck her. Broking immediately went to the school and committed an assault upon Leathe, for which the latter now appeared to prosecute him. He said the girl had the nose-bleed, and not a blow was struck. It was urged in behalf of the prisonor that he was acting under ordinary feelings, aroused by the thought that his child had been struck. Judge Osborne—Well, these ordinary feelings are too frequent. He was found guilty and sentence suspended till Tuesday, so that he might put in affidavits in mitigation of its severity.

Daniel Moran was found guilty of an assault and battery on Margaret Golden, in Tenth-street, corner of Dry Dock, June 24, and fined $10.

A lawyer came up, at this stage, to get a case adjourned. Judge Osborne—Oh! don't bother me. (To the Clerk)—Just keep these lawyers out that have got no business here.

John Wöner was charged by Daniel S. Young, his landlord, with keeping a house of assignation at No. 425 Eighth-avenue, in the Twentieth Ward. The case was adjourned to Tuesday.

A complaint against Anna Charles, by Captain J. Murray Ditchett, of keeping a disorderly house, was sent to the General Sessions for trial.

Thomas McLaughlin was a tenant of George R. Deane, at No. 157 East Broadway. Mr. Deane sent workmen there to make repairs. McLaughlin drove them away, and threatened one of them to split his head open. Mr. Deane went to remonstrate with him, and he struck him with his fist. He was fined guilty and fined $5.

Patrick Welsh, charged with an assault and battery upon Michael Halloran, June 2, was discharged, the complainant not appearing.

HEAVY EMBEZZLEMENT—ONE OF THE WITNESSES HELD FOR PERJURY.—During the past week an extensive embezzlement case involving the loss of several thousand dollars, has been under investigation before Justice FLANDREAU, at the Jefferson Market Police Court; the particulars of which are as follows:

Some three months or more ago the book keeper in the establishment of Messrs. PHELPS, DODGE & Co., importers of tin and steel iron, Nos 19 and 21 Cliff-street, noticed quite a number of erasures on the books of HENRY DUPUY, the delivery clerk, and suspecting something wrong, mentioned the circumstance to the firm, who reported the matter to the Chief of Police, and it was placed in the hands of Officers BOWYER and FARLEY for investigation. The Officers obtained full possession of all the facts set about investigating the matter, and soon became satisfied that DUPUY was daily in the habit of secretly visiting parties of doubtful reputation engaged in the tin business. He would cautiously approach their places and as cautiously leave them. He was also noticed making memorandums on the "order sheets" of FOWLER & BURGESS' Express, in various places about the lower part of the City, notifying the expressmen to call at No. 19 and 21 Cliff-street, for two or more boxes of tin. The Expressmen were also watched and found to deliver the boxes of tin at the places where DUPUY had been seen to frequent. During the course of this investigation, no more notice than usual was taken of DUPUY at the store, in order to avert any idea which he might entertain of being watched. The officers at length becoming fully satisfied of DUPUY's guilt, reported the result of their investigations to the firm, when upon examination it was found that the days upon which he had made memorandums on the Express slates corresponded with the erasures on the books.

Messrs. PHELPS, DODGE & Co. then called DUPUY to their private office, and put the question to him, point blank, relative to his commission of fraud upon the house. DUPUY emphatically denied having in any manner defrauded them. Officer FARLEY, who was in an adjoining room, was then called in, and producing his memorandum book, mentioned a number of days upon which he had seen DUPUY visit tinners about the City and engage expressmen to call at the establishment for goods to be delivered. With this conclusive evidence of his guilt, DUPUY at once acknowledged the crime. It had been his custom to make false entries in his books. Having the run of stock, it was his wont, when a customer called to purchase a bill of goods, the order being sent to him, he would have double the quantity put up, one of which would be delivered to the customer, and the other be disposed of by himself. Thus he would visit the places referred to and get the proprietor to buy a box or two of tin. This he would send to them by express and collect the money himself.

Upon these facts DUPUY was arrested, and taken before Justice FLANDREAU, who liberated him on bail in the sum of $2,000.

Subsequent to this arrest it was discovered that DUPUY had procured blank bill heads, and made out bills upon Mr. CONNOR, and collected the money, giving a receipt for PHELPS, DODGE & Co. The collections amounted to about $300 or $400. Another complaint was now made, upon which DUPUY was rearrested by Officer FARLEY, and committed to prison, his bondsman on the first complaint surrendering him.

Upon the investigation before Justice FLANDREAU, the drivers of the Express Companies testified to calling and receiving packages and boxes, at divers times, from DUPUY, and delivering them according to his directions.

THOMAS GALLAGHER, who was summoned as a witness against DUPUY, at first refused to answer any questions, and was committed for contempt of Court. The next day, however, he purged himself of contempt, and in his examination testified that DUPUY was never in his store (this was one of the places where the officers had frequently seen him;) that he never had any dealings with him, and wouldn't know him from any other man, and that he never gave DUPUY any orders for tin.

Philip Farley, of the Chief's Office, being duly sworn, says that on or about the 13th day of June, 1857, he arrested Henry Dupuy, now present, on the complaint of Phelps, Dodge & Co., for embezzlement, when said Dupuy admitted that he had sold a quantity of tin which he had embezzled from the said firm, to one Henry Knox and Ferdinand Spele, who no business in Williamsburg, which said Knox and Spele admitted, and gave up a quantity, which they had in their possession at the time, and also admitted the amount which was due said Dupuy for goods bought from him, and which he had embezzled from the firm of Phelps, Dodge & Co., which corroborated the statements and admissions made by said Dupuy to deponent at the time of his arrest; when, upon further search and inquiry, as well as upon the admission of said Dupuy, it was found that one Thomas Gallagher also purchased from said Dupuy, and had been in the habit of buying from him for about one year and a half, a quantity of tin, which had also been embezzled from said firm from time to time, within the period mentioned—that said Dupuy admitted that he had been in the habit of sending said tin to Thomas Gallagher by Fowler's Express, and altering the order on the book, and substituting the name of Connolly; which said statement is also corroborated by Mr. Fowler, proprietor of the Express Company. Deponent further says, that said Thomas Gallagher was a witness in behalf of the people against Henry Dupuy, on a charge of embezzlement, and has no doubt, and verily believes, that in the evidence given by said Gallagher before Justice Flandreau, Police Justice in and for the City and County of New-York, in the examination then pending before said Justice, on the 24th and 25th days of June, 1857, said Gallagher did commit wilful and willful perjury. Deponent further adds that subsequent to the examination of Richard Fowler, proprietor of the Express, who entirely contradicted the statement sworn to by said Gallagher, he admitted to deponent that he had sworn falsely, and was anxious that deponent should intercede with the Justice in his behalf, and he would tell the whole truth in relation to the matter as it was between said Dupuy and himself. Further deponent saith not."

It clearly appearing that GALLAGHER had perjured himself, Justice FLANDREAU committed him to prison on that charge in default of $3,000 bail.

Messrs. PHELPS, DODGE & Co. estimate that they half loet on an average for the last year and a half upwards of $75 or $100 a week. DUPUY first entered their service as a porter, but gaining the confidence of his employers, they advanced him by degrees, and at the time of his arrest he was their delivery clerk, and receiving a salary of $1,000 per annum.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Canadian screw-steamship Indian, with four days later advices from Europe, arrived at Quebec on Saturday. No news of importance is reported. Parliament was engaged in the consideration of the Jews' Oath and Disabilities Bill, which, on a test question, was sustained by a vote of 341 against 201. The London Times renews its dissertations on the Cuban slave-trade, and, as the only effectual mode of checking it, advocates the abolition of Slavery in the Island. In France the elections occupied public attention to the exclusion of other matters. They remained without change. There is a rumor that a conference of the Potentates of the Italian States, including the Pope, the Emperor of Austria, and the King of Naples, is about to take place. The object of the Congress is not announced. We have no news whatever from Spain, and the inference is that the dispute between that Power and Mexico remains in the same position as at last advices.

The United States mail steamship Illinois, with $1,852,668 in treasure and the California mail of June 5, arrived at this port on Saturday evening. We receive by this arrival later news from California, Oregon, New-Granada, Central America, the South Pacific and the West Indies.

The news from California is not of an important character. Preparations were being made for canvassing the State for the elections, which will take place in September. The Democratic Convention was to have been held on the 14th inst., and the most prominent Gubernatorial candidate of the party was believed to be Ex-Senator JOHN B. WELLER. We do not find the name of any Republican candidate mentioned. A nomination by the Republicans will, at any rate, be a mere formality. A defalcation, variously estimated at from $100,000 to $500,000 had occurred at the United States Branch Mint. Rumor—for as yet it is nothing more—points to Col HARASZTHY, melter and refiner, as the party to blame. He has made over all his property, to be held in trust against any deficiency that may be proved against him. It seems to be clearly established that, owing to badly-constructed chimneys and flues, the waste in the Mint has been immense. The trial of the notorious NED MCGOWAN, as an accessory to the murder of JAMES KING, late Editor of the San Francisco Bulletin, had resulted, as every one expected, in a verdict of "Not guilty." In the news from Oregon and Washington Territories there is nothing worthy of special notice.

Late advices from Sonora fully confirm the information, previously received, concerning the destruction of CRABB and his party at Cavorca. Further and very interesting particulars are also given of the movement of other branches of that ill-fated expedition. There was some excitement in California, and there were rumors of another contemplated invasion of Mexico to revenge the deaths of Col. CRABB and his associates, but it is not believed that any will be found sufficiently reckless to put such threats into execution.

From Great Salt Lake we learn that serious dissensions have arisen among the Mormons, and that there was some probability of a collision between the contending factions. BRIGHAM YOUNG is reported to have gone northward in search of favorable localities for new settlements. Parties of Missionaries continue to be sent out, and over a hundred had started for the Eastern States. The polygamists in the Mormon settlement of San Bernardino had been ordered to remove with their wives to Salt Lake, in order that the peculiar institution may be strengthened by the union of those who have adopted it.

We have no actual change to record in the aspect of the New-Granadian question. In accordance with instructions from Washington, our Minister, Mr. BOWLIN, has left Bogota and has returned home. Nevertheless, strong hopes are entertained that New-Granada will come to terms and accept the American propositions. Our correspondent, in a letter from Panama, states that President OSPINA had sent in a message to Congress asking power to instruct his Minister at Washington not only to accede to the money demand made by the United States, but "to accept any additional terms of settlement that may not be derogatory to the honor and dignity of New-Granada."

On the 16th of June, the United States sloop-of-war Cyane arrived at Aspinwall, from San Juan del Norte, with 142 fillibusters. They were put on board the Wabash, which sailed with them the next day for New-Orleans. On the 19th, another fillibuster march, numbering 305, being the men who capitulated at Rivas on the 1st of May, were brought to Panama from Punta Arenas. Commodore MERVINE was making arrangements for having them also transported to New-Orleans in the Roanoke, which, by latest advices, has arrived at Aspinwall. Our Panama correspondent throws some light on the Nicaragua Transit steamship imbroglio. According to his account, the Grinnell-Garrison programme is to place the transit route under the protection of the United States, England, France and Costa Rica, and loan Costa Rica and Nicaragua (only a million of dollars at 75 cents on the dollar—the interest to be paid by the right of way).

Two weeks later news from the South Pacific States is received. There is no news of special interest from Chili. In Peru the revolution has completely subsided. VIVANCO was at Arequipa; he still held possession of the frigate Apurimac, and a sloop-of-war, but the vessels would shortly be delivered up to the Government. The French and English Ministers have guaranteed to Peru a joint protectorate over the Chincha Islands for ten years.

We have received our exchanges from Kingston, Jamaica, to the 12th inst. They contain scarcely any news. The sugar question, and the late rise in the price of that commodity, was the subject of most interest under discussion in the local papers.

The United States Mail steamer Philadelphia from Havana, on the 23d inst., arrived at this port last evening. There is no intelligence of importance. The island is reported to be peculiarly healthy for this season of the year.

The Street Commission case was continued on Saturday. Mr. FIELD was unable to be present, owing to an injury received by being thrown from his carriage on Friday last. Mr. BRADY proceeded to sum up for Mr. DEVELIN. He delivered a very able argument, and at times was quite eloquent. His speech was interrupted once or twice by applause from the audience. Mr. FIELD will reply, either personally, or by submitting his written argument, to-day, at 11 o'clock.

The St. Lawrence River, about twelve miles above Quebec, was the scene of a most terrible calamity on Friday night last. The steamer Montreal, one of the regular line between Quebec and Montreal, having on board between four and five hundred passengers, a majority of whom were Scotch and other immigrants, was burnt, and between three and four hundred persons are stated to have perished by fire and water. A brief account of the calamity will be found under our telegraphic head.

The Court of Appeals adjourned from Saturday until Tuesday,—no decision in the Metropolitan Police case having yet been made.

The Georgia Democratic State Convention succeeded at last in selecting a candidate for Governor in the person of Judge JOSEPH BROWN, having previously settled their differences.

The United States steam-frigate Wabash, bearing the broad pennant of Commodore H. PAULDING, Capt. F. EAGLE, commanding, arrived at her anchorage off the Battery yesterday afternoon. She made the passage from Aspinwall to Sandy Hook in 9¼ days. This is a good passage for a side-wheel mail steamer, and a remarkable one for a frigate whose steam-power is only auxiliary. She brings 138 officers and men, 13 women and 5 children, who served under Gen. WALKER in Nicaragua. Seventy are sick and wounded, some very severely. Col. PHILIP R THOMPSON, formerly of the U. S. Army, died of chronic dysentery June 24, and was buried at sea. His widow is on board. H. B. M. screw-ship-of-the-line Orion and steam-sloop Tartar, and sloops-of-war Saratoga and Cyane, remained at Aspinwall.

Captain MCKINNEY, of the Thirteenth Ward Municipal force, and several men under his command, were very badly injured yesterday afternoon while attempting to suppress a fight between some fire-engine members in avenue C. The Captain is so severely injured that his recovery is regarded as very doubtful.

The rumored riot and attack on the new buildings at Seguine's Point have turned out a hoax. The oystermen held a meeting at Rossville on Saturday evening, but only about seventy attended, which was not considered a sufficient force to make the attack. The Metropolitan Police are to be re-inforced to meet any emergency.

No appointments were made on Saturday by the Metropolitan Police Commissioners. Policemen CURTIS, of the Second Ward, and DIXON and CARR, of the Sixth Ward, reported at the office in White-street, and were assigned for duty.

There were 324 deaths in the City for the week ending to-day—ten less than the number of the preceding week. There were 6 deaths from small-pox, 6 from sun-stroke, 6 from disease of the heart, and 18 from violent causes.

The work of cleaning the streets is progressing. Over one thousand men were at work on Saturday.

Partisan Degradation of the Judiciary.

The theory of our Constitution in providing three distinct and coequal branches of Government—the Executive, Legislative and Judicial—supposes each to be a wholesome check upon the other, preserving and maintaining a harmonious balance of the whole. The purpose of its framers was to guard against the abuses and excesses to which human power is prone whenever it exists arbitrarily and without conditions. They foresaw that if the powers of the Government were all centered in a single department, human passion and prejudice would seize the reins, through the instrumentality of party organizations, and that the tendency would be to tyranny, anarchy and the subversion of the Republic.

In guarding against results so much to be dreaded, it was sought [illegible] branch of the Government not only independent of the others, but free entirely from their influence even. Whenever any two of these branches become united in common interests of selfishness, the just balance is destroyed, the spirit of the Constitution violated, and its wise purposes are defeated. And whenever that point is reached, the Republic has entered upon a path which tends to its annihilation and the extinction of liberty.

Especially is this true if the Judiciary proves to be the slave of party, when called upon to administer its high offices with reference to Executive or Legislative acts. In the Judiciary rest the highest hopes of the citizen. To it he looks for an honest, unimpassioned declaration of his rights and duties, and for protection against domestic efforts to violate or abridge them. Let it be once understood that this shield is vulnerable,—that it has become corroded by party malignity, so that its protection is uncertain, and anarchy prevails, for each man feels that he has no dependence further, except upon his own right arm. Our State Government, founded upon the same principles, and adopting the same system as the Federal, so far as practicable, is subject to similar responsibilities, and like disasters necessarily flow from failure to discharge them.

It is such occurrences as we have witnessed during recent difficulties in our City which try our elective Judiciary system and expose its defects and dangers. A man is nominated to a Judgeship because of his party fealty and party service. A contest arises in which the arts of designing men succeed in inflaming party passions and arraying them in rebellious opposition to the law. An executive officer, in the pursuit of party ends, usurps Judicial power, seeks to interpret for himself the act of the third or Legislative branch of the Government, and to maintain his interpretation by brute force. Citizens aggrieved appeal to the Judiciary to vindicate the law, and its minister unwittingly, perhaps, ignores justice and common sense, and sustains his partisan friend.

For our argument it matters little whether a Judge deliberately prostitutes his office in anticipation of future political reward, or falls into the error by reason of party prejudices of the strength of which he is not aware. Indeed it is enough that the tenure of his office invites the suspicion that he may be subjected to improper influences. It is vital to the public peace and safety that public confidence in the Judiciary should be unshaken even by suspicion; and it becomes a question worthy of consideration, therefore, whether the tenure of a Judge should not be removed farther than it now is from party influence. It were well if a wall of fire could be erected between the judicial officer and all partizan associations,—so that he should be free from their influence and free even from suspicion of it. But Judges after all are only men, and the desired consummation can be effected only by taking away personal motives calculated to seduce them from the path of rigid duty. The elective system we fear does just the opposite of this. The judge elected through the nomination of a political party for a brief term of years, knows that he must answer the partizan expectations of those who put him on the road to preferment, if he hopes to secure a reëlection or promotion to still higher position through the same instrumentality. It is only necessary to suggest such a condition of affairs to expose its manifest evil influence.

The elective system for a term of years is yet an experiment. Public sentiment is by no means settled as to its expediency. If further experience justifies and sustains such objections as we have raised, it will eventually reap effective public condemnation. Meantime, to aid in the discussion of the subject, we suggest, as a partial remedy, election of Judges for life or during good behavior, or appointment by the Executive coupled with a condition of non-eligibility for any other office within a specified number of years after the expiration of their terms of office as described by the statutes fixing them.

The Witnesses of Walker.

The contingency for which the friends of General WALKER have doubtless been delaying the grand public demonstration they have prepared for their hero, has at last arrived.

The steam-frigate Wabash yesterday cast anchor in our harbor—having on board one hundred and thirty-nine of the companions of the filibuster chief in his glory and his grief.

These are the partners of his toils, his triumphs and his defeat, to whom, while as yet invisible and inaccessible, General WALKER and his trumpeters have been so confidently appealing. They have come at last. Some of them suffering from wounds uncared for—many from illness—all from the depression of frantic hopes and the disappointment of warm desires; here they are ready doubtless to utter their minds very freely and very fairly upon the events of General WALKER's career in Nicaragua. They are the "Democratic masses" whom we sent to civilize Central America, under the command of the high-toned chieftain whom WILLIAM WILSON and GEORGE LAW delight to honor. Let them be put upon the stand. A public dinner might not be ungrateful to them, for they have known more of kicks than of half pence, and the banquet which would be a ceremony to their leader would be a substantial comfort to them. But with a dinner, or without, let us hear from them. They can testify to the most important facts. If it be true that General WALKER despotized over his men to provide for himself—that he deserted his men to secure his own safety—that he was an incompetent tyrent and an imbecile commander, these men will bear witness to the facts. If, on the other hand, he was the noble, self-sacrificing, intelligent and propitious person described by orators in the Park, and decleimers from the private boxes of accommodating theatres, what so loud-voiced heralds of his fame as these can we, or he, or his friends, expect to find.

THE ACCIDENT ON THE ST. LAWRENCE.—We publish this morning a telegraphic account of a most terrible accident that occurred on Friday evening to one of the St. Lawrence steamboats. The Montreal, on her first trip from Quebec to Montreal, caught fire when fifteen miles above the former city, and within a very brief space of time she was burned to the water's edge. She was heavily laden with emigrants, who, in the imminence of the danger, flung themselves frantically into the water, and between three and four hundred lives are supposed to have been lost. The St. Lawrence, at the point where the accident is reported to have taken place, is scarcely a mile wide, and it is difficult to understand why the boat was not run ashore before the fire had gained such an alarming headway. Captain RUDOLF, according to present appearances, must have completely lost his presence of mind: at any rate, by jumping into the river with such improper haste, he betrayed how exclusively he was controlled by fears for his personal safety. We do not wish to judge a man too harshly under such circumstances; but, if the telegraphic accounts we publish this morning are confirmed by subsequent particulars, the conduct of the Captain of the Montreal is highly reprehensible. The frequency of such wholesale massacres in Canada, during some few years past, must deter American travelers from visiting a country which, in other respects, offers many inducements to our Summer tourists.

We have not received the names of the killed or missing by this accident. The omission is due to the refusal of Canadian telegraph offices to keep open on Sundays. Perhaps the consciences of Canadian operators are tender on the subject; if so, the people of Canada would do well to insist that, in the appointment of such public servants, men should be selected with less scruples and more regard for public interest and accommodation. Humbug and cant, under the cloak of religion, are the worst of abominations.

WHAT WILL HE DO WITH IT?—The title of BULWER LYTTON's new novel, which stares our citizens in the face from all the brick-piles, board fences, and old rookeries, in the City, seems like a pointed interrogation aimed at our City Inspector, who is making an effort to remove the filth from our streets, but has no suitable place to deposit it in. We are told that one reason why the work of cleaning the streets goes on so slowly is, a lack of dumping-places for the dirt-carts. It happens to be just the season of the year when farmers are not prepared to take away the manure, which they so much need, to fertilize their lands; and the City has never yet even thought of providing a place for the manure of the streets, where it could be deposited until there should be a demand for it. There are dumping-grounds in various parts of the City, it is true, but some of them are so remote that the cartmen cannot afford to carry the dirt there; and to erect huge mountains of manure within the City limits, close by the landing places of steamers, and the slips of ferry-boats, to poison the atmosphere with their noisome exhalations, during the hot months, cannot be regarded as a very suitable proceeding, in a sanitary point of view. If all the sweepings of the streets are heaped up at the different places of deposit, there to lie and fester through the Summer, it will be likely to do as much harm as it would if spread out all over the City. But the great danger to the public health does not lie so much in the dirt of the streets, which is so inconvenient to pedestrians and shop-keepers, and so repulsive to the eye, but in the hidden receptacles of filth, where it is left to generate foul gases and poison the atmosphere without the source of the evil being known. These are the places which breed disease, and which require the attention of our City Inspector. As to the street sweepings, if they are carted away at all, they are only removed from one spot to be deposited in another, where they will be hardly less offensive.

THE SPOILS IN THE STREET COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE.—There appears to be some hitch in the distribution of the prizes in the Street Commissioner's office according to the terms of the reported agreement between the Mayor and the Aldermen. The new Commissioner, for some cause or other, does not make the expected changes in his department, and there is a backwardness in reorganizing the bureaus. We have some interesting facts in regard to the present condition of affairs in the Street Department, which we shall probably publish in a day or two.

BENEFITS OF TRAVEL.—It is an old saying that there is nothing like travel to take the nonsense out of a man; but travel not only benefits the traveler himself, but those whom he visits. A notable instance of this has been afforded by the visit of our Seventh Regiment to Boston. The Bostonians were perfectly well satisfied with the military organization of their infantry regiment until they saw the excellent condition of our Seventh, and ever since they have been giving vent to their feelings of dissatisfaction and disgust at their own inferiority in military training. The result will be a great improvement in the organization of their State militia, we have no doubt; but it is questionable whether the tendency of the Massachusetts mind will ever permit that approach to military perfection which has been attained by the crack regiments of New-York, where the fondness for military displays and the necessity for military organizations are greater than in New-England. It is not a little remarkable that in the most law-loving and law-abiding State in the Union, it is the most difficult to preserve military discipline. The Boston Journal says:

"The visit of the New-York Regiment has thrown our military into high and just excitement. They feel more keenly the deficiencies of our Infantry Regiment. Its deficiencies are not apparent in the several companies, as companies; they only become signally apparent when these companies are combined in a regiment. The company drill and discipline in all cases is very fair; in some cases excellent. But the moment these same companies form the regimental line their whole accuracy of performance ceases, their military enthusiasm collapses, their discipline ceases, and they do little more for their field officers than the law absolutely requires."

THE POLICE DIFFICULTIES.—New-York never stood more in need of a well organized and efficient police force than at this very time. It requires the utmost circumspection and prompt action on the part of our Police force to preserve order in this Metropolis on the occurrence of our great national holiday, when the feelings of the opposing sects, factions and nationalities are excited by the hilarities and inflammable speeches peculiar to the occasion. The "ever glorious" day is close at hand, and in the present disorganized condition of our two Police forces, there is too much cause for apprehending a disturbance, unless, in the meantime, the Court of Appeals shall give its decision as to the constitutionality of the Metropolitan Police. The old Police are without pay, and uncertain as to their future position, while the new force are no better off. Considering the circumstances of the case, it is to be hoped that the Court of Appeals will favor us with its decision at as early a day as possible.

The New Territory of Arizona.

We find the following paragraph in the San Francisco Herald of the 5th inst., from which it appears that the inhabitants of that part of New Mexico known as the Gadsden Purchase are desirous of having their strip of country set apart as a new Territory, to be called Arizona.

Lieut SYLVESTER MOWRY, of the Third Artillery, U. S. A., takes his departure on the steamer to-day for the Eastern States. Lieut. MOWRY has served for five years on this coast—the last two on the Colorado, where arduous and active service in the extreme heat of the climate renders it necessary for him to seek other latitudes to restore his somewhat shattered health. No officer connected with the army of the United States has ever left our shores with more universal wishes for his future welfare than Lieut. MOWRY. We learn that he will bear with him a petition from the residents of the Gadsden Purchase, whose social and political position, in former articles we have endeavored to explain, and for whom, in consequence of recent events on the frontier, legislation is of more immediate necessity than heretofore. This petition has for its object the separate organization from New-Mexico of the Gadsden Purchase into a new Territory under the name of Arizona. The immense mineral wealth of the country, its commercial importance to the American possessions on the Pacific, and the necessity for ample and full protection of the immigrant, invests the subject with more than ordinary importance at this time, and demands the immediate action of Congress. We wish Lieut. MOWRY a speedy voyage and safe return.

Musical.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—Madame LA GRANGE's short season of Italian opera commences at this house to-night. The work selected for the occasion is BELLINI's "Puritani," the principal rôles of which will be sustained by Madame LA GRANGE, Signor BRIGNOLI, Signor AMODIO, and Signor COLLETTI. The orchestra is under the direction of Signor TORRIANI.

CONCERT.—A very agreeable concert was given at DODWORTH's Saloon, on Saturday evening, by Signor ALBITS. The artists were of unusual excellence, and deserved a better audience than the scanty one which assembled to hear them. At this season of the year, however, it is almost insane to expect a liberal attendance. People are either out of town, or ashamed to confess that they are at home, and strangers prefer waiting for the opera to paying a dollar for a concert, however good it may be.

Mme. GAZZANIGA was the feature of Signor ALBITS' concert. She sang but two pieces, one a duet with BRIGNOLI, (from "Linda,") the other a dramatic romance called the "Mother and Child." In the first she was excellent; in the second immense. If pieces of the latter character were more common in the concert room, there would not be such a disinclination to saloon entertainments.

Signor BRIGNOLI was in excellent voice, but his friend, Signor AMODIO, "had a cold"—which, by the way, appears to be chronic with him. He did the best he could under the circumstances, and was warmly applauded. A very little exertion on the part of Signor AMODIO accomplishes a great deal.

M. GUYON, an exceedingly talented pianist, played a couple of pieces by THALBERG in a manner which was no discredit to his master. M. GUYON is certainly one of the best concert pianists we have.

Another attractive feature of the entertainment was the performance of M. VILANOVA on the Alexandre Harmonium. This instrument, it will be remembered, was introduced last winter by M. THALBERG at his classical matinées. It combines a vast number of excellences, and in the hands of a good player is equal to a small orchestra. M VILANOVA is a much better performer than M. THALBERG, but he does not exhaust the resources of the Harmonium. His execution is neat, and musician-like, and especially so in those passages where the percussion attachment (an admirable invention which enables the most brilliant passages to be executed on this instrument) or a single step are employed. But some of his combinations are loose and unpleasant. He plays so well, however, and develops so many of the best qualities of this noble instrument that we hope he will be heard frequently in the Concert season.

NEW MUSIC BOOK.

Messrs. WM. HALL & SON have just issued a valuable collection of class pieces adapted for young ladies schools under the title of The Institute Chorus Book. The arrangements are by FRANCIS H. BROWN, Professor of Music at the Spingler Institute. The collection contains upwards of one hundred pieces, selected from the works of the most popular composers—such as WALLACE, BALFE, BISHOP, C. E. HORN, BLOCKLEY, GLOVER, LINLEY, &c., &c., together with selections from operas, &c. Words of an unobjectionable character have been given, and altogether the collection is one worthy of commendation and patronage by the fair class to whom it is dedicated.

Amusements.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—To-night Signorina THERESA ROLLA, recently engaged for this house by Mr. COBURN, will make her first appearance. She sustains the principal rôle in the excellent ballet of "Paquita," after which a dramatic company headed by BLAKE, JORDAN, PLACIDE, MARY GANNON, &c., will play in "Sketches in India."

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—The entertainments will commence here to-night with MILMAN'S play of "Paris," and end with "Dr. Dilworth."

BURTON'S THEATRE.—Three pieces will be presented here to night: "Sunshine through the Clouds," "Trying It On," and "Catching a Governor."

THE NEW OLYMPIC.—This is the name given to BUCKLEY'S handsome hall opened to-night under the management of Mr. THADDEUS W. MEIGHAN, a gentleman of taste and literary ability. The New Olympic will be devoted to the performance of light and agreeable vaudevilles, such as made the reputation of its famous namesake. Mr. MEIGHAN has already secured a good company, and important additions will be made during the season. Three pieces are announced for the opening: "Grist to the Mill," "The Stage Struck Barber," and "Mother and Child are doing well."

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—The comedy of "Nature and Art," and a new eccentric comedy called a "Romantic Ride," will be presented here to-night.

PURDY'S NATIONAL THEATRE.—"Bonaparte, or the Siege of Moscow," "Planche," and "Young America" are announced for this evening's entertainments.

BARNUM'S MUSEUM.—The "Corsican Brothers," and the "King's Gardener," are announced here. In the afternoon the usual variety.

QUARANTINE TROUBLES.

Rumored Riot—Burning of the New Buildings—Killing of Several Policemen—All a Hoax—The Military and Firemen Called Out, but have Nothing to do—An Attack Anticipated.

The City was all agog yesterday with the rumors of a bloody riot and fight at the new Quarantine Buildings at Seguine's Point. The buildings had the second time been burned; numbers of the Metropolitan Police force had been killed; Capt. WALLING had been fatally injured; the military of Staten Island had been called out, &c, &c. The Metropolitan Police Commissioners' Office was beset all day by the friends and relatives of the police at the Point, anxious to hear the truth. Their families were also bored by persons eager to know the facts. After a suspense lasting all day, everybody was relieved in the evening by the statement that no trouble had taken place. What gave rise to the rumor was the meeting of about three score of disaffected oystermen at Rossville, who threatened an attack, but wisely concluded not to make it. Our reporters have gathered the story as follows:

Information was received on Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock, at the office of the Metropolitan Police Commissioners in White street that the refractory Prince's Bay oystermen were about to make another demonstration that evening on the new Quarantine buildings at Seguine's Point. As the source from which the intelligence proceeded was deemed reliable, the Police Commissioners sent for the Quarantine Commissioners and informed them of the rumor, at the same time offering to place a large Metropolitan Police force at their disposal. After consultation, however, it was decided to call on the Sheriff of Richmond county to protect the property at the Point. Meantime orders were sent to the several Metropolitan Police Precincts to keep the men in readiness for any emergency.

No. 23 William street, New-York, June 27.

To ABRAHAM LOCKWOOD, Esq., Sheriff of Richmond County—Sir: Whereas, notice has been given to the undersigned, by the Metropolitan Police Commissioners, that an organized attack will be made during this night on the buildings, dock and fences now in process of erection for the State of New-York, at or near Seguine's Point, in the town of Westfield, County of Richmond—this is to notify you of the above facts, that you may take the necessary steps to prevent the said buildings &c., from injury by any mob or lawless gathering of the people.

GEO. HALL,
EGBERT BENSON,
O. BOWNE,
Commissioners for the Removal of the Quarantine Station.

The sheriff received the order about 10 o'clock, and immediately issued his requisition for the Tompkins Rocks, Eolina Guards, and Engine Co. No. 5, to turn out.

For greater expedition in getting the soldiers and firemen together, an alarm was rung on the bells of the Reformed Dutch Church, at Stapleton, and of the Staten Island Ferry-boat Sylph. This drew an immense crowd, and intense excitement was manifested. The soldiers and fire companies started about 10 o'clock, and halted at the Club House, four miles from the Point, for further orders.

A special messenger was also dispatched by the Police Commissioners to Capt. WALLING, to inform him of the threatened outbreak. The Captain immediately mustered his men, who, with the workmen employed on the buildings, made a force that numbered about fifty strong. These were each armed with revolvers and muskets and stationed at all the approaches to the Point, both by land and water, all determined to resist the invaders or die on the battle field.

While thus they waited in suspense for the approach of the enemy, about midnight a carriage came cautiously down the road. The vehicle was hailed by one of the Police scouts with "Who goes there?" at the same time bringing his gun with a clang to the charge. "All right! friend! Commissioner BOWNE! Where's Captain WALLING?" was the reply from the lips of the Commissioner himself, who had come to lend his counsel and aid to the cause, accompanied by a military officer and the master carpenter of the buildings.

These had not long been in the camp when another carriage approached, containing the Sheriff, who had started in advance of the military and Fire-Department forces. He was brought to a halt by one of the watchful scouts, with a challenge similar to that offered Commissioner BOWNE, which took him somewhat by surprise, as he had no intimation that the Police had been apprised of the threatened invasion, and were on the alert. However, after stating his name and business, he was admitted within the lines, and held a conference with the authorities there. The Sheriff expressed himself entirely ignorant of any new attempt on foot to destroy the buildings, and believed the rumor to be all a hoax. He thought a great change had taken place in the public sentiment at Westfield, as regarded the location of Quarantine at the Point, and the matter was looked upon now from a more rational point of view.

The Sheriff and Commissioner remained until 3½ o'clock, when, as there seemed to be no prospect of a collision, they drove off to the Club-House, and the military and firemen were dismissed. Captain WALLING, however, kept his men in readiness all night, well prepared to keep off an almost indefinite number of intruders.

There was, undoubtedly, some kind of a demonstration intended, for a meeting of about 70 of the disaffected took place at Rossville, about 10 o'clock Saturday evening. They came in wagons from the surrounding parts, and gathered about the village bar-rooms in knots of a dozen or so. Great disappointment was manifested that no larger turn-out was made, and it was decided to postpone the attack some time longer. The evening of the Fourth of July was hinted at as being the appropriate time for the performance of such a patriotic deed, but they adjourned without a decision. Another smaller meeting was held at Factoryville, but no great enthusiasm was manifested.

WHAT THE COMMISSIONERS DID.

Word was brought to Com. NYE early yesterday morning, by a mounted courier who had traveled post-haste from Staten Island, that an attack had been made on the buildings during the night: that eight men had been killed, and that Captain WALLING had been dangerously beaten about the head. Measures were immediately taken by the Commissioners to afford necessary relief to their men. The steam-tug Commodore was chartered, and Commissioners NYE and CROLWELL, Superintendent TALLMADGE, Deputy Carpenter, Messrs. JONAS and MARON, of the Medical Staff, and others, left the White-street office for the Point, to find out the true state of matters. They were joined at the boat by Doctor BEVENINGHAGEN, of the 73d Regiment, stationed at Staten Island, who hoped to assist in alleviating the sufferings of the wounded. The boat was fairly started at 11 o'clock and after a slow passage of three hours, remarkable for nothing but anxiety to arrive at the scene of operations they came in view of the Point. Instead of charred and smoking ruins the Quarantine Buildings first greeted their eyes, (for they were unexpectedly conspicuous to most, having by energetic labor become nearly completed,) and around the temporary quarters sat and lounged the Police, quite refreshed from the fatigues of the previous night. No one was extremely disappointed at the state of things, for it had been agreed on long before that the reported conflict was "nothing but a hoax." In fact all were pleased, not excepting the surgeons, whose probably excusable hopes for an opportunity to display their professional skill on the wounded were, of course, not gratified.

The men were all glad to see their superior officers, and thanked them for the interest displayed in their welfare.

After detailing the events of the night, and their anticipations and preparations for a row, they summed up by saying that "the only trouble last night was the inordinate quantity of mosquitoes!" which made them more uneasy than the prospect of meeting the savage oystermen.

After refreshing the inner man the Commissioners and men returned, not at all displeased with the result of the trip.

It is understood an additional force of from 25 to 50 men will be sent shortly to the Point to prevent the anticipated outbreak of the oystermen.

THEIR "BRANCH" IN NEW-YORK.

Sabbath Services—Communion Ceremony—Speeches by Salt Lake Missionaries—A Hand-cart Song to "Oh Susannah," &c.

The Mormons do not all live at Salt Lake, as some persons seem to suppose, although one of the chief aims of Mormon missionary enterprise seems to be to "gather the Saints together in Zion,—in the valleys of the mountains," as they term their settlements in Utah. Members of this strange sect are found in our large cities all over the land,—but chiefly at the points where foreign immigration is most prosperous, or in the more populous mercantile centres of the Western States. "The Church" is located at Salt Lake, and the lesser associations scattered elsewhere about the land are known as "Branches." One of these Branches exists in our midst, and holds its meetings every Sabbath at the hall of Brooks' Dancing Academy in Broome-street near Elizabeth.

Happening in at this place yesterday afternoon, we propose to give our readers some account of what we saw and heard. We found assembled about two hundred persons, of which about half were women. It required but a single glance to show that the audience was by no means an intellectual one. Indeed there were few faces in the room indicating possession by their wearers of even an average degree of intelligence. Nor were there many American physiognomies present. As well as we could judge, nine-tenths of the audience were English, and of the poor and ignorant lower classes found in the coal and manufacturing districts of Great Britain,—precisely the sort of people among whom religious superstition and fanaticism would be expected to thrive luxuriantly.

Our visit was well-timed, for we had opportunity to witness the administration of the Lord's Supper, and also to see and hear a band of Mormon missionaries just arrived from Salt Lake. The form of communion service was not very dissimilar to that of the Presbyterian or Congregational denomination. The service opened with prayer and singing. Two brethren (deacons, we believe) were then called forward from the audience, who "broke the bread." While this was being done, somebody was admitted into the "branch," by certificate from another society, the congregation voting on the question of his admission by raising of hands. In a similar manner a certificate was voted to a retiring member who wished to go to St. Louis.

This concluded, the brethren who broke the bread knelt before it with their backs to the congregation, when one of them asked the Divine blessing upon it. The same ceremony was subsequently performed with reference to the wine. The sacramental elements were distributed to the audience by two young men, and offered to all without distinction, even the little eight-year-old urchin partaking, who we saw twirling a "Tee-to-tum" on the seat while the blessing was asking a few minutes before. No address appropriate to the ceremony was made—no explanation of the rites, no reference to the sublime scene of which these sacramental elements are designed to be the solemn symbols. The whole proceeding was gone through with as a matter-of course affair—a form having no significance beyond the partaking of bread or wine at any public table. In this particular and in the administration to young children, was the only marked difference of the ceremony from that in the Congregational service.

The Missionary brethren, whose arrival I have already referred to, occupied seats at the left of the stand, and faced the audience so that we could scan their faces well. It was difficult to discover from their appearance, what had marked them out for selection as propagandists of the faith. The appearance of neither one of them indicated superior intelligence, and among the several who subsequently addressed the meeting, there were none who manifested the least speaking talent, while only one of the number failed to aspirate his "h," in genuine cockney style, or otherwise to outrage the English language most villainously. We refer to these facts only to show the calibre of the men who are sent out from Salt Lake to gather new disciples into the Mormon fold.

After the administration of the sacrament was concluded, one of the leaders announced the presence of the several missionaries from the "Vallies of the Mountains," and introduced a Mr. MACKINTOSH as one of them, who spoke substantially as follows. We confess that our report of the speech is rather deficient in continuity of ideas; but as we lost none that were presented, the fault is with the speaker, who said:

I don't know that I am acquainted with any of you in this Branch. I have been for some time in the Western States and in New Orleans, but never before had the privilege of being where the height of civilization is. You down here think this is the most civilized place on the globe, and we in the vallies of the mountains think that is. We have got pretty well tanned in coming across the plains, and now we are here we find the weather very warm—at least, it seems so to us. There is a great difference in the climate here and in the mountains.

I wont detain you long, as there are others here to speak. I may have opportunity to appear before you again, as my mission is to the United States, and I suppose I am near my journeys end. But among my brethren who came with me, are several who are going to Europe—some to England, others to Italy, and Denmark, and to Canada. These may not, for a long time, have another chance to be with you. I suppose you want to hear about Utah. The people there get along by industry and hard work. They enjoy the spirit of the Lord and are at peace with each other, and, for what I know, with all the world. We wish peace and good will to all men, and that the light of the Gospel may be in their hearts; but if they wont have it, we feel to let them alone.

We have set an example how to go and preach the Gospel. We have taken our hand-carts,—about seventy of us—have put into them our cooking utensils and provisions, and have traveled on foot, rolling them along over the plains, a distance of eleven hundred miles. This is evidence of our sincerity. We have started to preach the Gospel. We started without purse or scrip, but have wanted for nothing. A way was always opened for us. Once or twice we got nearly out of food. The first time, just when we were wondering where to obtain our next meal, seven buffaloes came along, and one of the brethren shot two of them. The next time we were in similar straights, an elk was chased in to us by wolves, and we just had to kill him. And so we had a plenty to eat and got fat, until now that we are here we are getting lighter, I think.

I am thankful that I have had the privilege of coming here with a hand-cart. It is an example for you which you should profit by. The problem is solved that the journey can be made across the plains with the hand-carts. We done it and are all alive and well. None of us have been sick. We all feel first rate in health and first rate towards the work of God. For sixteen years I have been in the work, and generally in positions where I have had plenty to do. I believe it has been good for me, for it brings me often in connection with the people of God. I know that the leaders in this Church are pure men and no hypocrites, and I know Mormonism to be true, whatever unbelievers may say, and that it will flourish. The evils which people think are now coming upon us will be the very opportunity for us. I would want no better time to thrust in the sickle and reap—no better time to pitch in even here in the Eastern States.

We say in the mountains that there is Heaven, and we call this here something lower; but there are folks who think this Heaven, and call the mountains the other place. We know that we have the spirit of Heaven there; we know that JOSEPH SMITH, "that impostor," was the Prophet of God, and we know that BRIGHAM YOUNG, "the awful man," is his legitimate successor. Why, if he was to come here, I believe he would be more notorious than the President of the United States. He is a good man: I have been in his employ for years, and never was better situated in my life. I suppose he thought it would do me good to send me off on a mission.

In the valleys of the mountains you know a reform is commenced, and you know what that means. He who stole is ordered to steal no more, and he who lied to lie no more; and all are made to cease their evil doings of all kinds. We have come down to bring to you some of the fire kindled there. I am happy to see so many of you here assembled, and that you live in the spirit of religion. I won't lengthen my remarks, as my brethren, who are going to cross the water, may have no other opportunity to speak. May you continue to enjoy the light and peace of the Gospel: Amen.

Each speaker closed with a benediction to which the congregation responded Amen!

ABNER YOUNG was the next speaker. He felt to be thankful that he was here, and that he had the privilege of declaring his testimony. He was thankful too that he was here a good ways on his journey, and would be just as pleased if his destination was here as he was that he was to go further. He knew one thing among a great many others that he knew,—that he was the servant of God, who had called him, was the preserver of his life, and does all things just about right. I suppose, he continued, the Gentiles call me a fool, but I don't care what they call me, nor care what they think of me. I just calculate that God is my friend and will take care of me while he wants me to live up in earth and when he calls me hence it's all right. While I live I expect to testify to the truth of Mormonism and the purity of my brothers and sisters in the valleys of the mountains, and to give the lie to the slanders circulated about them. I have been one of those who came across the plains with the hand-carts,—not because I was so poor that I couldn't get a donkey,—but I done it as a testimony to the children of men, that it might be a stimulus to others. We done it for your sakes, that we might teach you to do it for your own sakes.

Well now we have had a good time. I have travelled on the plains for ten years, and never had so pleasant a time and easy trip as this. When I crossed with oxen we were always afraid the Indians would come down upon us and rob us of our animals, and leave us to starve on the plains, without our ever thinking of taking off a pair of wheels and making a hand cart. I think now I could do that, if I had occasion. We used to stand guard for half the night for fear of the Indians, and had to chase our animals in the morning, losing a great deal of time. Now we get up in the morning, get our breakfast, roll along the hand carts until we are tired and hungry and want our dinner, and then on again until night, when we lay down in our blankets to sleep in the pure air. This we enjoy and fat under,—but since we have got down here in this climate, a man wants a prop under each eyelid to keep awake in meeting or anywhere else. I say this for your encouragement—that each of you may go and get a hand-cart and start off for Zion. I tell you the day will come soon when you will be glad to flee to the valleys in the mountains, because the judgments of God will soon sweep over the nations with the besom of destruction. I know—for God has said it—that famine and pestilence are coming upon the earth, and we go to proclaim it to the people of God that they may gather together and be saved.

The speaker expressed the hope that when he got back from his mission to Europe there would not be left in this city a single person who bears the name of Mormon. I know they say they are going to break up the church of the Latter-Day Saints, but they are not going to do it. Every time they strike it it will roll over and double every time. If they want to make it that great church which it's bound to be, just let them kick it and thump it.

The speaker denied that there would be any collision with the United States Government. The only possible chance for a rupture with the Government would occur if the President should send out there a hot-blooded fool to oppress the people. When he left Salt Lake he had never heard that the Mormons had rebelled;—but when he got down to the States he learned that BRIGHAM was in open rebellion, and had a band of Danites who were murdering people by scores. This he declared false as hell and the spirit from which it emanated. He referred to Judge ——, "such men as bring prostitutes to sit on the bench with them, and when they won't be permitted to do so any longer, come back and preach that the only thing to be done with the Mormons is to sweep them off the face of the earth." That couldn't be done, no how."

Elder GREEN was introduced, but said a very few words only.

Brother BEARNED was the only speaker whose American nativity seemed at all certain. He declared that the recent accounts of Mormon outrage emanated from the bowels of hell, from fiends in human shape, such men as Judge DRUMMOND and his associates, who make up lies out of whole cloth and without a shadow of truth, which they roll as a sweet morsel under their tongues, choosing to believe a lie and be damned. He also eulogized the head-cart plan of emigration, urged the Saints to start at once for "Zion," and asseverated stoutly his knowledge that JOSIAH SMITH is the Prophet of God and BRIGHAM YOUNG his lawful successor.

Elder ——, whose name we could not catch, was rather a young man, "an Englishman by trade," he says, who has been seven years in Utah. He said: "I esteem it a privilege to be here among the people of God. I am a Mormon Elder, without horns or hoofs—although many people have such an idea of us that they think they must see a horn sticking out of us somewhere." After a few additional remarks, expressive of his faith in Jo SMITH, BRIGHAM YOUNG, and the Book of Mormon, the Elder closed with a hand-cart song, which he said he composed just before he left Salt Lake City, to sing on the Plains. It was set to the tune of "Oh, Susannah," to which he sang it, the audience catching and joining in the chorus. We could not bear the words of the song distinctly enough to take them down, but their general drift may be inferred probably from the following elegant couplet, which we did succeed in hearing:

"We'll thank the day when we was called,
Our hand-carts with to go."

The chorus, several times repeated, is as follows:

"Then cheer up ye Elders,
We to the world will show,
That Israel must be gathered soon,
And oxen are too slow."

Brother BRIGHAM H. YOUNG, who followed the song, said but little. His appearance is far from prepossessing, carrying conviction to our minds that he spoke the truth when he declared that he had done his share of the "rough work in the mountains."

Brother TOMPKINS was the closing speaker, and denounced the stories of Mormon outrage thus:

"I say it's a lie. The people in the valleys of the mountains are the purest and (h)oliest in the world—and that is the Gospel of the Lord which I have to proclaim to the world. God lives and we are His people. BRIGHAM YOUNG is the best man on the face of the earth—the best father to his children, the best leader of his people. I say in the name of the Lord that our people are the best people on earth. There is more virtue and purity in the house of BRIGHAM YOUNG than in all the earth beside."

This speaker also denounced Judge ——, accusing him of drunkenness, and of taking a prostitute from Baltimore into the Territory with him.

The exercises were closed with a benediction.

Personal.

Miss ANNIE M. ANDREWS, the young lady whose voluntary services to the sick during the prevalence of the Norfolk pestilence have made her name famous, is preparing for the press a volume descriptive of the "Heroes of the Pestilence," which will be published by the HARPERS early in the Fall. Miss ANDREWS has been sojourning at the New-York Hotel since March, busily engaged in preparing the materials for her work, and has received many attentions from those who honor her benevolent labors. She leaves town to-day, intending to spend the Summer with friends in Massachusetts. The proceeds of the sale of her book are to be set apart for the benefit of worthy parties left destitute by the results of the dreadful epidemic of '55.

Miss ANN B. HERRON, who fell a victim to the epidemic of 1855, in Norfolk, bequeathed to her near relative, JAMES H. BEHAN, of that city, a splendid mansion. Having heard Miss HERRON express the intention or desire to appropriate this valuable property to the purpose of founding an infirmary, Mr BEHAN, though under no legal obligation to do so, has relinquished his claim to it, and given it up to be converted into an infirmary, as contemplated by his kinswoman. The property is estimated to be worth from $25,000 to $30,000.

Geo. CASS arrived in Washington, on Saturday, in excellent health.

THE WARREN STATUE.—The statue of General WARREN was this morning removed from the Pavilion, and raised to its permanent position on the pedestal in the estana room. The artist himself superintended the transfer, and is touching up the marble previous to its being thrown open to the inspection of the public. The rush to see it has, however, already commenced.—Boston Journal, Friday.

THE STREET COMMISSIONER'S CASE.

Argument of Mr Brady.

MR. FIELD TO REPLY.

NO DECISION.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—June 27.

Before Hon. Justice Peabody.

In the matter of the Application of Daniel D. Conover, to compel the delivery of the books, papers, &c., of the Street Commissioner's Office.—This case was continued yesterday. The doors leading into the Court of Sessions were thrown open, and the spectatore thronged all available positions. At the opening of the Court Mr. D. D. Field stated that his father was unable to be present that day. Mr. Field on Friday was thrown from his carriage, and had his foot painfully though not seriously injured. His surgeon, however, recommended that he should remain quiet for a few days.

Mr. Brady read a letter from Mr. Field stating this fact, and suggesting that if he might conclude to go on with his argument, he should leave notes of his points taken, and he (Mr. Field) would reply Monday, either personally, or by presenting his argument in writing. Mr. Brady was obliged to leave town on Monday, and therefore concluded to proceed as suggested by Mr. Field.

Mr. Busteed remarked that if Mr. Field's argument was to be submitted in writing, they should like to have a copy served upon them, in order to reply to any new matter which might be raised.

To this Mr. Field, Jr., assented.

Mr. Brady then arose and delivered a very able and finished address of over three hours in length. He commenced by remarking upon the importance of these proceedings, and that of the office of Street Commissioner. The office was strictly a City office. It belonged to the City, and the people of the State at large had nothing whatever to do with it. The office had been held under various charters and legislative acts, and this was the first time in the history of the State that such summary proceedings had ever been resorted to, in order to obtain possession of the books and papers of a corporation. It would be one of his points, that these proceedings were never intended to apply to any such case. The books and papers of a corporation were its private property, whether they related to the Street Department or otherwise, and if his Honor should order them to be delivered to Mr. Conover, he knew of no law which would prevent the City from bringing a suit in the nature of a replevin, and repossessing themselves of them.

They belonged neither to Develin nor to Conover, but to the City; and there was only a right to use them by the Street Commissioner. To obtain them, as this was a Corporation office, the Corporation must be a party. The statute could not be appealed to to settle any controversy, as for the recovery of the books of an Insurance Company, nor could it apply in this case.

CONCLUSIONS OF FACTS.

His conclusions of facts in the case were:

First—That when Mr. Taylor died, Mr. Turner, Deputy Street Commissioner, entered upon the performance of the duties of Street Commissioner until the appointment of Mr. Develin.

Second—Mr. Develin was appointed by the Mayor, with the consent of the Board of Aldermen, on the 16th of June, 1857, and on that day duly subscribed and filed his oath of office, and filed his official bond with sureties in due form, and approved by the Mayor.

Third—That he then immediately took possession of the offices usually occupied by the Street Commissioner, and of all the books, records, maps, documents, papers and furniture connected with the office of Street Commissioner, and has kept exclusive possession of them ever since; the furniture being, however, subject to certain levies made by the Sheriff under execution against the City.

Fourth—That Develin's title, possession and office as Street Commissioner had been recognized by the corporation, and all its officers, including its Comptroller.

Fifth—That Mr. Conover has not filed an efficient bond, approved as required by law.

Sixth—That he never had possession of the Street Commissioner's rooms, nor of any of them, nor of the furniture, books, maps, records, documents or papers thereof, or connected with the office, nor any of them.

Seventh—That he has not been recognized as Street Commissioner by any of the Corporation officers, nor by the Corporation; but his claim under the Governor's appointment has been expressly and unqualifiedly repudiated and denied by such officers and Corporation.

Eighth—That Conover claiming under the Governor, and Develin under the Corporate appointment, there is a disputed question of title to the office of Street Commissioner.

Ninth—The expulsions of Conover from the Street Commissioner's apartments took place before the appointment of Develin, and were made under the orders of Mr. Turner, the Deputy Street Commissioner, to quit possession of such apartments, and enable him to perform the duties of the office.

Tenth—Develin took peaceable and unquestioned possession of books, &c. This possession was recognized by Mr. Conover, who applied to him to surrender the office to him (Conover.)

Eleventh—Develin's refusal to surrender was made peacefully, under a claim of title to the office set up in good faith.

Twelfth—The ordinance of the Corporation giving to the Mayor the power to fill a vacancy in the office of Street Commissioner, with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen, was in force when the Charter of 1857 took effect, and has not since been repealed or altered.

This was a contest involving the claim of the Governor of the State to obtain the control over the property of the Corporation; and if the Corporation, or any of its officers, could be deprived of its property without a trial by Jury, then the laws of the State were as merely a rope of sand, as it was, by some parties, alleged to be. The Corporation of New-York, through its officers, protested, here, that its property could not be taken from them without such a trial by Jury. He should think that it would strike his learned opponent, that it was treating the Corporation of New-York with great contempt, thus to try to deprive it of its own, without allowing it to speak in its own behalf. The City should be treated with the noble munificence which it deserved. So grave a question as a conflict of power between the Governor and this great Corporation, should not be decided upon this summary proceeding.

Mr. Brady then proceeded to give a short history of the proceedings by mandamus from the year 1809. He thought that Mr. Conover's only remedy, was by the usual form; by compelling the Mayor, by a mandamus, to approve his bond, if he was legally bound so to do. But he claimed that the Mayor was not bound to approve the bond, and even if he were, why could not Mr. Conover give him a proper length of time to perform that duty, among the thousand others which devolved upon him? The Mayor was not subject to the beest of a mere office-holder, however great a political luminary he might be expected to be. He quoted several cases to show that the intention of the law was that questions of title were to be settled by quo warranto, and that this proceeding was a mere evasion of the statute, and an endeavor, by a collateral question, to decide summarily a question of title. In Snediker's case, the late Judge Rockwell had decided that such a proceeding as this could not be considered except in cases where the question of title was clearly undisputed. The Street-Commissioner's office was an office of great political power and patronage, and his Honor was expected by some to decide this questioo on political grounds. There was a political reason why this proceeding should not be allowed, because the Attorney-General was known to be of the same party as the claimant, and could not be compelled to issue a quo warranto if he did not desire to do so. He had not intended to be connected with any of those cases growing out of the recent difficulties, but was there only in the capacity of a friend to the respondent, who, in his early professional career, when the small-est compensation was desirable, had befriended him, and he was there now as his friend. [Slight applause.] He referred to the insinuation that he was not willing to submit to laws which had not been declared constitutional. On that subject he would say that he would never, nor had he ever counseled resistance to law—the Metropolitan Police act included—until it had been expressly declared unconstitutional. He had desired not to become implicated in these discussions, and still hoped and determined, to make one dying struggle to redeem the character of his native city. [Great applause.]

Mr. Brady then referred to the unconstitutionality of the appointment by the Governor, and controverted the positions assumed by Mr. Field on this subject.

When the constitution of 1846 was adopted, the Street Commissioner was in being, the office having been created indirectly by the charter of 1830. The creation of the office by the corporation, by an ordinance, was under the general enabling clause of the charter, equivalent to a creation by the legislature. Under the clause of the constitution (Art. 10, sec. 2) referred to, the legislature could only select as between delegating to the electors of the city, or to the city authorities, the power of appointment.

His opponents had amused him by their argument that Conover was not appointed Street Commissioner, but merely to perform the duties of Street Commissioner. There was nothing in this distinction, and, moreover, the Commissioner expressly stated that Mr. Conover was appointed "to be Street Commissioner in place of Mr. Taylor deceased."

The effect of the argument of the other side was, that while the Legislature or Governor could not fill the office of Street Commissioner permanently, they could do it in case of vacancy; so that if an elected officer had served but one hour, the State could fill the office for the remainder of the term! Surely this was never intended by the constitution. It had been argued that the Governor could appoint Justices of the Supreme and Superior Courts, which were City officers. But they were not City officers. Their processes would extend throughout the State, and affected the State, and they were expressly termed State officers. But even if the Governor, by the act of 1849, had the power to make the appointment in case of a vacancy, he contended that there was no vacancy for him to fill, because there had been a Deputy Street Commissioner provided for, who, it was specially enacted, should fulfil the duties of the office until there could be another appointment, and until the person appointed should be duly qualified. It was also provided that so long as the duties of an office were performed there was no necessity for an appointment by the Governor. As the Deputy Commissioner was appointed to act in case of a vacancy until another appointment, there was no necessity for an appointment, even if the Governor ever had any power. It was claimed that the act of 1849 empowered the Governor to make this appointment. But for the Legislature to confer such a power would be unconstitutional. Would any one pretend that if the Legislature should pass a law that "every officer connected with the City Government shall hereafter be appointed by the Governor, by and with the consent of the Senate," that such a law could be constitutional? Certainly not. You cannot assume that the Legislature intended an absurd consequence. The absurd consequence of applying the act of 1849 to this office has been shown. If the Street Commissioner should die the day before election, the appointee of the Governor would only hold from a date in December until a date in January, and they had already shown that the Governor would go on appointing from time to time interminably. This point had already been fully argued. Another absurd consequence would be that by these limitations of the appointing power to the first day of January next succeeding an election at which he might be chosen by the people—when no time could arrive when he could be chosen by the people—the office would be perpetual until the law was changed. The office would then be a State office. If every officer within the State was a State officer, then the Clerk of the Common Council was a State officer, so was the Clerk of the market, and, indeed, every street sweeper would be a State officer. The act of Feb. 3, 1857, was applicable to State officers alone, and the act of the 17th of February indicated that it was passed to supply a deficiency in the act of the 3d of that month in relation to State officers.

The executive authority of the Corporation remained intact, as high as the Constitution itself, and had not been repealed by any charters, but had, on the contrary, been confirmed by all charters down to the one of 1851, by which it was expressly reserved. It was contended that the Charter of 1857 did not give the Mayor any power to fill this vacancy, and they must acknowledge that the Charter of 1851 is silent upon the subject of the vacancy, before they can claim any operation for the act of 1849. But he claimed that the Charter of 1857 was not silent on the subject, because the 16th section provided that the executive power of the Corporation be vested in the Mayor and executive departments. Again, by section 32 of the Charter of 1857, all ordinances not inconsistent with that act are continued in force, and if it be true that there be no section in the Charter of 1857 providing for filling vacancies, any ordinance providing for filling vacancies would not be inconsistent with this act, and would, therefore, be as much in force, as if it had been specially reënacted. It was no longer the law of the City, but became the law of the State. Mr. Brady then read from the ordinance of 1849 the authority vesting the power in the Mayor and heads of the several departments. His opponents, he continued, had argued that this ordinance should be so read as not to relate to the power of appointment but this reading, he contended, was not correct. If the assertion was true that the charter of 1857 did not affect the present Mayor and Common Council, and the repealing clause of the charter took effect immediately, the consequence would be that between the 1st of May, 1857, and the 1st of January, 1858, there would be no charters affecting the Mayor and Common Council. The same Legislature had regarded the Mayor and Aldermen as fit to appoint at the expiration of Mr. Taylor's term of office. Why, then, were they not competent to appoint for the unexpired term of his office? The act of 1857 provides that the incumbents of the offices of Corporation Counsel, Comptroller, and Street Commissioner should continue in office to the expiration of their terms of office. This was an extraordinary piece of legislation. In one respect it was void. If these were new offices, the Legislature had no right to appoint. The provision for the appointment by the Mayor and Aldermen must therefore be read as if it were that they should make an appointment whenever one was to be made. The Legislature never intended to allow this appointment to vacillitate between the Mayor and the Governor in this dancing-jack way, like a pendulum, or rather, like two pendulums. There was a provision in the law for the removal of the Street Commissioner for cause, and surely the Governor was not to appoint in such a case.

Mr. Brady proceeded to review the opinion of Mr. Hill as to the right of the Governor to appoint Mr. Conover. He thought that if Mr. Hill had examined the Statute of 1849, and the ordinance, he would have come to a different conclusion. He could not see why Mr. Hill and his opponents should withhold from the Mayor and Aldermen, the power to appoint until the expiration of the terms of office of the Comptroller, Corporation Council and Street Commissioner. The Charter evidently intended to confer the power of appointment upon them, at the removal by any cause of those officers. But Mr. Conover had never filed his official bond approved by the Mayor; and as between him and the City, he had no right to take possession of the City property. But, say the other side, "Mr. Develin can't take advantage of that." But he would contend that even an intruder could show that the claimant had no right to the office. Mr. Develin had been recognized by every officer of the Corporation but the Comptroller, certainly, and the Comptroller was a general non recognizor. [Laughter.] He had said that "in these days he did not know as he recognized anybody." Mr. Conover could not be clothed by the Court with any power to take possession of the City property. The testimony as to the ejection of Mr. Conover he deemed to be irrelevant, because it all occurred before Mr. Develin took possession. He was opposed by the Deputy Superintendent, Mr. Turner; and the Mayor, very properly, had supported Mr. Turner in defending the possession of the City property. He was no counsel, advocate, or panegyrist of the Mayor, but he would say that in that respect he did perfectly right. Mr. Conover had pretended to take possession, by sitting in the office and granting a permit to remove a bushel of sand or to leave it alone, but he never had possession. Mr. Develin had, however, taken peaceable possession, and it was proven and uncontradicted that Mr. Conover had asked him for possession, and when Develin denied his title, he said that was all that he wanted in order to get the matter before the courts. Mr. Develin was not responsible for any of the disturbances in the office. Mr. Conover knew that the office was not to be peaceably delivered to him, and if he had had peaceable recourse to the courts, he might have saved the court this protracted investigation. He was not the counsel of the City, but of Mr. Develin, and appeared as between him and Mr. Conover. He had endeavored to show that Mr. Develin was legally appointed and in possession, and that he had been recognized as such by Mr. Conover. The proper way, therefore, for Mr. Conover, was to appeal to a quo warranto, which would readily be facilitated by the Attorney-General on the part of Mr. Conover, and not on the part of Mr. Develin.

I ask your Honor, he continued, in all sincerity and frankness—I ask any gentleman of intelligence and of character, whether on the bench or off the bench—whether any one, not inflated with the self-sufficiency of counsel, or any one not full of the noble zeal of counsel, will undertake to say that there is not a reasonable doubt here in reference to where the power to make this appointment resided; and then, if there be that reasonable doubt, whether it was not more fitting that the Governor should take care of the interests of the State, and if he wanted to confer position on his respectable friend, Mr. Conover, that he should give him some of the patronage which belonged to him, and to leave the power and patronage and honor and emoluments of the civil offices in this Corporation of ours—leave them where they belong—to the City of New-York and its people.

Mr. Brady then took his seat amid murmurs of satisfaction from the audience, and the Court was adjourned until 11 o'clock this morning.

A House Blown up in Cincinnati.

From the Times, June 26.

About 8 o'clock last evening a terrible catastrophe took place at No. 308 Main-street. An explosion occurred in a room in a three-story brick building, occupied by Mr. JAMES PEYOS, a scenic artist and manufacturer of properties, and in an instant the whole interior of the house was laid in ruins. The partition walls were blown to pieces, the floors shattered to atoms, and the rear wall of the building thrown to the ground. The fire-bells immediately sounded an alarm, and soon an immense crowd of persons was upon the ground. As soon as possible the ruins were searched for those known to be under them. Mr. PEYOS was taken out in a dreadful condition, his body being burned and mangled. He was carried to the drug store of D. BARKALOW, where everything possible was done for his relief, and was afterwards conveyed to the Hospital. JAMES RIORDANE was also taken out, but found not to be seriously injured.

Though a number of persons were in the house at the time, these were the only two caught in the ruins or injured by the explosion. The damage to property is very large. The house owned by Mr. HERRONBRUN is damaged to the amount of several thousand dollars. P. VOLKEN, frame manufactory, has lost about $1,000, and a number of other tenants a small amount. PEYOS always had a penchant for pyrotechnics, and though unfortunate in his experiments, perserved until he met with this disaster. He was thought, last night, to be beyond recovery, but he is still alive this morning, and it is hoped he will survive the injuries.

The catastrophe was generally supposed to have been caused by the explosion to have been caused by the explosion of gunpowder, but investigations since may lead to a different opinion. Mr. PEYOS had been positively forbidden to manufacture fireworks of any description on the premises, and it is not known that he attempted to violate this instruction.

Yesterday he purchased a quantity of chloride of potassa, phosphorus, and Venice turpentine, with which he made some experiments. Those acquainted with these substances are of opinion, that the damage was caused by the explosion of the former. Powder explodes upward, and potassa downward, and it is evident that the floor of PEYOS's room received the greatest shock, being forced to the story below. He states himself that he had a quantity of rocket composition in his room, but those acquainted with its ingredients declare it would not have made the wreck this explosion has.

About 3 o'clock this morning an inner wall of the building fell with a great crash, causing another alarm in the neighborhood.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN PETERSBURG, VA.—The Intelligencer of Saturday says, about 2 o'clock yesterday morning, the large new brick building in Blanford, known as the "Old Dominion" Mills, was discovered to be on fire, and before the engines could render any assistance was, with its entire contents, consumed. The house was insured for $20,000. The value of the property exceeded the amount of insurance, by, at least, $15,000, many expensive improvements having been made in the last year, which were uncovered. There were also nearly 400 barrels flour in the mill, besides several hundred bushels of wheat,

From the New Orleans Bulletin.

This gentleman, whose heroic and persevering efforts to rescue his children from the loathsome embraces of Mormonism have made his name familiar to the public, yesterday paid us a visit. He showed us a number of letters written to his wife by P. P. PRATT, in the characters which the Mormons have invented in order to carry on correspondence and conceal their meaning, should their letters ever happen to fall into the hands of "Gentiles." The letters thus written are as perfectly incomprehensible to us as they would be if written in Coloese. Strange as it may appear, Mr. MCLEAN translated these letters correctly, in circumstances quite quarrily showed, without any previous knowledge of the characters used.

The only key he had was furnished in the first letter, wherein the writer informed his victim that certain alterations had been made in this Mormon alphabet, and explained what they were, so that she might understand them. The alterations were only two, and from this slight clue to the meaning of these hieroglyphics, Mr. M'LEAN succeeded, after giving up in despair several times, in deciphering the whole, thus enabling him to thwart the efforts of the imposter to rob him of his children. It was extraordinary, and shows itself veritably that necessity is the mother of invention. Mr. M'LEAN narrated to us a number of circumstances which almost seemed to indicate the direct interposition of Providence in his behalf in causing him to secure his children.

We advise Mormon spies here, as elsewhere, to give Mr. M'LEAN as wide a berth as possible. His company to them will prove extremely disagreeable to say the least.

If Mr. BUCHANAN would confer upon him the Governorship of Utah, and he would accept it, we are inclined to think that the old Brigand would have a sudden weakness in his knees.

THE "SCHNAPPS" CASE.—A final hearing in the case of JOHN W. HARWOOD and JOHN W. KYLE, who are charged with making and vending a spurious article in imitation of WOLFE'S Aromatic Schnapps, took place yesterday morning before Alderman OGLE.

The only witnesses examined this morning were Mr. JOHN B. DYOTT, druggist, and Mr. HUGH DUFFY, glass manufacturer. The first named testified to buying spurious "Schnapps" from HARWOOD, upon the representation of the latter that it was the genuine article, and Mr. DUFFY identified an iron mould as one furnished him by HARWOOD for the purpose of making "Schnupps" bottles. The mould bore the inscription "UDOLPHO WOLFE'S Schiedam Aromatic Schnepps."

Colonel R. M. LEE, who appeared for the defence, urged that an inflated notion had been formed of the importance of the case, and he thought the amount of bail demanded, ($2,000) to hold the defendants for a final hearing, was farcical. The article was called "Sky dam," and he had no doubt it was damned by everything in the sky.

Mr. WEBSTER, for the prosecution, thought it was a little premature to attempt to throw ridicule upon the case at this stage of the proceedings. It might, perhaps, answer their purpose thus to belittle a serious offence when it came before a jury, but here it would not answer. The Legislature designed protecting the public as well as the manufacturer, by its enactments against counterfeiting labels, &c. The proprietor of the Schiedam Schoappe had never offered the article as a patent medicine. He had only claimed that it was pure Hollsnd gin, and as such Mr. WEBSTER argued that it was a very good medicine, and "not hard to take." He contended that the offence charged was forgery of a most aggravated kind, and one that not only damaged his client and the public, but also everybody who might innocently have been concerned in the transaction. He thought it just as proper to attempt to hoot out of court a prosecution for counterfeiting bank notes, as to throw ridicule upon this case. The Act of 1855 punishes such offences with fine and imprisonment, and he hoped the bail would not be reduced.

To this argument Col. LEE replied that the act of Assembly was intended to apply to respectable manufacturers, and not to rumsellers and their nostrums. In France they buy our Pennsylvania whisky, and, after mixing it up with drugs, they sell it here and call it brandy. Now, suppose any person was to call this stuff "WOLFE'S brandy," and put it up in bottles, would he have the right to prosecute any one who would sell something else and call it "WOLFE'S brandy" or "Sky-dam Schnapps," or "Low-dam Schnappe!" Col. LEE thought the law which was designed to protect the fabric on cloths and muslins, should not be stretched to protect a gin-seller. There was certainly a provision in the act of the Legislature which would cover this case, but, at the worst, the redress would only be damages. It was a civil suit run mad."

EXTENSIVE FORGERIES.—DAN W. KING, of Suffield, Conn., a cigar maker, has been detected in a complicated series of forgeries, amounting to $15,000 to $20,000. Besides forging the names of various persons as makers of notes, he forged indorsements of LUCIUS HATHAWAY, Sheriff S. B. KENDALL, and most largely of DAN KING (his father) and D. W. NORTON. Mr. KING was arrested, and the matter is being investigated. He has hitherto sustained an excellent reputation.

LONG ISLAND.

SUPPOSED FOUL PLAY—A MISSING MAN FOUND IN A CANAL.—Late on Saturday night last, a man named WHALEN called at the house of JOHN DILLON, in the Tenth Ward, Brooklyn, and invited him out to drink. Yesterday morning DILLON had not returned, and a search was instituted, when his body was found in the canal at the foot of Prospect-street. Several persons say that they heard WHALEN challenge DILLON to wrestle while together Saturday night, and yesterday he was arrested upon suspicion of having thrown DILLON into the canal. His pants were torn on the knees, and there were other indications that he had been fighting, and he was committed to the cells of the Third Precinct to await investigation by the Coroner, which will probably take place to-day.

HIGHWAYMAN CAPTURED.—Late on Friday night last Mr. CHARLES ROOSEVELT was knocked down, on Hamilton-avenue, near the Ferry, Brooklyn, by two men, who, after rendering the victim senseless, attempted to rob him. In this they were frustrated by Officers DOWDLE, HANLAN, and TROMY, of the Third Precinct, who, hearing the disturbance, started in pursuit of the robbers, and finally captured them. One gave his name as JOHN CARTLER, and the other as WM. CUNNINGHAM—both old offenders. Saturday morning they were taken before Justice BLACHLEY for examination, and while there they were identified by a man whom they had robbed a few nights ago on the same avenue. They were committed.

SUNDAY AMUSEMENT.—A gang of rowdies in the Second Police Precinct, Brooklyn, last evening attacked several policemen, and officer MONAHAN was much injured. The police rallied, and finally succeeded, after a hard fight, in arresting the leaders of the gang, and the officers are in pursuit of others. The fight commenced on Main-street, near where the fire was yesterday afternoon, and was kept up for a considerable length of time. A large number of sympathizers on both sides assembled, and for a time it was doubtful which side would come off victorious,—but a fresh arrival of police decided the day in their favor. Main-street presented a scene not unlike that during the Sunday riots a few years ago.

Fishy Streets—A Contrast of Officials.

Yesterday morning the dwellers upon that portion of Dean-street which lies between Smith and Hoyt streets, were early awakened and alarmed by outcries from without, occasioned, it was found, by a free and all-ready-to-be-accepted invitation spread through their street to pestilential disease to come among them. That invitation was in the form of fish, of nameless varieties, which, during the night preceding, had been dumped, in almost continuous heaps, throughout the distance named, doubtless by some market or street fish seller, by way of disposing of a large surplus stock, and into which the clear hot sun was fast infusing putridity, and from which the most offensive and noisome exhalations were arising. The appearance of yellow fever upon no coast ever created more excitement and alarm than rapidly spread through the tainted neighborhood. And, truly, if the danger were equal to the offensiveness of the invitation to pestilence so extended, there was great cause for alarm.

Two citizens, in order to allay the excitement of the people, by having the nuisance abated, promptly sought a Star policeman, and pointed him to the matter of complaint. The Star as promptly turned coldly away, with the remark that he had no concern therewith, that the Health Warden of the Ward was the proper official to whom in such an emergency application should be made.

To that democratic curator of the health of citizens recourse was accordingly had—it need hardly be said anxiously and hopefully. But lo! the disappointment, when, after bearing the complaint, Mr. CHAS. LOTT also turned coldly from the citizens who waited upon him, with the remark that it was none of his business to mind such matters, that he hadn't money enough to live on, and shouldn't, therefore, expend anything in such a case, and that he wouldn't look to it, or look at it.

The President of the Board of Health, the Mayor of the City, who is also a member of the Metropolitan Police Board, but too Woodish in his democracy to serve thereon—Mr. T. T. POWELL—was next applied to. He was informed that a matter of offence, endangering the health of a neighborhood, which was described, required his immediate attention as the executive of the City and responsible curator of the health of its citizens. But, oh! it should hardly be told in Gath; it ought hardly to be published anywhere—he, too, as his subordinates and supporters had done previously, turned away! He replied to the complainants, to his suitors on behalf of the quiet and health of a large number of citizens, that there was nothing which he could do, and dismissed them, with a recommendation to seek somebody else, whose name he probably knew. Indignant that an official of that grade, under pay to regard the interests of the City, and specially to regard, at this season of the year the all-conquering matter of public health, should manifest such criminal indifference to the responsibilities of his position should so evade the performance of a clear duty and seek to impose on others, to be done gratuitously, that which he is receiving $3,000 a year to attend to, the citizens who waited upon him, as they left, replied that their full duty in the premises had been discharged; that he, the proper and responsible party, had the grave matter now before him, and that the demands of duty in respect to it were now upon him, and there they should be left; that he was paid, and therefore expected to meet them. Upon reflection, the two citizens hereinbefore alluded to concluded not to stop thus, but to test our undemocratic city official, and invoke the exercise of his authority in the case, although it was not within his immediate range. To this end, they called upon Captain B. B. MCCLANE, of the Third District Police, (not a star,) whom his Honor, Mayor POWELL, not long back, sought to ignore, and upon whom he caused the keys in the station-house to be turned—the Captain having chosen to be law-abiding, and therefore to stand by the Metropolitan Board and under its authority, rather than he, with Mayor POWELL, a resistant. A contrast in officials was quickly observable. The complainants were attentively listened to; the evil they complained of was earnestly deprecated; and, though not within his official power, the Captain said he would at once, even if at his own cost, remove the cause of complaint and alarm. And true to his impulse, his conviction and his word, and true to the interests of citizens and the city, whereof he is an official, within one hour men were at work under his order, and the noisome pestilence-engendering deposits in course of removal, and the alarmed, aggrieved and excited neighborhood restored to quiet. Grateful emotions towards the Captain very speedily took the place of the fears which had been entertained; hearty plaudits were upon many tongues for his manly decision, and prompt and effective extra-official action; and there remains with all a cordial admiration of the beneficial contrast his course furnished an opportunity to witness. It was a beautiful exhibition of true patriotism as opposed to democratic official self-seeking and indifference. It proved one official, at least, in the Tenth Ward to be true to self, and to his position; and that the officer who abides by law is he who best abides by the interest of citizens and the city.

FIRES IN BROOKLYN—SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—At 3½ o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire broke out in a feed store on Front-street, near Main, owned and occupied by BARNEY MCFEELY. The fire spread to two frame stores adjoining and fronting on Main-street, one owned and occupied by Mr. MCFEELY and the other occupied by JAMES MCCLUSKEY as a clothing store, and owned by PATRICK MCCLUSKEY, both of which were entirely consumed. Mr. MCFEELY also had a horse burnt in a small stable at the rear of the place where the fire broke out. The buildings were very old and almost worthless, and have been complained of frequently as a nuisance. The whole loss will not exceed $1,000, which amount is covered by insurance. While proceeding to this fire WM. MCCORMICK, who was running with Engine Company No. 19, fell on Fulton-street, near Clinton, and the engine passing over him, his left ankle was crushed to such a manner as to render amputation necessary. He was taken temporarily into DAVIES' drug store, at the corner of Clinton street, and was subsequently removed to the City Hospital by officer CORWIN, of the First Precinct. MCCORMICK works for Mr. NODINE, Livery Stable keeper on Pierrepont street, and was never known to run with an engine before.

A fire broke out at 6 o'clock on Saturday morning last, in the jenny room attached to LAWRENCE & SON'S rope walk, on Bushwick-avenue, near McKibbin-street, and property was damaged to the extent of $3,660. Covered by insurance.

A RECENT DEATH IN THE NEW-YORK HOSPITAL.—Two weeks ago last Saturday a man named GEORGE SULLIVAN was taken to the New-York Hospital, suffering under injuries said to have been received accidentally in the Navy Yard. A few days ago he died, and a coroner's jury rendered a verdict that his death was the result of an accident. This, it is said, is all a mistake; the deceased was beaten by two men just outside the Navy Yard gate, and from the effect of this beating he died. The Coroner, by applying to the 2d Precinct Station-House, Brooklyn, can obtain further particulars. SULL

METROPOLITAN BANK, New-York, May 18, 1857.
AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DIrectors of the METROPOLITAN BANK, held on the 8th inst., it was resolved to increase the Capital Stock, $1,000,000; say, from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000.
Subscription books will be opened at the Banking House, No. 108 Broadway, on the 1st day of July next, and remain open until the 10th of said month. Those holding stock at the close of business on the 25th of June next, will be entitled to subscribe at par, for said million of additional capital, and will receive one share of new stock for every three shares of old. They will also have the right to assign the privilege of subscribing, for which purpose a form will be furnished.
Shareholders will have the right to pay in full on the 1st day of July next; to such as do, there will be no charge of interest. Those who do not pay at that time, are required to pay 50 per cent. on or before the 15th of said July, and the remaining 50 per cent. on or before the 15th day of October next.
Interest at 7 per cent. per annum from the 1st day of July, will be added to all instalments paid after that day, in order to make all the payments equal to a full payment on the said 1st day of July.
For partial payments, scrip receipts will be issued; but whenever a shareholder shall pay the full amount due on his subscription, he shall be entitled, at once, to the usual certificate of full paid stock. All shareholders will have the benefit of the dividend which may be paid in January, 1858.
Shareholders at a distance, wishing to take the stock they will be entitled to, may make their subscriptions to the new stock by sending to this Bank, duly signed and witnessed, a power of attorney.
It is very desirable that such shareholders as intend to avail themselves of the opportunity to subscribe, or who wish to assign their rights to do so to some other parties, shall give notice of their intentions as early as the 1st of July, if practicable, but cer ainly by the 10th.
It will be necessary for parties to whom such rights shall be assigned, to appear at the Bank, in person, or by attorney, to sign the articles of the Association.

OFFICE OF THE HOUSATONIC RAILROAD CO.,
BRIDGEPORT, June 26, 1857.
NOTICE TO HOLDERS.—THE COUpons due on the 1st prox. on the Bonds of this Company will be paid on presentation at the office of KETCHUM, HOWE & CO., in the City of New York, or at the Treasurer's office, in the city of Bridgeport.
At the annual meeting of the Stockholders in February last it was resolved to pay off in cash $50,000 of the outstanding Bonds falling due Jan. 1, 1858, from the net income of the Road in 1857, and to create a new issue for the balance, bearing date Jan. 1, 1857, of $250,000, which should retain the same perfect security which had been given for the original Bonds of $300,000, of which new issue it was decided to make $200,000 payable Jan. 1, 1858, and $50,000 annually thereafter till Jan 1. 1862, and thus extinguish the whole mortgage debt within the period prescribed. In pursuance of this resolution the new Bonds have been prepared and already negotiated to the extent of $150,000, chiefly in exchange for the old Bonds, which have been cancelled and charged off, leaving $91,000 yet to be exchanged or otherwise disposed of. Holders of the remainder of the old Bonds are invited to examine the new issue, and to exchange for them their old Bonds, should they feel disposed, and on such terms that the investment will pay them 8 per cent. per annum.
The new Bonds being payable at sundry dates, it will be seen that those who contemplate exchanging will have a better choice now as to the time during which they may wish to continue the investment than by deferring it to a later period.
Exchanges can be made with Messrs. KETCHUM, HOWE & CO., of New-York, or with the undersigned at Bridgeport. H. NICHOLS, Treasurer.

Accompanying each Bond will be a Scrip Certificate, entitling the purchaser or his assigns, at his or their option, to ten shares, of $100 each, of Privilege Land Grant Stock, on electing, at any time within two years from June 1, 1857, to subscribe and pay tan per cent. of the par value thereof, tha same never to be subject to any further assessments, but to be credited with proceeds of sales of lands until full paid, to share dividends and be entitled to vote pro rata, as provided by said Company, and set forth in said Stock Privilege Certificate, and in their Circular to Stockholders of May 25, 1857.
The subscription price for said Bonds to be 80 per cent. their par value and accrued interest, payable 10 per cent. in hand, 10 per cent. on 1st July next, and 20 per cent. on each of the first days of August, September and October next, or as much sooner as parties may elect, at the office of the Company in New-York.

MONDAY, June 29—A. M.

The California steamer Illinois, with its mail and treasure, of June 5, from the Pacific side, arrived here at a late hour on Saturday evening. She has, by manifest, $1,852,868 in gold for New York, and the steamer on the other side also brought down to Panama $415,325 for English account direct. The number of returned Californians by this arrival is large, 786, many of whom have probably brought small parcels of gold dust not on the manifest. Some considerable deposits, from this source have been made at the Assay Office for several steamers past. The Branch Mint at San Francisco was not in operation, and the present shipment is mostly in uncoined gold. The miners were doing well, but trade is not quoted generally active. As the mail reached the Post-Office on Sunday, we have not been able to know whether it brought any considerable amount of Government drafts.

The Foreign Trade at the port of New-York the past week was marked by less activity in the export of Specie than the preceding fortnight, and a moderate import and Export of Merchandise. The total of foreign entries, including the Dry Goods table in our last paper, is $2,501,177, against $3,527,969 the week ending June 28, last year. The clearances to foreign ports of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods were $940,076 against $1,226,230 the corresponding week last year. The Export of Gold and Silver for the week, including $632,000 by the Fulton for Havre and Southampton on Saturday, amounted to $2,019,405 against $2,493,755 the corresponding week last year. The net disbursement of Specie from the Sub-Treasury, over the receipts of the week, is 631,372—the balance on Saturday afternoon standing $10,841,217 against $11,472,589 at the close of the previous week. The apparent difference against the Bank Reserve, resulting from the foregoing movement, is $1,388,033, which would reduce the average of the previous week—$12,790,445—to $11,402,412. But, as the last average was unexpectedly favorable, and the Banks probably commenced business on Monday on an actual line considerably below this average, the statement this afternoon may possibly not show quite eleven millions, with $1,852,000, however, to be added this morning from California; so that the new week will open on a rising line. The money movements of the present week, on and after Wednesday next, 1st July, will undoubtedly be very large, including the payment into the Sub-Treasury on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, for Custom Duties under the new Tariff, of from $1,200,000 to $1,600,000—taking the outside figure of ten millions as the total of entries for consumption at an average of 16 ₰ cent. duty—and the disbursement therefrom during the week of from $1,200,000 to $1,600,000, say:

For Interest on the Public Debt	$675,000
Disbursement on Principal of the Debt	400,000
Quarterly Payment to Mail Steamers	225,000
Ordinary Disbursements	300,000
Together	$1,600,000

We understand that about $400,000 of the principal of the Public Debt has already gone forward to the Department for reimbursement, and it is also intimated that most if not all the Ocean mail service for the quarter will be paid out this week. In any event, we do not anticipate an accumulation in the Government Office of more than $400,000; nor do we, after the most diligent inquiry and comparison of views between the Sub-Treasurer, Mr. CISCO, and a number of our leading Bank officers, look for any serious embarassment to the Money Market through the month of July, growing out of the extra collection of duties on the Foreign Goods which have been awaiting the new tariff in the Public Stores. Saturday next being the Anniversary of Independence, will be kept as a close holiday; thus imposing the payments of the 3d, 4th and 5th on Friday. The various Dividend disbursements on Wednesday will be unusually heavy, and particularly so on State Stocks, for all of which provision has been promptly made. The export demand for Specie during the week will be mainly confined to the Boston steamer on Wednesday. The engagement of the importers in withdrawing their goods and paying duties, will diminish the trade demand for Foreign Bills; though for the succeeding packet of Wednesday week the business is likely to be large on account of the collection of dividends. The Money Market closed on Saturday about 1 ₰ cent. dearer on fair and sound choice paper, with the Discount Brokers, and an active offering at a number of the leading Banks, but otherwise there was no marked change. Very choice paper is still wanted at 8@9 ₰ cent. The Stock speculation is mostly for the decline, and the Brokers have little or no difficulty in carrying for their Bull customers the few Stocks that remain on the Street at present low prices. The Bears put out sellers' options at a depreciation of 2 @2¼ ₰ cent. from the cash terms. They sold Erie at 25, seller 30 days on Saturday, and paid 27½@¾ cash to make good the transfers of the day; Illinois Central at 123, seller 30 days, while 127 cash was bid, and so on through the list. The depreciation of the week, which was heavy and very general, from the closing rates of Saturday, June 20, to the final bids of Saturday last, was thus marked:

COURSE OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE—FOR THE WEEK.

New-York and Erie 3 ₰ cent. or from	30½@27½
New-York Central 4 ₰ cent. or	81¾@77½
Michigan Southern 3¾ ₰ cent. or	43¾@37½
Cleveland and Toledo 4 ₰ cent. or	57½@53¾
Reading 1¾ ₰ cent. or	71 @67¾
Illinois Central 1½ ₰ cent. or	152½@123
Illinois Central 5 ₰ cent. or	128 @123
Galena and Chicago 3½ ₰ cent. or	89@85½
La Crosse 16 ₰ cent. or	67@45 exd.
Chicago and Rock Island 5½ ₰ cent. or	91¾@86
Michigan Central 4 ₰ cent. or	90@81 exd.
Milwaukee and Mississippi 16 ₰ cent. or	60 @44

The Market, although still feverish and excited, and touching the lowest point at the Second Board, closed on Saturday, ¼@1 ₰ cent. better than on the printed list. The heavy decline on the two Wisconsin Roads appeared to be stayed, and the low options on New-York and Erie were fully taken by good buyers, and the cash bids for Michigan Southern, Reading, and New-York Central, also improved. And as this extraordinary and long-continued movement against the Share-List, kept up mainly as it has been by overwhelming sales on time, is likely to find less sympathy, the present week, in the Money Market, than the operators in the decline have been calculating upon, and the much-talked-of First of July is about to come and go without the presence of "general ruin" to the country, or even the semblance of panic or pressure in the Bank and Sub-Treasury movement, it is possible we shall see the end of it, for a season, at least, in a few days. The leaders of the onslaught, however, if rumor is to be credited, have marked 70 for New-York Central, and 65 for Reading, as well as 25 for Erie. The resignation of the Treasurer of the Michigan Southern appeared in the Evening Post of Saturday afternoon. The Board of Directors meet again to-morrow, when his successor will probably be chosen. We copy Mr. GRAY'S letter in another place.

ERIE BONDS.

An Editor knows everything. Can he inform a holder the reason of the Erie Railroad Bonds of '75 selling as low as 80 in view of a dividend of 3½ ₰ cent. due 1st August next. Are there wheels within wheels, or have the Bears got them in their clutches, or what is it? Having purchased a lot under the impression that they were a safe investment, and would become more so every day as the monthly quantity were redeemed, I have felt surprise of the quotations I have from time to time observed, and should be glad of an explanation. Perhaps you will explain, and oblige a constant reader of your paper. M., OF SYRACUSE.

An Editor cannot know everything, but in this case it is safe to assure our correspondent that his Bonds are all right. They have declined, in sympathy with the stock of the road and the Bearish course of the general market. The August interest will be paid now and hereafter. The Company are in no pecuniary embarrassment either as to earnings or commanding the cash to pay their interest promptly. They pay $105,000 on the 1st July, $292,000 on 1st August, and $350.000 on 1st September.

The account of the disposition of the Seneca County Ohio Bank Securities, which was generally copied by the City press on Friday and Saturday from the Cincinnati Gazette, stated that Messrs. ATWOOD & Co., of this City, held these securities; but we did not understand the article as reflecting blame upon these gentlemen. As, however, it was deemed susceptible of misinterpretation to their prejudice, the State Agent of Ohio, now in this City, has volunteered the following Card:

Noticing sundry articles in the newspapers, tending to implicate Messrs. ATWOOD & Co., of New-York, as improperly receiving certain stocks of the State of Ohio, or unjustifiably withholding them from the State; I deem it an act of simple justice to that house to say that they received and held these stocks as security for actual and bona fide advances of money to the Treasurer of the State; and have invariably manifested the utmost willingness to surrender them to the State, upon payment of such advances. The advances have been refunded to them, and the stocks have been returned to the State. In the adjustment and settlement of these transactions with Messrs. ATWOOD & Co., their conduct has been not only fair and honorable, but courteous and liberal. They deserve thanks rather than censure. F. M. WRIGHT, Agent of State of Ohio.

NEW-YORK, June 27, 1857.

June 23, 1857.

SIR: Numerous applications having been made to this Department, by merchants of New-York, for permission to allow merchandise arriving prior to the 1st of July to remain on board ship until that date, and to be entered for consumption on and after said date, I have to inform you that, where the said merchandise is on board the vessel, and under the charge of an officer of the Customs, on the 1st of July, (the fifteen or twenty lay days not having expired,) said merchandise may be allowed to be entered on and after the 1st of July next, for consumption, and pay duty; according to the rates prescribed by the Tariff Act of March 3, 1857. Very respectfully, your obedient servant, HOWELL COBB, Secretary of the Treasury.

H. J. REDFIELD, Esq., Collector of Customs, New-York.

Buffalo and State Line Road.

From the Cleveland Herald.

The ticket break at Erie still continues. We saw a party of travelers in this city yesterday who come days since, at the West, procured their through tickets to N. Y. by the N. Y. and Erie Road. They heard here that their coupons between Erie and Dunkirk were worthless, and, as might be expected, they were in trouble. This outrage upon travelers becomes daily more and more apparent, and we are now informed of a fact we did not dream of before, to wit: that the Railroad ticket offices here not only do not sell tickets to Dunkirk, but do not sell tickets over the New-York and Erie Road, or any part thereof. We had supposed that these offices only refused to sell an Erie and Dunkirk coupon, or Dunkirk ticket.

We are told that the New-York Central Road is not responsible for this refusal to recognize the coupons by the Erie and Buffalo line, but that Superintendant BROWN, of the Erie and Buffalo line, issued the order to throw out these coupons because he considered that the N. Y. & Erie Railroad Co. had violated a resolution established by the Railroad Conventions of Cincinnati and Cleveland. A Committee were appointed at these Conventions to decide upon any violation of the resolutions, but it would appear that the Superintendant of the Erie and Buffalo line decided this question for himself, and hence this outrage—this gross outrage—upon travelers. The reasons for this order are found in the fact that the Erie and Buffalo line wish travelers to pass over the whole length of their road, and thus throw impediments in the way of those who wish to stop at Dunkirk. This is the road which complained of pecuniary loss by the Erie rail rippers, and now, we suppose, means to get its money back by robbing the public.

The above was probably written before the news of the Conference at Buffalo on the subject was known at Clevsland. No further difficulty is anticipated, particularly, as the New-York Central Company have disavowed all participation in the bad faith and conduct of the State Line Road. It is also proper to add that we understand that Mr. DREW, who occupies the double vocation of Treasurer of the New-York and Erie Company, and one of the heaviest holders in the State Line, disapproves the recent conduct of the latter.

Michigan Southern Treasurer.

From the Evening Post, June 27.

NEW YORK, Saturday, June 27, 1857.

To the Directors of the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad Company:

GENTLEMEN: It is well known to you, in accepting the office of Treasurer of your Company at a critical period in its finances, I did so with great reluctance on my part, at your earnest solicitation, as the post was then one of more than ordinary responsibilities, and involved in the prospect great sacrifices of time and comfort. I reserved to myself the right, when this period was passed, to resign the office, and had even intended to do so at a convenient time. I was influenced in my acceptance of the office solely and purely by the desire and intention to aid, so far as in my power, a great and important enterprise in regaining its proper position and credit in the community. I then had, and still have, the most entire confidence in the resources and ability of the Company, under proper management, to pay not only interest upon the funded debt, but satisfactory dividends upon the stock. Circumstances subsequently transpired, which it is not necessary here to refer to, which induced a majority of you informally to request my remaining longer in the office than I intended, and the time of my retirement was left indefinite. Events of a recent date, however, led me to tender you the resignation of my office on Thursday last, which you yesterday deemed proper to decline receiving. I much regret this, as it imposes on me the responsibility of acting against the wishes of a majority of the board in resigning, as I now do, peremptorily, the office of treasurer of your company, to take effect from this date. It is due to myself, in consequence of intimations thrown out, now to make the declaration, that since my connection with the company I have not been interested, directly or indirectly, in any operation in the stock of the company, except to the extent of my subscription to the guarantied stock, as appeared in the published list, deeming such operations entirely inconsistent and improper in the officer of any company. The many and various statements which have been circulated referring to the affairs of the company may hereafter require from me further communication to the public. I cannot, in this communication, refrain from bearing my testimony to the marked ability of my assistant, Mr. HOPKINS, than whom there is not to be found a more competent and worthy officer, nor one more particularly fitted to perform the entire duties of Treasurer, which requires, in addition to the ordinary qualifications of office, a character for integrity above suspicion.

Thanking you, gentlemen, for the confidence which you have reposed in me, and assuring you that the welfare of the company, in which many of my friends are interested, will ever be considered by me,

I am, respectfully, yours, JNO. A. C. GRAY.

California Money and Market Summary.

SAN FRANCISCO, Friday, June 5.

With the merchants this promises to be a tolerably easy steamer, as for fully forty-five days past, curtailment rather than expansion of obligations has been the rule with nearly every one engaged in trade. For this season, although money is probably no more abundant, it has latterly worked easier to the borrower. Upon merchandise loans are negotiated at 2@2½ ₰ cent., the latter being an extreme rate. Upon Real Estate money can be had at 1½@1¾ ₰ cent., and there are parties with unquestionable titles endeavoring to effect loans, but the difficulty is that even the lowest rates mentioned above will swallow up the net income of productive property now-a-days—as gro stly have rents declined from the fabulous prices of a few years back.

The receipts of Gold Dust from the country keep well up to the highest average of this Spring, and as the Mint still remains closed, except for the coinage of the bars, the supply of unparted bars is abundant.

We hear it rumored that our banking facilities are shortly to be enlarged by the opening of one or two new houses with ample capital. It is to be hoped that these reports are well founded, as the extent of bank accommodation now available to the mercantile community is quite restricted, and materially interferes with business.

During the past fortnight the demand from the interior has been light, and the jobbers have been enabled to meet it with but meagre additions to their previous stocks. Hence it is that very nearly a month has elapsed without any arrival from a home Atlantic port, causing more demand for goods in store and a legitimate improvement in prices. While the jobbers' sales to their customers, during the last half of May, were in no respects large, we yet believe their own purchases were less by fifty per cent., and this, too, while money was all the while working easier, and their outstanding credits were being greatly diminished.

The leading articles in which the transactions have been of an important character during the last fortnight, are, Brown Cottons, Coffee, Candles, Preserves, French Goods, Gunny Bags, Oils, Butter and American Liquors. In respect to Preserved Fruits and Sauces, it will be seen by reference to the article under that head, that the sales have been of unusual magnitude, covering nearly every description in the market, and that prices were realized netting from 10 to 75 per cent. lose. Considerable purchases of Butter have been made on speculation and slightly advanced prices towards the close been paid, principally, however, for parcels to arrive in August and September, when the sanguine operators anticipate that owing to this being a dry season, the supply of California Butter will totally fail and Eastern will have to meet the entire consumption. This is merely a repetition of last Spring's speculation, and it will be remembered that the drouth last year was exceedingly severe; yet the operation proved a very disastrous one to those engaged in it. We apprehend that those who reckon on a cessation of the supply of California Butter, during the Summer and Fall months are deceiving themselves. Our dairy farms are in great part located in the best watered valleys in the State, where in most cases the supply of water never fails, and however severe the drouth may prove this year, we have no hesitation in asserting that fully one-third more Butter will be sent to market than there was last season, while from Oregon we shall have double the quantity, the greater part of which is still to arrive.

The sales of American Liquors during the fortnight have scarcely resulted in more than the stock being more nearly concentrated; prices are hardly changed and we regard the market as by no means strong.

The arrivals since our last report have been few, comprising merely the Wanderer, with Goffes, and the Cygnet, with Rice, from Manila; the Formosa, from Hong Kong, with Rice; the Eastern State, from London, and the Augusta et Meline, from Havre, with assorted cargoes; the Alerta, from Guaymas, with Silver and Corn; the Frances Helen, from San Quentin, Mexico, with Salt, and the brig Boston from a whaling voyage.

The Coal Trade.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

The Anthracite Coal trade is quickening a little, though it is still behind, both for the week and season, what it was at corresponding time last year:

	1857. Week.	1857. Season.	1856. Week.	1856. Season.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. only, shows an increased business over last year. Its weekly tonnage is now up to between ten thousand and eleven thousand tons, which is nearly, or quite, the maximum of the weekly estimate. The aggregate business of that Company is now about 137,000 tons ahead of last year to same time. Trade in all the mining districts has been much interrupted by rainy weather, which it is hoped is now over. The tonnage, it is expected, will be greatly increased by next report.

THE CALAMITY ON THE ST. LAWRENCE.

The Burning of the Steamer Montreal.

Particulars of the Occurrence---Heart-rending Scenes.

A LIST OF THE PASSENGERS.

From the Montreal Argus, June 29.

On Saturday morning, early, our citizens were alarmed with the awful intelligence of the destruction of the Montreal, with a living freight of several hundreds of passengers. We immediately conveyed the sorrowful tidings to the public in an Extra, and, as the day proceeded, furnished such particulars as we could collect from time to time. We now give the fullest report we can furnish of the disastrous incident, which will long be a subject of painful remembrance amongst us. A gloom is thrown over our city and our society by the sad event. We forbear comments for the present on what must seem as matter for rigid and close investigation.

We are indebted to the Purser of the Napoleon for the following authentic statement:

Yesterday afternoon, about 4½ o'clock, the steame Montreal, RUDOLF, master, took fire about half a mile above Cape Rouge. The fire burst above the boile deck; the captain immediately got out the hose and set all hands to work, who did all they could to extinguish it. After working a few minutes it was found unavailing to stop the flames, which gained so fast, and spread so rapidly, that they could not g them under nor save the boat.

The mate then got out the jolly-boat into which h placed four ladies, cabin passengers, their maid and the cabin girl. It was his intention to get the women first out, and he had given orders to that effect; but when the male immigrants saw that, they made a rush down the side and into the boat, which was instantly swamped. The mate strove to cut the hawser so as to save those in the boat, but the rush was so great it was impossible. The Napoleon was seen at a considerable distance, and kept aloof from the burning boat. She sent out, however, a large batteau, belonging to some raftsmen she had on board. Before it reached the Montreal, the boat was in flames all over, and they were only able to pick up those in the water, or hanging to the wreck.

Fourteen of the crew were drowned. The Captain, Purser, and all the officers, were saved.

The Captain was the last man to leave the wreck. Mr. WILSON, Jr., son of the owner, escaped with difficulty, by swimming ashore.

Mr. ANDREW HAYES, who was saved, was in the water for above an hour; he had stripped himself to his drawers, and had to borrow clothing from the officers of the Napoleon. He rendered assistance to several unfortunates in the water, and we understand saved several lives. The boat was burnt to the water's edge, and upwards of 200 persons must have perished on board, or have been drowned.

The number saved is from one hundred and seventy-five to two hundred passengers; but their baggage and effects are lost, and some of the poor creatures brought up by the steamer Napoleon were almost in a state of nudity.

The passengers were principally emigrants,—Scotch and Norwegian; the former are the larger proportion; and most of the saved have to lament the loss of their nearest and deerest relations: many of them are women and children. Amongst the latter is a beautiful infant of about a year old, who was picked out of the water but whom nobody claims.

Several of these saved are slightly wounded, but none of them dangerously. The steamer, on the fire breaking out, was immediately headed towards the shore, but the water is shallow, and she ran on a rock within about 100 yards of the shore. We are sorry to record that the people showed great inhumanity in not attempting to rescue the sufferers, but displayed great activity in stealing their effects. The passengers were treated with the utmost kindness, and supplied with food and every comfort possible on board the Napoleon.

On the arrival of the Napoleon here, hundreds of our citizens were congregated on the wharf: and shortly after she was moored the acting Mayor and several members of the Corporation were on board, also several of the officers of the different national Societies, who all apneared solicitous to rendor assistance, and take care of the sufferers. His Worship ordered those who had sustained injury to be at once taken to the Hospital; the National Societies will take care of the others.

LIST OF PASSENGERS.

The following is a list, as complete as we can make, of the passengers of the Montreal, with the names of those saved and those supposed to be drowned. There is a hope that some of them in the latter category may yet be ound to have been preserved, though Captain COTE, with whom we have conversed, is apprehensive that only about 12 or 15 persone have been left behind at Cap Rouge, who chose to search for their missing relatives;

STATEMENT OF ANDREW HAYES.

Mr. ANDREW HAYES, a Commission Agent of this City, who was a passenger, makes the following statement:

The fire occurred at 5 P. M. yesterday. The Montreal had left Quebec at 4 P. M. The fire broke out in the main saloon, in mid-ships, immediately over the boiler room. Smoke was first seen to issue from one of the state rooms. It was very dense—so dense that it was, in less than five minutes, impossible to see anything in the saloon. In ten minutes the flames burst out, and filled the saloon, and burst ont on both sides. I was in the stern of the vessel when this occurred. I lowered myself down by the side of the vessel, and while I was doing so, I saw one man trying to get a boat off the upper deck. He called me to his assistance. He loosed the ropes of the boat, and held one end and I the other. Together we let her down. I slid down the ropes. In less than five minutes the boat was under water with the crowd that rushed into it. The flames soon became so intense that I jumped out of the boat into the water, and swam towards another boat I saw coming to our rescue, but it shot past me and made for the boat at the side of the Montreal. I swam back, and got under the boat that came to our assistance.

There were a number of females in the water, and seven or eight of them clung to me. These were taken out one by one, and I was disentangled. The boat took us load to the Napoleon; and immediately after I saw a number of small boats from the Napoleon reach the Montreal. I understood that the boat which first reached the Montreal did not belong to the Napoleon, but to a passenger on board; and it was only after a violent altercation, and the passengers insisting on its being sent, that it was sent. I saw the Captain of the Napoleon cursing the owner of the boat. In my opinion the whole affair was very badly managed. I think fully quarter of an hour elapsed before assistance came from the Napoleon. The Napoleon was between 200 and 300 yards off from us when the fire broke ont. The Montreal was 150 yards from the shore. The Montreal was headed for the shore in about 10 minutes after the alarm was given; and the flames had broken out in the manner I have already stated. I think she ought to have been headed for the shore sooner. She got aground in the attempt to reach it, and stuck fast, nearly as far off the shore as she was when the fire broke out. I saw no one to give directions, or take command, on board the Montreal. Everything was in utter confusion. I think she might have got nearer to the shore than she did, with proper management, and the destruction of life have been made less. Nobody saved anything whatever, except what was on their backs. There was no time to look back. The Montreal is burnt to the water's edge. The boilers exploded some time after the flames broke out. I heard the Montreal had been on fire twice previously during the afternoon of the same day, and that, in consequence, they had a person to watch. I understand the furnaces were badly secured, and the wood-work not properly protected by metal sheeting. I heard this from the captain of the Napoleon, and others on board that steamer.

The scene was apallingly terrific beyond description on board the Montreal, and on the Napoleon afterwards, the scenes of distress were most heart-rending. Here and there one saw persons seeking for their children; and children seeking for their parents, with terror and dismay on their fases—anxions to catch tidings of those they loved. I saw a good many bodies badly burned and disfigured, and many persons in intense suffering, which those on board tried to assuage by means of scraped potatoes, &c. There were from 450 to 500 persons on board; 30 of these about were cabin passengers; 120 bodies, living and dead, were taken ont of the water. There were 16 dead bodies. I only noticed one Montrealer, Mr. LESLIE, of CARTER & KERR'S. I can't tell if he is saved. A few swam to the shore and took the road to Quebec. We were about 12 miles from Quebec when the fire broke ont. The steerage passengers were principally Scoted immigrants from the John Mackenzie. There were also among them some Germans, Canadians and Indians. One family was named MEEKLE, of whom there were six; three of them are gone. The father of the family, aged 37, is gone. I can't tell how many lives are lost. I think there must be a great many. Many must have been burned. I can't tell how many swam to the shore and reached Quebec.

Further Particulars.

The Napoleon brought up from the wreck in all 125 of the passengers, of whom were the remains of 16 dead, principally children. According to the statement of Captain RUDOLF, commander of the Montreal, who remained behind, there somewhere about 300 passengers on board, so that taking into account the crew of the Montreal, there would still appear to be 200 missing.

Captain COTE, of the Napoleon, gives us the following particulars of the disaster, which, it will be observed, differs most materially from the account of the steward of the Montreal in those particulars which refer to the alleged inhumanity of the people at Cap Rouge, and we feel bound to say, and we do so with satisfaction, that we place every reliance on the account given by Capt. COTE.

So soon as Captain COTE, who was some little distance ahead of the Montreal, discovered that she was on fire, he put about to render every assistance. He immediately, after approaching within some forty yards of the burning boat—as near as he could with safety—lowered his two boats and sent them to the rescue. A large batteau, to which we have referred, happened to be on board also, and the master, one CAMERON by name, when appealed to, made a strong resistance, refusing to allow the raftsmen, over whom he was in command, to man the boat or lend a hand to launch her. Captain COTE, on this being represented to him, at once energetically interfered and ordered his men immediately to put off the batteau, telling CAMERON that if he prevented him, he would launch him along with his boat. By this determination, which cannot be too highly commended, many lives were saved.

Several boats were put off from vessels lying at Carouge, and from schooners passing up and down, which did very good service in rescuing the passengers. From the shore, we believe, also, some boats put off and assisted, but the distance is considerable from the inhabited part of the settlement. The accident occurring immediately opposite the Cape, there was really no means of assistance immediately at hand.

The boat unfortunately struck on a ridge of stones, with deep water on each side of her; had she got a few yards further, she might have landed her passengers high and dry. As it was there were but some forty or fifty yerds deep water between the vessel and the ridge across, which gained, it being low water, the passengers could have walked to land on the stones.

Besides the Captain of the Napoleon, whose efforts were most praiseworthy and strenuous, the services of the steward, Mr. J. B. LADELLE, the first waiter, Mr. B. LADEBOUCHE, and the second waiter, Mr. LEVI LADEBOUCHE, deserve to be honorably mentioned.

As mentioned in our former edition, his Worship the acting Mayor and the officers of the National Societies were early on the spot. Mr. Superintendent COUSSOL was also there, and the Water Police under his command did good service in keeping off the crowd, and rendering humane attention to the sufferers.

The Mayor ordered those who appeared to be injured worst to be taken at once to the General Hospitals; while others, men, women and children, were conveyed to the Emigrant Sheds in Commissioner street, where they were waited on by his Worship, Mr. COUSSOL, some of the clergy of the city, some of the religious ladies of the Catholic Institutions, and were attended by Dr. MCKEOWN.

The Mayor and Mr. COUSSOL ordered that every necessary required by the unfortunates should be supplied.

Mr. MURRAY, the President of the St. Andrew's Society, and several members of the Charitable Committee were also there, and actively engaged in getting the proper information from the emigrants of their country as to their friends or destination.

They are all to be taken in the course of the afternoon to the St. Andrew's Home, until their friends could be communicated with. The wants of the German emigrants were also attended to by Mr. SCHMIDT, the assistant emigration agent at this port.

The scene at the sheds which we visited was so affecting as to beggar description. In one place was an octogenarian couple lamenting the loss of their son, who had taken care of them during their long voyage, and who, having thus far brought them in safety, lost his own life, probably in his desire to preserve theirs. In another place was a wife, on her way to Toronto to find her hueband there, with four children who, whilst saving two, had the agony of beholding the other two drowned in her sight. There was another mother who had lost her only son, who had rushed to save her from the flames, and perished in the attempt; her niece also had perished. There were others who had lost their nearest and dearest relatives, and found themselves desolate and without friend or comforter in a strange land. It was refreshing to behold, however, the kindness they met with in their bereavement, on every side, and which seemed to restore and comfort them. Though in sadness and distress for those they had lost, the friends their desolation seemed to have brought them served to revive their drooping spirits. It is a consolation to know that, in the distressing circumstances of the case, Montreal, never wanting in commiseration or the providing of relief for affliction or distress, has in this case showed the greatest activity, and, through her acting Chief Magistrate and her other public functionaries, done all in her power to alleviate the weight of the calamity.

We understand a requisition will be presented this afternoon to the Mayor, praying him to call a meeting for to-morrow, to take such preliminary steps as may be considered expedient under the circumstances, and we are sure his worship is most anxious to meet the desiree of the citizens in every way.

There are 19 patients in the Montreal Hospital under the care of Dr. RANNY; and a telegraph has been received from the scene of the disaster that 106 bodies have been picked up.

THE INQUEST.

The sixteen bodies brought up by the Napoleon were, by the order of Coroner JONES, conveyed to the chapel in the Dorchester burying ground. He held an inquest upon them in the evening, and being anxious that the cause of the catastrophe should be fully investigated, he summoned 40 of our most respectable merchants; only 15 of them appeared. They were sworn in in the Grand Jury Room, and at once proceeded to the chapel to view the bodies. Their names are DANIEL GORRIE, foreman; John Sinclair, Robert Campbell, John Hutchinson, Thomas Mussen, Edward Thompson, A. Lionais, Z. Benoit, J. B. Rolland, P. Jodoin, H. Pare, E. Gauthier, J. B. Houle, A. Gravel, N. Desmarteau.

The medical gentlemen summoned on the occasion were Dr. NELSON, Dr. HOLMES, Dr. SCOTT, Dr. RENDY, and Dr. TEUDEL. The Coroner swore them to inquire into the cause of the death of the 16 bodies in their view—whether they had come to their death by suffocation, drowning or fire. Their task was a melancholy one; but it was soon fulfilled. It was one of the most heart-rending sights we have ever witnessed, to see the cover removed off these dead bodies, and look upon what had once been health and happiness, and spirits under it. There were two grown up women cut down in their prime, quietly sleeping with their hands entwined. A girl about 15, dressed up in her best, with silk gloves on, and the neetest boots; a boy about 12, smiling even in death, and whose countenance was as placid as if he had quietly gone to his rest; another about nine, with his arm around a girl about 13—probably his sister; another girl about the same age, and a boy rather younger; and eight children, seven o' them girls, not over six years old—all these were disclosed to our view. Those poor darlings—those sweet cherubs! Upon thee the death angel came quietly but silently—thy eyes closed without a struggle, and thy immortal spirits have passed to the sky.

The medical gentlemen gave it as their opinion that all the deaths were caused by drowning, and were afterwards discharged.

The Coroner opens his inquest to-morrow, when the whole matter will be fully examined into.

RECOGNITION OF SEVERAL OF THE BODIES—HON. S. C. PHILLIPS, OF SALEM, AMONG THE DEAD.

MONTREAL, Monday, June 29.

The killed were principally Scotch emigrants. Sixty or seventy of the survivors have reached here, and four stopped at Three Rivers. Sixteen of the dead bodies were brought here and 157 taken to Quebec. Among the latter are:

The Brothers FARR, potters, of St. John, C. E.

Mr. LESLIE, druggist, of Montreal.

Mr. MCLAREN, of Quebec.

Mr. THOS. MERKLE, of Lachute.

The Coroner's Jury will set to-morrow.

BOSTON, Monday, June 29.

Hon STEPHEN C. PHILLIPS, of Salem, is among the dead by the burning of the steamer Montreal. His body has been recovered. Mr. PHILLIPS was returning home from Three Rivers where he had been on a visit to his son.

The announcement of the death of Mr. PHILLIPS, created a profound sensation of grief in Salem. All the church bells were tolled, the flags of the shipping and public buildings were displayed at half mast, touching allusions were made to the public services and private virtues of the deceased in the pulpits of the several churches yesterday.

The Mr. NORCROSS, also lost, is supposed to be ISAAC W. NORCROSS, of Lowell, brother of the well-known lumber dealer of that city.

The Police Commissioners—Appointments and Removals—Mayor Wood Appoints some City Watchmen—He Refuses their Names to the Reporters.

The Metropolitan Commissioners were very busy yesterday in the discharge of their official duties. They made thirty-one appointments, and dismissed the subordinate members of the Second Ward force. Thus, all who were members of the Department when the old law went into power, and who refused to recognize the new Commissioners, have been formally dismissed.

The appointments yesterday were as follows:

First Ward—Jas. J. Esterbrook, Isaac Randell, Jas. S Ward, Jas. Silvis, Wm. West, Michael McLaughlin.

Third Ward—Wm. E. Brush, C. J. Smith, Samuel Perry, J. D. Birdsall, L. D. Place, Solomon Westheimer, John D. Gilmore, Edward W. Baldwin, D. R. Carker, J. D. Arthur, Chas. Wyvill, Samuel W. Ellis, Thos. Wallace, G. Forshay, A. M. Crawford, C. D. Wynkoop, J. S Matr, J. A. Gallaway, J. M Sweeney, E. M. Quackenooss, J. C. McKean, G. Rice, B. Rever.

Twelfth Ward—Jas. Desmond.

Fifteenth Ward—Thos. Van Cott.

Twentieth Ward—F. M. Cullin.

STEPHEN JOHNS, of the First Ward, who was a sergeant on the Broadway squad, and who was one of the first to declare for the new, was yesterday sworn in by the Commissioners as a sergeant. He is at present on special duty at the office in White-street, but will be sent to his Ward as soon as station house accomodations can be procured there.

No Inspector for the First Precinct has yet been appointed. There are several applicents for the position. JOSEPH A. GARDENER, a detailed officer at the First District Police Court, is an applicant for, and will probably be appointed to the position of First Sergeant of the same precinct.

Mayor WOOD swore in some half dozen City watchmen yesterday, and it was stated in his office that all the vacancies in the [Municipal] Department had been filled, and that a complete list of the new appointments was in the hands of the acting Chief. But reporters asking permission to see the list were refused, Mr. MCKELLAR stating that he had orders from the Commissioners not to let any one see it. Col. MINE, who was next applied to, said he had seen no list at all, and could not give any until the examining surgeon had sent in his certificates. The reporter, who still persisted, and called upon His Honor the Mayor, said to him: "I wish to know, Sir, if your list of police appointments is full, and if so, whether I can see it. I was told by Mr. MCKELLAR that he had orders from the Commissioners not to show it to any one; and I wish to know if such is the fact." The Mayor answered: "Yes, Sir, that is my order. I am responsible for it."

THE ATTACK ON THE THIRTEENTH WARD POLICE—CONDITION OF CAPT. MCKINNEY.—Capt. MCKINNEY, of the Thirteenth Ward Municipal Force, who was so badly injured on Sunday afternoon in Twelfth-street by a mob, is lying very low at his residence in Suffolk street. No visitors were permitted to see him yesterday, and it is feared even yet that he cannot recover. The other officers who were beaten at the same time are doing well.

EDWARD MALLOEY, the prisoner who was rescued from Capt. MCKINNEY, was recaptured yesterday morning by an Eleventh Ward Municipal Policeman, and taken to the Essex Market Police Court, where he was held for examination.

It is stated that when Capt. MCKINNEY and his men were attempting to arrest the rioters they were hooted by the mob, who cried out, "You are not Policemen. You have all been dismissed from the Department!"

The statement that the fight began by an attack upon Hose Company No. 12, by a gang of "runners," is contradicted by Mr. GRAHAM, Foreman of that Company, who avers that No. 12 was not out on Sunday, "neither does she run in the Sixth District."

The Police of the Thirteenth and Eleventh Wards are sanguine of their ability to ferret out and bring to justice the ringleaders of the mob by whom the murderous attack was made.

Inspector SQUIRES alludes to the difficulty in his return yesterday to Deputy CARPENTER, as follows:

"This is the legitimate fruit of the conduct and policy of FERNANDO WOOD. Ignorant and brutal men see his example of resistance to the law and decision of police authority, and they point to it as a perfect justification of themselves in doing the same things. There is a portentous cloud impending in this section of the City, and if a desperate contest and bloodshed do not result from the present state of things, it will not be certainly, to the reckless man who has inaugurated it, but to a beneficent Providence, which alone can arrest it, that we shall be indebted for our preservation."

LOSING THE EMIGRANT BUSINESS.—The emigrant passenger business is said to be rapidly passing out of the control of American shipping, merchants into the hands of English, German and French capitalists, who have been stealing a march on us with their steam propellers, which threaten, at no distant day, to monopolize the business altogether. It is somewhat remarkable that while our old liners have been laying for weeks at our docks, wanting freight, these propellers continue to ply back and forth, generally with full freights out and full steerages back. The increase in the number of these steamers is also a significant fact. During the six months of 1856, from the 1st January to the 1st July, there were only four of these arrived here with passengers, which were subject to be landed at Castle Garden, the whole number not exceeding a thousand persons; this year there were more than that during February and March alone; in April there were seven, in May eight, and in June twelve, bringing nearly 5000 passengers. All these vessels, with a single exception, were foreign bottoms.

These propellers are fitted expressly for this kind of business, and if the time consumed in making the passage, which is a principal item, be considered, it is plain that they can afford to bring passengers as cheap as sailing vessels.

These propellers now make the passage in from 16 to 18 days, while sailing ships require 30 or 40. In the Winter season, 50 and 60 days is not an uncommon passage. The propeller is now apparently constructed with great regard to economy of motive power and fuel; but were the same outlay made to secure speed as is practiced by the owners of our large side wheel steamers, it is the opinion of experienced persons that they would very soon compete with our fastest steamers in making the Atlantic passage. If, therefore, American merchants do not intend to see the carrying monopolized by foreign bottome in the shape of steam propellers, they will have to sell their old Black Ball and Black Star lines for whalers, and turn to building fast lines of steam propellers.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE

Discussion in Parliament on the Bombardment of Greytown.

Progress of the French Election Canvass.

Reduction of the Rate of Interest by the Bank of England.

ADVANCE IN COTTON—BREADSTUFFS QUIET.

HALIFAX, Monday June 29.

The steamship Niagara, from Liverpool on the 20th inst., arrived here at 8.20 this evening. Her dates are three days later than those already received.

The steamships Columbia and Anglo Saxon arrived out on the 16th inst.

There had been a spirited discussion in the House of Commons in regard to the destruction of Greytown.

Lord HAMILTON inquired if the Government had demanded reparation for the British property destroyed.

Lord PALMERSTON replied that it had not, the law officers of the Crown having given the opinion that the demand could not be sustained.

A discussion ensued in which Messrs. D'ISRAELI, ROEBUCK and others denounced the outrage as an insult to the honor and flag of Great Britain, which ought to have been maintained.

Lord JOHN RUSSELL and others defended the Government, and the subject was dropped.

The number of British cruisers on the coast of Cuba is to be increased.

The Continental news is unimportant.

Great Britain.

In the House of Lords, the Commons bill in relation to ministers' money in Ireland, was brought up on Tuesday.

Lord GRANVILLE stated that the bill enacts that all existing interests shall be provided for out of the means at the disposal of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and would remove almost the only remaining cause of religious discord in Ireland.

Lord DERBY opposed the measure, but after a debate the bill was ordered to a second reading, by 101 to 96.

In the House of Commons, on Friday, in answer to Sir G. B PECAKELL, Sir G. WOOD said it was the intention of the Government to increase the number of cruisers on the coast of Cuba, for the suppression of the slave trade

Lord CLAUDE HAMILTON asked what steps had been taken by the Government to obtain compensation for the British subjects residing at Greytown, whose property was destroyed when that town was bombarded in 1854.

Lord PALMERSTON could not help characterizing the proceeding as violent and cruel, reflecting no credit upon the Government who ordered it to be done or upon the officer who executed the order. The question, however, had to be considered as one of international law, and the law officers of the Crown decided that the inhabitants of Greytown had no claim to compensation.

Lord LORNE remarked that the British Consul's house at Greytown was set on fire while the flag was flying from it. He then condemned the cowardly policy of England towards the strong power of the United States.

Mr. ROEBUCK ridiculed the explanation given by the noble lord, that it was the duty of the country not to protect Greytown from coaquest, and to allow bombardment without interference. The conduct of the American Government was dishonest and if the offending powor had been China instead of America they would have heard immediately of the insult to the British flag, and reparation would have been enforced.

Mr. BENTYCK observed that there had been for some time a want of determination to resent outrages committed by the American Government, and considered that policy as more likely to promote hostilities than to avert them.

The Attorney General denied that in any case the right to demand satisfaction for outrages by America had been given up by England, and expressed regret at the course which the Government had been compelled to take.

Mr. D'ISRAELI considered the explanation of the Government as most unsatisfactory, contending that it was a violation of international law to bombard an unfortified town. The French Government had sought redress though the English Government had failed to do so—but he believed that public opinion being brought to bear upon the matter would lead to a different course being adopted.

Lord JOHN RUSSELL approved of the course taken by the Government in regard to the claim for compensation but thought that explanations should be demanded as to the insult to the British flag. The case of China had been referred to, but our conduct there had been most flagitious, and so totally opposed to justice that it was a precedent he hoped would never again be followed.

The subject was then dropped.

The Catholic members of Parliament generally are still in opposition to the pending Oath bill.

At an adjourned meeting of influential Catholics a resolution was carried, affirming that the bill was practically a re-enactment of one which was allowed even by Protestants to be insulting and offensive, and earnestly requesting all the Catholic members of both Houses of the Legislature to oppose the bill at every stage.

The Cotton Supply Association had held another meeting at Heywood. The attendance was large, and the proceedings were, in effect, the same as at previous meetings.

The Band of England on Tuesday reduced its rates of interest to 6 per cent. both for discount and loans, but the movement created only a very slight rise in the funds. The discount houses also lowered their rates a half per cent.

The London Times publishes an article on General WALKER's career in Nicaragua, in which it calls upon the United States Government not to tolerate such brigandage, but to wait patiently until time adde the Central American States to the Union.

The alterations in the frigate Niagara were expected to be completed by Saturday, the 20th, on which day she would leave Portsmouth for Liverpool, to forthwith commence shipping the sub-marine cable.

The officers of the Niagara were being hospitably entertained by the naval authorities at Portsmouth.

Among the presentations to the Queen, at a levee on the 18th, were Messrs. CORNELIUS GRINNELL and J. V. L. PRUYN, of New-York, by the American Minister.

The weather in England continued very fine and the crops were in a most promising condition.

The question of the abolition of the Irish Vice-Royalty had created considerable stir in Dublin, and at a special meeting of the Corporation of Dublin a strong protest was entered against it.

France.

The election canvass continued very animated but presented no new feature. The Democratic Party was still divided and likely to continue so. It was supposed that none of their candidates if elected, would take the oath to the Government, although their organs refused to give any satisfaction in the matter.

The Plenipotentiaries were to meet at the Foreign Embassy in Paris, on the 19th, for the purpose of "signing the Convention relative to the Turco-Russian frontier."

The Siecle had received a third warning, for an article in favor of the Democratic candidates.

The Moniteur says that, an account of the election, the usual result in this case, a suspension of publication will not be forced.

There is a doubtful rumor afloat that NAPOLEON will shortly pay another visit to Queen VICTORIA.

The German-Danish Question.

The Berlin correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, says that accounts have been received from Copenhagen which threaten to bring the German-Danish question more rapidly to a solution, and for the time being to augment its complication.

These accounts are to the effect that the King of Denmark had held a Cabinet Council, at which it was resolved that replies should be returned to the notes from Prussia and Austria, containing the declaration of its being impossible for His Danish Majesty to assent to the demands of the Austrian and Prussian Governments, as amplified in their notes, and that instructions have been forwarded to the Danish Envoys at London, Paris, and St. Petersburg, to lay copies of their reply before the Governments to which they are accredited, and at the same time to propose that the question at issue be referred to a European Congress in the event of the German Diet adopting, as no doubt it will adopt, the views of the two great Courts.

The same writer, also, mentions a rumor of a probable defensive and offensive alliance in the matter between Denmark and Sweden, and a supposition that Russia is disposed to befriend Denmark.

Belgium.

The Emancipation Belge states that the Turkish officers on missions in Belgium, have been suddenly recalled. These events are construed into a confirmation of the unsatisfactory relations said to be existing between the Governments of the two countries.

The Brussels Moniteur announces that an order had been issued for the disbanding of the militia, called to arms during the recent demonstrations.

Spain.

Madrid advices are to June 13. Notwithstanding the favorable weather for crops, wheat maintains its high price. In some of the Castilian markets, stocks are so small that scarcely any transactions occur, and those are at exhorbitant rates. A bad account is given of the vineyards of Zeres.

Nothing had transpired in relation to the dispute with Mexico.

Liverpool Cotton Market.

The Brokers' Circular reports the sales of Cotton for the week at 43,000 bales, of which exporters took 5,000, and speculators 6,500. All qualities had slightly advanced, partially caused by the reduction of the discount rates by the Bank of England to six per cent. The estimated sales on the day preceding the sailing of the Niagara (Friday) were 12,000 bales, of which speculators took 3,000 and exporters 3,000, the market closing quiet and prices steady. Southern Attacks on the Administration—The Condition of Kansas Affairs, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times:

WASHINGTON, Saturday, June 27, 1857.

General CASS arrived here to-day, and about noon visited the State Department. He looks remarkably well, and appears to be in very good spirits. He is here in time to counsel and encourage his colleagues in the Administration, and reassure Mr. BUCHANAN in regard to Kansas affairs. They are all much embarrassed by the hostile demonstrations of the South against their Kansas policy, as manifested by Gov. WALKER's addresses. But Secretary COBB and Secretary THOMPSON, and the President himself, are the especial targets of Southern shafts, and they feel the iron in their vitals. Mr. COBB cannot well get over the terrific demonstration of the Georgia Democratic State Convention. He sees that it was aimed at him Unfortunately for the Administration, they are unable now to take a back track on the vexed Kansas question. It is too late. They cannot, if they would, contradict the statements of Gov. WALKER in his addresses, that his course is in conformity with his instructions, and approved by the President and his Cabinet. They cannot contradict the several articles which have appeared in the Union, and which go to sustain Gov. WALKER in every step he has taken.

The South expected from Mr. BUCHANAN too much They looked upon the defeat of FREMONT as a guaranty of the introduction of Slavery into Kansas, and the admission of that State into the Union as a Slave State. They are probably to be disappointed unless Congress should accept the constitution which the Pro-Slavery Convention called frame, without submitting it to the bona fide citizens of the Territory for their sanction That Congress will not accept it until approved by the people is asserted by the Administration and by Gov. WALKER, and may be taken as a matter of certainty. But there is no other chance of making Kansas, practically and permenently, a

ADDITIONAL FROM EUROPE.

The Mails by the City of Baltimore and North Star.

From our European files by the City of Baltimore and North Star, whose arrival at this port we announced in yesterday's impression, we obtain some additional intelligence of interest.

The London Times of the 15th inst. says:

"The Niagara, United States corvette, Capt. HUDSON, is being rapidly fitted for her portion of the cable, and will be ready to proceed to Liverpool to ship it by this day week, if not earlier. Capt. HUDSON and his officers were entertained, with Consul PAPPALARDO, on Friday night by Colonel LAKE, C. B., and the officers of the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers."

And, in the same journal of the 16th, we find the following paragraph:

"The Roberts, an American freightship, arrived at Woolwich Arsenal on Saturday, having on board six breech-loading guns, manufactured in New York by order of the British Government. In consequence of the enormous weight of these guns—namely, 17 tons each, the vessel was ordered to discharge in the East India Docks. The guns are thence to be conveyed to Woolwich in lighter barges, and will be landed on the wharf."

Of the Spanish-Mexican dispute, the Madrid correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 10th of June, says:

"The latest arrivals from Mexico are unimportant, and do not seem likely to accelerate the settlement of the dispute between that country and Spain. The trial of the prisoners was proceeding, but they were numerous, and it would occupy much time. In short, no advance has been made towards a friendly arrangement, and all that appears to be doing at present is to gain time. This is undecided gain, for if the question could be left quiet until the law on the press is passed, and the Cortes separate, the Spanish Government would be more free to make becoming concessions than when urged by irritating appeals in the Chambers and the newspapers. For the last few days little has been said about the Mexican affair, that topic having been to some extent superseded by the law relating to the Press."

The Great Handel Festival, in anticipation of the Musical Congress to be held in London in 1859 commemorative of the centenary of HANDEL's death, commenced at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, on Monday the 15th of June, with the performance of the "Messiah." The band and chorus numbered 2,500 persons. The attendance was very large and everything passed off with great éclat. The other performances on the same scale were to take place on the 17th and 19th.

A Parliamentary Return has been issued showing the extent of the efforts that have been made by Great Britain to suppress the Slave-trade on the Coast of Cuba. At the dates last received, there were two vessels for this purpose on their respective stations on the coast,—the Arabia (sailing,) and the Falcon (steam.) Since January, 1854, there seem to have been 18 or 20 vessels employed on this service. The time they remain upon their respective cruising stations varies from three or four days to two or three months.

It has been currently reported that England intended to abandon the Falkland Islands, but, from the following paragraph in the United Service Gazette we conclude there is no truth in the report:

"It is in contemplation to form a corps for service at the Falkland Islands from volunteers from certain regiments of the line. The men must have been in the service 15 years, be married, and have not less than three children. The period of service is to be for six years, at the expiration of which they will be pensioned and have a grant of land. We understand that as yet the volunteering is in failure, very few men having offered for this duty."

A new project is mentioned as in course of formation in London for opening up Central Africa as a mart for the sale of the British cheap class of manufactured goods. The suggestion comes from Dr. LIVINGSTON, the African traveler. The object of the the Company, besides creating a market for the manufactured article, embraces the production of the raw material. Active efforts will be made to promote the cultivation of Cotton.

A new deposit of Peruvian guano is announced to have been discovered, situated on the mainland, just opposite the Chincha Islands, and situated in the same parallel of latitude. As some discrepancy exists as to the amount of supply in those islands this discovery becomes important.

A letter from Sebastopol, published in the Moniteur de la Flotte, gives some details which show the state of that port, and points out what had really been effected with regard to getting up the sunken vessels. A certain number, which were anchored near the shore in rather shallow water, grounded rather than sunk, and received but very trifling damage. These are the vessels which have been taken up and repaired at Nicolaief. Among them are six small steamers. As to the line of battle ships, frigates, and other vessels, either steam or sailing ones, which were sunk to form the three lines to close the entrance to the port, it has been found impossible to move them. They are deeply embedded in the sand above the bilge, and are heavily laden with stone and other articles, which were conveyed on board to fix them in their places.

The Slave-Trade—Suggestions for its Prevention.

From the London Times, June 15.

On Wednesday last, as our columns have already informed the public, a deputation waited on the Prime Minister to submit certain propositions for an improved action of European Governments in the matter of the Slave trade. It is certainly high time that such improvement should be attempted. In the British West Indian Islands, where the abolition of Slavery has been a reality, our planters have seen a depreciation of their property amounting to little less than ruin. In the Spanish settlements, notwithstanding the engagements of their authorities to suppress the Slave-trade, it is prosecuted with shameless persistency, and with a result most unjust to our own colonists. In Africa the demand for slaves thus maintained is perpetuating all the unspeakable atrocities of the traffic; and, in Brazil, where the trade has been suspended, the acceptance of this better policy has been, we are told, so involuntary that it is only to be measured by the continuance of the same compulsion which produced it. Such universal miscarriage must needs point to some defect of principle in the proceedings adopted, and this defect we explained the other day. It has now been enlarged upon by the arguments of the deputation to which we refer, and suggestions towards a remedy have been offered in so practical a form as to elicit the acknowledgments of Lord PALMERSTON himself.

One of these suggestions recommends the obvious experiment of extending our blockade from the shores of Africa to the comparatively circumscribed coasts of Cuba itself; another very reasonably advises the removal from Cuba to Jamaica of that Court by which Slave-trade cases are tried. In a country where the whole policy of suppression is regarded with hostility it must evidently be difficult to conduct those trials successfully; besides which, there is no security for those negroes who are released from captured slave-ships, and who sink into Slavery almost as inevitably as if they had been sold into it at once. It was proposed, accordingly, that this preventive service of the Cuban coast should be intrusted to some of our gun-boats, and on this suggestion the Prime Minister appeared to look with favor. On another proposition he expressed himself with considerably greater hesitation: and yet this, we are convinced, is the point on which the successful prosecution of our policy will be found to turn.

We remarked on a recent occasion—and our opinions were echoed in the arguments employed by the deputation—that it must necessarily be difficult to extinguish a supply where no other provision is made for a strong and recognized demand. Europe requires sugar, coffee and rice. The West Indies can send us these commodities, but to do so they must have labor. Such labor was formerly provided by imports of slaves from Africa, but this traffic we have striven to abolish—successfully at some points, unsuccessfully at others. As long, however, as the supply of labor is considered identical with the supply of slaves, it is clear that the Slave-trade will struggle for existence. Planters will not let their estates go out of cultivation without an effort; but, if they could be enabled to calculate on the labor they need in any other shape, the work of suppression might be completely accomplished. As things stand, it is slave labor or nothing; and it was to the substitution of some alternative more agreeable and promising than this that the proposal of the deputation tended. In a few words, the suggestion was to this effect—that the Slave-trade should be abolished through the abolition of Slavery itself, and that Slavery should be abolished by the employment of free labor obtained from the same markets. Recognize at once the wants of tropical agriculturists, and the capacity and aptitude of the blacks; establish emigration agencies in Africa, provide suitable vessels for the passage, make voluntary contracts, see to proper facilities of return, get the services of the African on fair conditions, and so drive Slavery out of the field altogether by putting an end to the exigencies which maintain it—such was the proposal of the deputation, and, though we are not insensible to the difficulties in the way, we think it contains the germs of sound and successful policy.

Take first the interest of the planter, fairly considered. A slave costs about £40; a free black emigrant could be landed in the West Indies for about £7 10s., leaving a difference in the first price large enough to cover an infinity of minor expenses. In fact, as regards outlay there is no doubt that the balance would be in favor of free labor. At some of the seasons of urgency it is possible that a planter might value that power of operation which an absolute command over the bodies of his slaves insured, but against this consideration how many others may be set. There would be no fear of disturbances or insurrections, no smouldering fire under the surface of things, ready at any moment to explode in devastation and havoc. There would be no danger of intercepted supplies, such as the increased efficiency of the preventive squadron might at any time bring about, or the policy of the supreme Government occasion. All would be lawful, regular and certain. At present the Cuban planters must needs feel that they are under the perpetual risk of having those importations on which they depend—indeed, the proposed employment of the gunboats may perhaps go far towards producing such a result; whereas, when free emigration is once established such perils will cease. In Africa, the consequences of such a system might be beneficial in the extreme. As natives would no longer be salable it is reasonable to expect they would no longer be made, and with the motives thus removed would be removed also the principal causes of intestine war. Then, again, it would be scarcely possible to imagine proceedings better calculated for the ultimate civilization and conversion of the African race. The substitution of a lawful, safe, and well-frequented highway for the dreadful middle passage, the establishment of recognized agencies on African territory, the return of free blacks to their country after intercourse and familiarity with more civilized races and habits—all these things would tend necessarily to bring the Africans out of their isolation, and to open to missionaries and traders regions now visited only by murderers, kidnappers or adventurous travelers. From this point of view, indeed, the prospects are as encouraging as they could be.

The chief difficulty, of course, would lie in the preparation of the country which was to receive free immigrants in the place of imported slaves, for it is manifest that the very first condition at this point must be the emancipation of the slaves already possessed. Unless this condition were fulfilled the free blacks might be soon absorbed in the slave class, as happens in Cuba at the present moment. The difficulties contingent on such a measure might be considerable, but could hardly be insurmountable, and if they were once overcome a guarantee would be obtained that the free labor would never degenerate into Slavery. The point, however, to be urged with the greatest force is this,—that, whether the embarrassments attending emancipation be great or small, they must at any rate be less in the end than those which accompany the maintenance of Slavery. If the Abolitionists have not had things exactly their own way, yet neither have the slaveowners. They are living under the ban of Europe. The most powerful States in the world are enlisted in the accomplishment of a policy the object of which is to destroy the traffic on which they depend. At any moment, by the discovery of some new system of expedient, the Slave-trade may become practically an impossibility, and even where slaveholding is maintained without importation, as in America, the convulsions which such an institution generates shake the very foundations of the State. The substitution of some better system for one so precarious and so fraught with hazard as this is so obviously a dictate of common prudence that we cannot think it would be disregarded, if once the opportunity were given; and it is on this account that we attach so much weight to the proposition which has been made. Hitherto, in our Slave-trade policy we have confined our efforts to the interruption of the supply, without attending to the demand. The suggestion now made provides a remedy for the defect, and aims at the abolition of Slavery through the establishment of a better market for labor. The project has its difficulties, no doubt, but not greater than those which have met us at every point of the question, and which we have encountered with less promise of final triumph than is offered here.

Extension of British Dominion in the East—A Plea for Filibusterism.

From the London Times, June 17.

One of those little events in British history which provoke a temporary irritation among some of our neighbors has lately taken place. The Island of Perim, at the entrance of the Red Sea, has been definitively occupied by the East India Company. This spot, which, no doubt, in the hands of our countrymen is destined to become of some importance, is situated immediately in the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb, close under the cape of that name, on the Arabian coast. The roadstead is said to be excellent, and a fleet could lie with safety under the shelter of the volcanic cliffs. From the absence of vegetable matter the place, though sultry, is not unhealthy, and the occupying force need anticipate no more excessive mortality than necessarily falls to the lot of a tropical station. Such is the latest acquisition of the British Crown. No coral island in the Pacific grows with more constant accretion of particles than this empire of ours, and few are the years which are not signalized by the addition of some colony, or Asiatic State, or harbor or headland on a barbarous coast, to the dominion of Queen VICTORIA. But this course of territorial extension, though it may excite ill will and apprehension abroad, is certainly as little as possible prompted by any ambition of power or military supremacy. It is merely the natural result of the enterprise, the enlarged relations, and the constantly-increasing traffic of the English people. The occupation of Aden was made necessary by the establishment of the Overland Mail; Hong Kong was settled as a consequence of the vast trade with China; Labuan was taken because a new and interesting connection with Borneo had come into existence. In no case have we endeavored to force our supremacy or our influence on countries where we have no interest, or to occupy a spot of ground without having valid reasons to give for our honesty and good faith. In every region the soldier has been preceded by the settler, the trader, or the missionary.

Such is the principle which justifies and will render permanent the occupation of this little islet of Perim. We have not sailed into an unknown sea and hoisted the flag of a garrison where the merchantman's ensign has never waved. For nearly 20 years the Red Sea has been the great highway of passenger and postal traffic between England and her eastern empire. Every steamer, every sailing vessel, with the exception of petty native craft, belongs to a British port. Four times a month the most wonderful caravan in the world passes to or fro between this narrow sea and the Mediterranean. The inhabitants of both the African and Arabian coasts know the great steamers which with such regularity perform the passage from Bombay to Suez. The whole province of Egypt has been revivified and enriched by the intercourse, and its future prosperity depends on the fact whether it is to remain the half-way house between this country and the far east; for, whatever may have been the traffic in past years, whatever it may be at present, there can be no doubt that the future will cast both past and present into the shade. India is only now getting her roads, and canals, and railways; China is hardly opened; Australia was settled but yesterday; what these countries will be in twenty years we may judge by the experience of the past. The most rapid intercourse between them and the ruling State will probably be by the Red Sea, and it is probable that the relations between England and Egypt, with its neighboring regions, will every day become closer and more important. It is, therefore, but the duty of the Indian authorities to take such steps as will make the overland route a safe and rapid mode of transit.

To repress piracy in those seas, to keep a watch over the wild inhabitants of the coast, and to take measures for maintaining the passage constantly free and open, are matters which the Company can never neglect. No country is interested in these regions so much as ours, for no other has important dependencies and millions of subjects divided from it by half the circumference of the globe. From the nature of things the navigation of the Red Sea must ever be almost exclusively confined to England, and the authorities have therefore done wisely in occupying an island which will assist the traffic which it is about to establish.

Whether the great plan for cutting through the Isthmus of Suez will ever be more than a theme for journalists or a handle for diplomatists we cannot say; but, though heavy shipping may not be carried through the Red Sea, there can be no doubt that, with railways and a river like the Nile, an increasing quantity of light goods will yearly be sent by the Red Sea route. The development of Egypt will not improbably impart some rays of civilization to the still more benighted countries to the south. The eastern shores of Africa can hardly be said to be known to Europeans. On some a civilized traveler has never yet set foot; other spots have been visited only by some courageous pilgrim at the peril of his life. The occupation by England of a strong position at the mouth of the Red Sea can hardly be without its effect on both Mahomedan and Pagan races, and we may reasonably expect that a few years will see the beginning of a great improvement in these long-neglected places of the earth, which will furnish, we hope, a new field for the enterprise of Europe. On the whole, we are inclined to look on this last little piece of annoxation as highly advantageous, and as having been effected with satisfactory promptitude. It is but a poor affectation for a nation like ours, which is carrying on the intercourse of the whole world, to refrain from occupying an eligible position, merely because a groundless jealousy may be awakened among neighbors who, in the end, will benefit by the act as well as ourselves. The unceasing increase of our trade, our conquests, and our Colonies, in the far East, have caused those ancient countries which Asia and Africa join to become once more of interest to mankind. Through them lies the great highroad of the Eastern Hemisphere, and every year must increase their importance, and the tendency of commercial enterprise to look for stations and establishments within their limits. In fact, we are interested in Egypt, Syria, and the Red Sea, pretty much as our American friends are interested in Nicaragua and Panama. When we hear of American restlessness and captiousness with regard to the right of transit, it is as well to remember that the matter is one of the last importance to them; that the Isthmus practically divides one part of their country from another; and that a stoppage of the communication would cut off New-York from San Francisco, and the National Mint from the metal which supplies it. Pretty much the same is the case with us as regards the overland route. The Isthmus of Suez and the Red Sea lie between the citizens of London and the citizens of Melbourne, between Leadenhall-street and Calcutta, between the Admiralty and the China fleet, between the home producers and the greatest markets which they have established on the globe. So far from wondering that the Government has determined on the occupation of a little islet on the Arabian coast, we are not first sight rather astonished that it should have so long and so consistently abstained from all political action on Egypt itself. But in this, as in other instances, private energy makes up for public moderation. Without any pretence of influence at Cairo, without any attempt to sway the councils of the Pasha or to control his conduct, this country has by the enterprise of a few private citizens obtained all the advantages which the most unbounded supremacy could give. A free passage through the country, and a railway which should make the passage rapid as well as free, were all we desired, and these we have obtained.

Smith O'Brien on Irish Politics.

A public dinner at Rathkeale to Archdeacon FITZGERALD, an extremely aged member of the Young Ireland party, has afforded an opportunity to Mr. SMITH O'BRIEN for laying before his countrymen an exposition of his views upon Irish affairs and particularly tenant right. In a letter apologizing for his absence at the Rathkeale festivities Mr. O'BRIEN thus writes:

"Governed by considerations that were founded upon my past experience of Irish agitation, I formerly resolved before I returned to Ireland that I would not join any political associations or attend any political meetings, and that I would limit my interference in Irish politics to the occasional expression of my own individual opinion. Acting upon this determination, which I have as yet found no reason to abrogate, I have declined attendance at several political meetings to which I have been invited. Now, if I were to depart from this rule in the case of the Rathkeale dinner I should find it difficult to refuse similar invitations on future occasions. I have no desire, however, to conceal my opinions on the present state of public affairs, or to disavow my sympathy with the objects of your meeting. I have already, since my return from exile, taken occasion to declare that I am more than ever convinced that Ireland requires a national Legislature and a national Executive to give this country full advantage of the resources which it possesses. In the absence of such a domestic Government it seems to me that the national interests of Ireland can be best protected by sending to the British Parliament a body of members who shall hold themselves entirely independent of all English parties, and avail themselves of every opportunity that may present itself in the conflict of rival factions to secure for Ireland the enactment of useful measures and the attainment of our national rights. Among the measures which are at present considered most urgent by the public opinion of this country is the Bill for securing to tenants, in case of eviction, compensation for profitable improvements, which was prepared many years ago by Mr. SHARMAN CRAWFORD, and I quite concur in the propriety of requiring that this measure shall be enacted without further delay. It is to be regretted, indeed, that the number of members returned at the late election on the principle of 'Independent Opposition' was not so great as might have been expected, but we have at least the satisfaction of knowing that many of those members who have proved faithless to the pledges formerly made by them in favor of tenant right have been excluded from Parliament, and also that nearly all the candidates who have been returned for popular constituencies have promised their advocacy of the first claims of the tenantry of Ireland. If the declarations made by Irish gentlemen at the hustings be not wholly worthless, a large majority of the Irish members are bound by the sacred obligations of public and private honor to apply themselves with sincerity and earnestness to the accomplishment of this object. Two additional considerations might lend us to form a well-grounded hope that this question will be speedily adjusted if any reliance could be placed upon the disposition of the British Parliament to legislate for Ireland upon wise and just principles. The first is that several of the clauses of former bills which were considered objectionable to landlords have been withdrawn. The second is that Lord PALMERSTON's Government can no longer plead inability to give effect to a principle which, in profession at least, they affect to approve; for it is the boast of the supporters of the present Government that the recent elections have greatly increased the Parliamentary strength of the party by which Lord PALMERSTON's Administration is upheld. For my own part, I expect little good for Ireland from the legislation of a British Parliament; but the earnest and persevering manifestation of Irish opinion may have some influence upon British statesmen, and in this point of view the demonstration which is about to be made at Rathkeale may be productive of advantage."

Funeral of Douglas Jerrold.

From the London Daily News, June 16.

Yesterday the mortal remains of Douglas Jerrold were committed to the earth, in Norwood Cemetery, in presence of a large concourse of gentlemen known to literature and art, who had come together to indulge a generous sentiment at the grave of an honored friend. Among others who were present we observed: Mr. Serle, Mr. Frank Stone, Mr. George Cruikshank, Mr. Baylis Bernard, Mr. Buckstone, Mr. Westland Marston, Mr. Tom Taylor, Mr. Herauld, Mr. Augustus Egg, Mr. Bradbury, Mr. Evans, Mr. John Leech, Mr. Tenniel, Mr. Peter Cunningham, Mr. G. A. Sala, Mr. James Hannay, Mr. B. Webster, Mr. Andrews, Mr. Albert Smith, Mr. Kenny Meadows, Mr. Shirley Brooks, Mr. Robert Bell, and Mr. George Hodder.

The pall-bearers were Mr. Charles Dickens, Mr. Hepworth Dixon, Mr. Thackeray, Mr. Horace Mayhew, Mr. Charles Knight, Mr. Mark Lemon, Mr. Monckton Milnes, M. P., and Mr. Bradbury; whilst the gentlemen who occupied the mourning coaches were Mr. Douglas Jerrold's eldest and youngest sons—W. Blanchard Jerrold and Thomas Jerrold—Mr. Henry Mayhew, Mr. Copelund (brother-in-law of Mr. Jerrold,) and the three medical men, Dr. Wright, Dr. Quain and Mr. Cleveland, who attended the deceased in his last illness. To many persons it will be interesting to know that the grave of Douglas Jerrold is immediately opposite to that of his very dear friend Lamau Blanchard.

We regret to learn that the constant and various demands upon the late Mr. JERROLD prevented him from making proper provision for those he has left behind him. A number of his most intimate friends have accordingly formed themselves into a committee for the purpose of organizing a series of theatrical performances, &c., the proceeds of which to be devoted to the benefit of the family. Everybody hitherto applied to has responded most readily to the call, and the following programme has been determined upon:

On Saturday, June 27, a musical festival will take place, at which Madame Novello, Mr. and Mrs. T. German Reed, Mr. F. Robson, Miss Dolby, Mr. Albert Smith, Miss Mary Keeley, Mr. Sims Reeves, and many other distinguished artists will assist.

On Tuesday, June 30, Mr. Charles Dickens will read his "Christmas Carol," in St. Martin's Hall.

On Tuesday, July 7, Mr. W. H. Russell will deliver his "Personal Narrative of the late Crimean War," in St. Martin's Hall.

On Saturday, July 11, will be represented at the Gallery of Illustration, Regent-street, Mr. Wilkie Collins' new romantic drama in three acts, "The Frozen Deep," performed by the company of ladies and gentlemen who originally represented it in private, with the original scenery by Mr. Stanfield, R. A., and Mr. Telbin, and the original music, under the direction of Mr. Francesco Berger. The whole under the management of Mr. Charles Dickens. To conclude with a farce.

On Wednesday, July 15, will be represented at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, the late Mr. Douglas Jerrold's comedy, in three acts, "The Housekeeper." To conclude with the late Douglas Jerrold's drama, "The Prisoner of War," represented by the company of the theatre, in conjunction with Mr. and Mrs. Keeley, Mr. Benjamin Webster, and Mr. Phelps.

On Wednesday, July 22, Mr. W. M. Thackeray will deliver a lecture on "Week-day Preachers," in St. Martin's Hall.

From Galignani's Messenger.

A terrible catastrophe occurred at Leghorn on the 5th. Upwards of three thousand persons were assembled in the theatre degli Aggiotti, to witness the representation of the taking of Sebastopol, when suddenly one of the rockets let off to imitate the bombardment set fire to the side scenes. A sudden panic seized the public; the people in the pit rushed to the doors, and many of those who were in the boxes and galleries attempted to save themselves by jumping into the pit. The carbineers vainly attempted to stem the current by assuring the people that there was sufficient time for all to go out quietly; many, being frightened out of their senses, threw themselves out of the windows, although the British Consul, Mr. MACBEAN, had caused ladders to be placed in some of them. This disaster is the more to be regretted that there was really no occasion for such a panic, the fire being got under almost immediately afterwards, before it had time to spread. The Monitore Toscano states that 43 persons were killed, and 143 wounded. On hearing what had occurred, the Grand Duke immediately set out for Leghorn, and visited those that had been carried to the hospitals.

SHAKESPEARE'S FAMILY.—The London Times contains the following letter from WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR:

I have been reading in HOWITT'S Haunts and Homes of British Poets a statement that some of SHAKESPEARE'S family are living in obscurity and destitution. God forbid it should continue so! * * * * I know not whether I have said it any where, but I have often thought it, that all the poetry that has existed, from the song of the angels at the Creation down to the present hour, is not worth his and MILTON'S; nor has there been any philosophy so applicable, so generous, or so sound. He and DEFOE have afforded the most delight to their native land. Some little was done for the descendant of DEFOE; shall nothing be done for the descendant of SHAKESPEARE? Pardon, Sir, my importunity. You have once made my voice heard; raise yours above it now, in a cause more noble still.

During the short term of my life I will subscribe £5 yearly to avert a national disgrace. If, as Mr. HOWITT says, every man who has been delighted by SHAKESPEARE will give only one penny, once for all, it will be done.

I am, Sir, &c.,

BRAZIL.

OPENING OF THE LEGISLATURE—THE EMPEROR'S SPEECH—THE NEW MINISTRY—THE NEW TARIFF—DISAPPEARANCE OF YELLOW FEVER—BUSINESS AND TRADE.

By way of England we have advices from Rio de Janeiro to May 16, Bahia May 19, and Pernambuco May 20.

The new Brazilian Legislature was opened on Sunday, May 3, by the Emperor. In the Imperial speech His Majesty congratulates the Chambers on the tranquillity which reigns throughout the empire, as well as the perfect cordiality which is reciprocated between Brazil and all foreign States. His Majesty says that his Government have applied the means placed at their disposal last session for colonization purposes, and urges the necessity of securing civil and religious freedom for all classes of foreigners. The Imperial speech also alludes to the extraordinary prices of articles of food, and the consequent sufferings of the poorer classes, and urges the Chambers to act with energy in meeting this scarcity; adding that the new tariff will not in itself be sufficient to meet the case. His Majesty says that the rigor with which the recent attempts at introducing slaves at Serinhaem and St. Matheus were repressed, must have disheartened the adventurers who sought to realize these criminal undertakings, and concludes by saying, that the satisfactory state of the public revenue enables him to indulge the hope that the deficit which was expected to accrue from the reduction in import duties will not arise, and that it would be, therefore, possible either to remove the two per cent. extra export duty, which was imposed with the view of making good the expected deficit, or to employ the amount to the special advantage of agriculture.

Conselheiro SOUZA FRANCO, (Senator,) Minister of Finance.

JERONYMO FRANCISCO COELHO, (deputy,) Minister of War.

JOSE ANTONIO SARAIVA, (deputy,) Minister of Marine.

A letter from Rio de Janeiro, dated May 15, says:

"The new tariff, which was alluded to in the imperial speech, was not made public until the 25th of last month, although it is to come into operation on the 1st of July next. It received the Imperial sign manual on the 28th March, and therefore might have been published nearly a month earlier; at all events, in time for the April packet. Probably, if the gentlemen at the heads of departments here knew a little more about commerce, they would see the importance to merchants of a prompt announcement of such important changes. Letters cannot be interchanged with England, Germany, France, or the United States, in less than three months; yet the alterations are to take place in a little over two months; in fact, the new tariff will be in operation a fortnight after intelligence of its existence can be received in Europe. The inevitable consequences of this precipitate change will be very serious losses to many merchants; but it is not improbable that it may be postponed for a few months, or abandoned altogether, from the opposition which has been raised against it by the merchants. An influential meeting has been held at the British consulate, to protest against the injustice of so short a notice; and no doubt the English Minister will use his influence with the Imperial Government to obtain a reasonable postponement. The German merchants have also signed a protest against its being carried into operation at the time named in the decree. The document itself, although its general tendency is towards a reduction of duties, some of which are of very great importance, has met with a very ungracious reception. The Diario do Rio de Janeiro is very severe and very just in its condemnation; indeed, I question if a more clumsy, unintelligible, troublesome document ever appeared in the form of a commercial tariff than the mighty volume which has just made its unwelcome appearance here.

Up to the last moment I have not been able to ascertain if the Government had postponed the new tariff. There is no doubt, however, that they will do so; indeed, it is more than probable that it will be rejected in the Chambers, as not being liberal enough."

The coffee crop would be the largest ever known, and would probably reach 2,400,000 bags. In consequence of the Bank of Brazil having raised the rate of discount to 9 per cent., the money market was tight. Sales of coffee during the fortnight amounted to 220,000 bags. Movement in prices was upwards. Provisions were enormously high. Freights, in consequence, had declined 60c. to 70c. to the United States.

RIVER PLATE PROVINCES.

Advices from Buenos Ayres are to the 5th of May.

"ALSINA, 35; PENA, 18; LLAVALLOL, 7. ALSINA had declined his nomination, and tendered his renunciation to the General Assembly, on the ground of personal opposition to him by some of the Assembly. His renunciation was negatived by 44 to 11, and his acceptance looked upon as certain. Dr. ALSINA, President of the Senate, was the candidate of the Ultra-Liberal party, and the Opposition votes were divided between Don JUAN BAPTISTA PENA, and Senor LLAVALLOL, and their grand Indian invasion was anticipated. The bank of Buenos Ayres had raised the interest on deposits ¾ per cent. for gold, and 1 per cent. for paper per month; and charged 1 per cent. and 1¼ per cent. respectively for discounts. The rates for all River Plate produce were high.

The revolution in the Rosario had been put down by the Governor of Santa Fe, and a temporary arrangement come to with Urquiza.

At Montvideo on the 6th ult., business remained at a stand-still. The fever which broke out in the beginning of March had made great ravages. On the 5th of May no new cases having occurred, it was hoped to have subsided. The total number of deaths was estimated at between 1,400 and 1,600. Its origin was attributed to purely local causes, and vigorous sanitary measures were being taken to prevent its recurrence. In the country not a single case had occurred.

The Virginia Immigration—Experiences of a Settler.

VIRGINIA, Monday, June 15, 1857.

Having watched the progress of the enterprise in which Mr. ELI THAYER has made himself popular for some months, and knowing a good deal of the resources and dependencies of our State, I desire to present a few facts to you for perusal, and, if you see fit, for publication.

First, I was reared on the borders of New-York State, and there lived for 25 years. A trip for recreation through Virginia satisfied me that the customs and institutions of that State made it particularly desirable for working or enterprising men, whether with capital or without it. The system of labor which prevails here to a considerable extent has operated to prevent the success of manufactures, because manufactures do not progress where the laborer has nothing to stimulate him to seek profitable results from his labor.

The natural resources of Virginia have been much written of, but how well they are understood or investigated may be decided by watching the tide of emigration from the populous States of the Union. Virginia finds in the Federal Government as good a protector for her chivalric sons, that the Government and not the soil or mineral resources is supposed to be the producer of wealth to the unfortunate F. F. V's. who have more acres of land than bushels of grain.

The soil in the Valley of Virginia is principally lime-stone, and the farms many of them in good condition.

Labor is so high or inefficient here that it is not found profitable to farm in the way the Virginians have been accustomed to do it, consequently many thousands have sought homes or business in the newly settled Western States, where they are stimulated for the time being to do as people from the Eastern States or North teach them. The result of this emigration is to depreciate lands, and to call attention from enterprises of every sort here to the reckless speculations or ventures of Western operators. From every town the well-to-do are sending out all the funds they can raise to be invested in land speculations, or loaned at 10, 15, or perhaps 30 per cent. annual interest, and forgetting that a revolution of the commercial wheel may and must crush any and all whose dependence for the return of their capital is on the success of those who pay such rates of interest. Already the loss of the circulating medium has caused the country to suffer greatly, and the consequences are becoming plainer daily in the frequency of Sheriff's writs, and especially in the immense quantities of land which are offered for sale to avoid being sold without the favor of a consultation with the nominal proprietor. Water powers is to be had here without limit. To live well here will not cost more than 66 per cent. of one's necessary expenses in Orange or Broome counties, New-York. Provisions are usually sold here at New-York prices, less carriage or freight. The Winters are two months shorter, or rather we escape the weather of a New-York January and February. We have more time to plant and sow, less time to feed stock—which, by the way, thrive as well here as in any part of the world—less fuel to provide—and withal, a much plainer style of living than usually pervades Northern towns.

For any persons seeking country homes, we have the most delightful atmosphere and purest mountain springs, with certainly and undisputably more fine landscape views and pleasant residences than any country of the same population.

Sulphur Springs abound in this immediate region—the far-famed Capon Springs being some 12 miles distant from the Shenandosh River, while Warren Springs at the mouth of the Fort, and Burners Springs in the Fort, Orkney Springs a few miles up the valley, and many others, offer successful attractions to thousands of pleasure-goers from June 15 to October.

But a more important attraction than Sulphur Springs is the vast quantities of iron produced in this valley, and which seeks a market in the Northern States, and being manufactured again seeks a market in the valley of Virginia.

Our plows, shovels, hoes, axes, wagons or carriages, all our machinery that is well made, and a great deal that is heavy made, come from the North, though we have the materials and the power to manufacture all of it here at a less cost than it can possibly be done in the North.

Coal is found within 20 miles of the iron, and wood is very cheap—$1 50 to $2 25 per cord. We have railroad communication with Alexandria and Washington daily, with good turnpike roads to all parts of the country.

As regards the objectionable system of labor here, it seems to be the impression of thinking men here that ten years will virtually abolish Slavery in Virginia; and it is conceded on all hands that the white laborer, as practiced on the lines of railroads, is the cheapest as well as most desirable for the country of any yet "discovered."

We want capitalists to build factories and men to work in them. We want tanners to use our oak bark, and mechanics to use our oak and pine timber. We want farmers to buy land and we want hands to work faithfully on the land. An exemplar of successful free labor will do more toward liberating the slaves, or at least toward liberating Virginia, than all the speeches made on the subject between Mason & Dixon's line and Sir JOHN FRANKLIN.

Yours, truly, MASTON.

Wooden Screw-Steamers.

As a shipbuilder, I am surprised to read in the TIMES such paragraphs as the following:

"It is not improbable that the ingenuity of our shipbuilders may devise means in the construction of wooden hulls to secure all the strength and solidity necessary to endure propulsion by the screw." The writer either knows that there are hundreds of wooden vessels in the United States propelled by the instrumentality of the "screw," or he does not know it. If the former, will he be pleased to state in what manner these vessels have failed to answer the purposes of their construction, and if the latter, why he has called in question the "ingenuity" of builders of wooden ships? I do not hesitate to express the opinion that there are to-day more successful wooden than iron screw-steamers in the fleets of the world, while an uninformed reader is led to suppose from the article of your correspondent that such an anomaly as a screw-steamer built of wood does not exist! If screw-steamers are wanted by our merchants to enter the lists of competition with British vessels built of iron, let first-class talent be employed in their model and design, contract at fair prices with responsible builders, and America will show the world that there is still some virtue remaining in wood. Much of the iron of which British screw-steamers are manufactured is of very poor quality. The greater cost of American iron is mainly due to its superiority.

If the TIMES would do a favor for the shipping interests of the United States, let it give place to a discussion of the absurd, fraudulent, and ruinous system of tonnage admeasurement which cramps the forms of our large ships into improper dimensions, by which they are made ballast-carrying warehouses. Why don't England try competition with our coasting vessels? Because she cannot equal their models, nor could she equal the models of our ships if our merchants could afford marine architects a free hand in their design. The present is a most auspicious time for considering reforms in modeling, constructing and propelling ships for profitable enterprise.

Suicides.

A stranger, who registered his name as DANIEL DRAYTON from Philadelphia, committed suicide at the Mansion House, in New-Bedford, on Wednesday, by taking laudanum. His room was locked, and was forced open, when he was found lying on the floor with the vial on the table empty. He had also attempted to destroy himself by severing the arteries near the ankle in both legs, and a good deal of blood was found in a basin near. He had no baggage, and nothing whatever to identify him was found on his person.

J. T. BLANCHARD, who has been connected with the Post Office at Limerick, Me., was found dead in his room on Wednesday morning, badly cut with a razor, but not sufficiently to cause his death, and it is supposed that he took poison. He left letters stating that he had got into trouble, and that it would all be known shortly. Mr. BLANCHARD was a gentleman of respectable connections, and well educated.

New-York Daily Times.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Cunard steamship Niagara, with news to the 20th—three days later—arrived at Halifax last night, but her news reaches us too late to admit of comment.

We publish this morning some additional intelligence of interest derived from our European files by the City of Baltimore and North Star, whose arrival at this port we announced in yesterday's impression. Our London dates extend to the 17th of June. The Niagara was being rapidly fitted for her portion of the cable, and, it was expected, would be ready to proceed to Liverpool to ship it by the 22d. Two articles, which we print elsewhere, from the London Times, will attract attention: one is on the Cuban Slave-trade, and recommends the abolition of Slavery and the introduction of an apprentice system as the only preventive; the other is a plea of justification for the recent fillibusterism of the East India Company in the Red Sea.

By way of England we have advices from Rio Janeiro to the 15th of May. The new Brazilian Chambers were opened on the 3d. In his speech from the throne the Emperor congratulates himself upon the extinction of the Slave-trade. An application had been made by the merchants of Rio to suspend the operation of the new tariff, so that it would not act upon shipments already made. It is generally believed that this tariff will be rejected in the Chambers, as not being liberal enough. The yellow fever had disappeared from Rio and Pernambuco.

Dates from Buenos Ayres are to the 6th, and from Montevideo to the 5th of May. The elections occupied public attention in the former place. In Montevideo the fever had made great ravages, the deaths being estimated at between 1,400 and 1,600. No new cases having occurred on the 5th of May, it was hoped that the fever had subsided.

By the arrival of the Quaker City at this port, yesterday, we receive later news from Havana. The Spanish fleet, destined to operate against Mexico in the approaching war, had arrived at Havana. SANTA ANA, whose services, it is said, will be accepted by the Spanish Government, had not yet made his appearance. The Gaceta denies that Gen. CONCHA has been implicated in the slave-trade, as charged against him by the Madrid correspondent of the London Times.

The Montreal Daily Argus of yesterday morning reached us late last night, bringing tolerably full particulars of the late terrible calamity on the St. Lawrence River, together with as accurate a list of the passengers on board the ill-fated steamer as could be procured, which will be found in our columns this morning. From the account published by the Argus we learn a fact not mentioned in our telegraphic accounts—that the steamer ran upon a rock, which prevented her running ashore, towards which she was headed. Among those lost was Hon. S. C. PHILLIPS, of Salem, Mass. The announcement of his death created the most profound grief among his fellow-citizens. Some few additional particulars of the calamity will also be found reported telegraphically.

The Venezuelan Consul at Philadelphia has written a note to the Editor of the Evening Journal of that City, denying that the United States Minister at Caracca had left on account of not being able to settle a claim for indemnity against Venezuela. He alleges that the Minister leaves with the consent of Government on a visit to his family in Washington.

A law was passed by the Legislature last session, to take effect July 1, by which the three days of grace, which by the law merchants allowed the payee of a note payable at sight or on a given day after sight, are abolished. Hereafter every note drawn payable within this State will become due at the time specified upon its face.

The New-Hampshire Legislature adjourned on Saturday, after having been in session twenty-five days.

The Board of Aldermen last evening passed a preamble and resolutions giving the Corporation control of the effects of the office of Street-Commissioner, the effect of which will be, in case the Court decides in favor of CONOVER, to render a new suit necessary before he can occupy the office.

An important communication was sent to the Common Council last night, by Comptroller FLAGG, recommending a new Bureau of Surveyors, to act as a check on the fraudulent practices of the Street Commissioner's Office. Some of the frauds committed by contractors under the administration of the late Street Commissioner, TAYLOR, are fully exposed in Mr. FLAGG's communication.

The Board of Supervisors yesterday adopted a resolution making the boundaries of the Assembly Districts the same as the Aldermen.

The new Commissioners made a number of appointments yesterday, and removed a number of Second Ward men—being all that were left of the "insubordinates." The Mayor made several Police appointments yesterday, but this "fountain head of all knowledge concerning matters of this sort" was dry to the Reporters who went seeking truth as to the names of the appointees.

At the meeting of the Commissioners of Excise, yesterday, a document of extraordinary interest was read from the wife of an inebriate. Any quantity of licenses were granted, and the session was one of unusual length.

Capt. MCKINNEY, of the Thirteenth Ward, is still in a very critical condition, from the injuries inflicted upon him on Sunday, by a mob in Avenue C. The other policemen who were injured at the same time are doing well.

In the four days ending Saturday, June 27, 14,776 loads of dirt were removed from the Wards where the City Inspector's forces were at work. Their removal of this large amount of filth has materially improved the appearance of the streets, but the accumulation is so great that—with the small number of carts to be procured—it will be some time longer before the City is thoroughly clean. The work, however, is slowly going on.

Yesterday, Mr. FIELD presented his reply in the Street Commissioner's case. This closes the argument. The Court announced that the decision would probably not be rendered until Wednesday, the 8th of July. We give Mr. FIELD's argument in full.

Messrs. CUTTING, EVARTS and LORD, in accordance with a request of the Board of Underwriters, have given them their written opinion concerning the validity of the bill reëstablishing the office of Port Warden in the City of New-York. They deny the constitutionality of the enactment.

The remnant of WALKER's army, brought by the Wabash, was landed yesterday, and the sick removed to the City and Bellevue Hospitals. The vessel herself is to undergo a thorough cleansing previous to her departure on another voyage. The sentiments of WALKER's soldiers, as far as represented by those who have thus been landed in our midst, are by no means flattering to the Fillibuster Chief, nor have the ladies who came passengers on board the vessel—mostly the wives of officers—an opinion of his services which he would consider at all complimentary. The majority of these new arrivals are without friends and money, and are anxiously waiting to see if the friends of WALKER and Nicaragua will do anything to assist them.

At the anniversary of the Encleian Society of the New-York University, last evening, Rev. WM. F. MORGAN delivered an oration on "The Old and the New." PARK BENJAMIN, Esq., was prevented from delivering the Poem which he had prepared for the occasion by a death in his family.

The "Reform" Democratic General Committee organized last evening at Tammany Hall, by the election of the following permanent officers: Chairman—EDWARD COOPER. Treasurer—ISAAC BELL, JR. Secretaries—BENJAMIN S. HART, RICHARD G. WALMSLEY. The proceedings were harmonious.

Kansas.

The Free-State settlers of Kansas have been very greatly and very grievously wronged. They have been both injured and insulted. They have been treated as no free-born citizens of the United States were ever before treated by their fellow-countrymen. Their territory has been invaded; their dearest rights have been denied to them; their most sacred instincts have been outraged. A dark and dreadful Past lies behind them. An uncertain Present surrounds them. It is but natural, therefore, that they should distrust the promises of the Future. It is but natural that for them to bid bygones be bygones should be a bitter and a difficult task.

All justice must be done to them. Every allowance must be made for men smarting under such recollections as burn and sting in their memories. It is an easy thing for men whose prerogatives of manhood and of citizenship have never been questioned to pronounce upon the obstinacy and violence of the settlers in Kansas. It would not be quite so easy, we hope, for the same men to control their own wrath, and to subdue their own desire of vengeance in the like circumstances.

But in every circumstance of life it is necessary for men to consult their actual position, and to ascertain their actual intentions, if they would really achieve any object whatever.

Now what do the settlers of Kansas want? Angry and sore as they may be, they distinctly disclaim any intention of violent revenge upon their invaders. They profess the most pacific purposes. They neither wish nor mean to provoke civil war. They are content to overlook the past, which they can never forget, and which they, perhaps, ought not to be asked now to forgive. They seek only a practical assurance that for the present and the future they shall be protected in the enjoyment of their lawful rights, and of their intrinsic privileges. They propose to secure this object, the highest and holiest object at which any political organization can aim, by keeping up a system of government, a legislature and a judiciary external to the regular appointments of the National Administration. They do this in the face of the fact, that the President, of whose behavior in regard to them they had so much reason to complain, has been succeeded in his office by a Chief Magistrate whose intentions, if they are to be inferred from his acts, are widely different from those of his predecessor—that the Territorial Governors who had made matters in Kansas constantly worse by their intrigues with the worst enemies of the people of Kansas, have been replaced by a Governor whose words and whose deeds have satisfied the most high-spirited of the friends of Kansas, and that the exigencies of party consistency, as well as the decencies of official life, compel the National Government to recognize as binding upon the people of Kansas the acts of a past Legislature, in itself, very possibly, to the last degree offensive, but certainly accepted as a Legislature by the Congress of the United States. Is this conduct of the Free-State men of Kansas, either commendable in itself or likely to conduce to the good of the Territory itself and of the nation? We think not. We are as little disposed as anybody can be, to counsel tameness under injury, or acquiescence in injustice. But we have very little patience with aimless and undecided obstinacy. For obstinacy without decision, unintelligent obstinacy, is the attribute, not of strength, but of weakness. And the country cannot afford to see the stand for immutable rights in Kansas deserted by those who should hold it, in favor of a partisan stand for measures. The end of the Kansas controversy is certainly the establishment of the right of self-government in the people of Kansas. And until the Free-State leaders of Kansas have shown some better reason than has yet been given to the world, for believing that this end can be attained by perseverance in the play of the "Topeka Legislature," they must expect to be regarded by the mass of intelligent Northern men as impracticable persons, who are risking their own peace, and the peace of the country, upon an abstraction.

What right, we ask, have the free settlers of Kansas to distrust Governor WALKER, and to impede his efforts for the restoration of public tranquillity? He has done nothing, and said nothing which can justify any doubt of the integrity of his purposes in Kansas. By his moderation, his evident impartiality, and his avoidance of vexatious points, he has gradually conciliated to himself the good will of many of his bitterest opponents. He represents the National Administration as at present conducted. The traits which we applaud in his management of Kansas politics are the reflection of Mr. BUCHANAN's policy. They have provoked, and are provoking, the fiercest animadversion from an extreme section of the Southern Democracy who fancy that the whole world was made for them, and that the policy they desire to see adopted is the ordination of Heaven for the ruling of mankind. And we hold that these friends of Liberty in and out of Kansas, who refuse to strengthen the just and moderate government of the Administration in that Territory, however good their intentions may be, are more likely to ruin than to advance the cause which they have at heart.

FRAUDS IN CONTRACTS.—We do not believe that our City will always be given up to the merciless depredators who have so long defrauded us of our rights, burdened us with taxes, and rendered the very name of a Metropolitan office-holder a byword and a reproach. Step by step we shall advance towards a better condition of things, and the very bottom of misrule having been reached, it is inevitable that hereafter we should begin to ascend. The very baseness of our Municipal servants will be the means of our improvement, and we may yet become as renowned for good government as we have been for bad. A communication from Comptroller FLAGG to the Common Council, which we publish in another column, exhibits some of the fraudulent practices which have been common in the Street Commissioner's Department. We have, heretofore, exposed some of these villainous transactions in our columns; but the cases given by the Comptroller will serve to call attention afresh to the gross malpractices of the Department. Mr. FLAGG makes an excellent recommendation, which, if adopted, will have the effect to check such gross frauds hereafter. He recommends the creation of a new bureau of surveying for the purpose of examining all contracts and seeing that they are strictly fulfilled before they are paid for. It is almost too much to expect that the present Common Council will act upon the Comptroller's recommendation, just as the party in power have got possession of the Street Department; but, if they do not, they must be content to rest under the imputation of a design to aid in defrauding the public.

A Story With a Moral.

In the year 1848 all the world were crazed with dreams of a sudden Summer of freedom and glory and greatness. Then France shook off the incubus of lies which for eighteen years had swayed her destinies; then Hungary "stamped her strong foot, and swore she would be free!" then Italy, from the Alps to the African Sea, raised again her ancient cry: "Away with the barbarians!" then, from the lesser Duchies of the Rhine to the greater Duchies of the Baltic, the whole Teutonic people drew the sword. The year began with a Carnival of hope. Great Britain herself, the freest and the happiest of the States of Europe, was shaken for a moment by the throes of Chartism and the madness of Ireland.

We, in America, professing ourselves to be the vanguard of humanity, and the crusaders of Liberty, naturally gave utterance to no small jubilation, in the course of this wonderful year 1848. We laughed ourselves into tears over the pitiable flight of King LOUIS PHILIPPE. We hailed the rebels of Paris as brothers, and we applauded to the echo every indication given, by the Pope, of a disposition to upset the anti-democratic systems of Italian government, at whatever cost of vested interests and established rights.

The dream gradually faded away. The reaction came. From east and west the fugitives of freedom crowded to the shores of England and America, for refuge from the vengeance of their restored oppressors. To all we opened our sympathizing arms. Though they came to us branded with the brand of treason, and hunted by the officers of the law, we did not hesitate to receive them. So anxious were we to testify our love of Freedom and of its votaries that we made no distinctions in the welcome which we extended to all. The heroes of the bloody fields of Hungary were not more warmly hailed by us than the heroes of the bloodless fields of Ireland. All were martyrs alike—without question of the wisdom—with small question, indeed, of the merits of the cause in which they had striven and suffered. Was this wrong—was this foolish? We cannot so pronounce it. If the love of Liberty be a reality in any man's heart, it is not possible that he should be indifferent to any man who has lived and endured in this world for that love's sake. The follies of the fanatics of 1848 may well be forgiven and forgotten, in the recollection of the beauty and splendor of the vision which turned their brains.

But, in the year 1848, there were produced certain native American lunatics of liberty who commanded less of our admiration and of our pity than their European brethren. For them no shouting crowds assembled in our streets, no flags were waved, no proud processions formed. They found in America what their European prototypes had found in Europe—public scorn for a guerdon and the prison walls for a home.

One of these was DANIEL DRAYTON, of Philadelphia, a merchant-captain trading between that port and the National Capital. This man being seized with the fever of freedom undertook, in this eventful year, 1848, to carry away seventy human beings from perpetual bondage in Washington to liberty in Pennsylvania. He was arrested, tried for his crime, and sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment. After four years of incarceration he was pardoned by President FILLMORE, and so sent out upon the world to starve, in company with his misguided European brethren. He has starved, and at last growing weary of starvation he has taken leave of the United States and of mankind. On Wednesday last he was in New-Bedford, Mass., where he spoke with a gentleman, and told him he had come there to die, and asked only to be decently buried. That night he committed suicide. And so ended a cisatlantic story of 1848, whereof the moral is worth extracting by our readers at the South as well as at the North. Whatever extremists of either section may think or say, we cannot believe that any reasonable American citizen, be he slaveholder of Carolina or Republican of New-York, can reflect upon such a history as this without a thrilling sense that it bears witness to a radical inconsistency and profound defect in our actual system, social and political, which demands our immediate, our most earnest, our gravest, and our calmest attention.

The Great Reform Among Seamen.

It has not often happened that an attempt to bring about a radical reform among any class of men has been commenced under more favorable auspices than the proposed change in the system of shipping merchant seamen, which was set on foot by the New-York Chamber of Commerce. The old practice, which has been followed for centuries, of giving advance wages to seamen, is to be abandoned on the 1st of July, and there is every promise of its being successfully carried out, although there will, we presume, be a violent endeavor to prevent it by those who have so long profited by the old ruinous system. Fortunately for the merchants who have instituted the reform, sailors are abundant, and the few ships going to sea are easily manned, and the best seamen will be the most likely to accept of the new system of paying no advance wages. Seamen, like other laborers, will be compelled to earn their wages before receiving them; and, as they will be paid nothing if they abandon the ship before the termination of the voyage, desertions will be very rare hereafter, except in those extreme cases where the cruelty of officers compels the crew to desert. The sole objection to the new system is, that it will put the sailor more in the power of the officer than ever before; and a cruel or an avaricious master might be tempted to ill-treat his crew to compel them to leave in a foreign port. There have been many terrible stories told of the inhuman treatment of sailors by the officers of our merchant ships; but many of these stories have, no doubt, been greatly exaggerated, and, in many cases, the ill conduct of the crew has provoked ill treatment from the officers. As the safety of a ship depends altogether upon the conduct of the crew, we do not believe in the disposition of an officer to destroy the very means on which he relies for self-preservation. There are cases, beyond a question, where a brutal and tyrannical master maltreats his crew, from mere wantonness to gratify a cruel disposition. But such cases are extremely rare. A good crew will generally find good officers.

In the sharp competition now going on between the two great maritime nations of the earth, England and America, for the carrying business, a trifling matter may give the triumph to one side or the other; and the ships that can obtain the best crews will have no small advantage over their less fortunate rivals. The attempted reform in the manner of shipping seamen will doubtless have a very marked influence on the character of that important class of laborers, and lead to results which the originators of the plan did not anticipate. In order that it should be carried out properly, it must be generally adopted in all our seaports. Boston has already seconded the movement by our merchants, and other ports will, as a matter of course, soon follow. But to make the reform perfect, the system should be also adopted by our Navy; for, if sailors can obtain advance pay by entering on board our national ships, they will give them the preference over merchant-vessels. The Chamber of Commerce should petition the Secretary of the Navy to assist them by cooperating with them in the new reform.

Politics must ever be the great and absorbing pursuit of the highest order of intellect in a free country; as the pursuit of wealth must be the great object of the majority of the people; and the arts which do not, in some way, assist the votaries of these two great pursuits must necessarily be neglected. There has never been an instance before of so powerful and prosperous a people who have devoted themselves so little to the higher branches of art, as the people of the United States. Jealous as we are of our national reputation, and ready at all times to repel anything like an appearance of interference with our political affairs by foreigners, in all matters of art we deliver ourselves up with unresisting obedience to the dictates of dictators. We have artists of our own, it is true, and we feel a just pride in their talents; but, if we inquire for them we shall find them in Rome, in Florence, in Dusseldorff, or in Paris, not only for the purpose of perfecting themselves in their art, but to gain a foreign indorsement to make their productions pass current at home. The Fine Arts, notwithstanding the generous disposition shown by many of our people to encourage their growth, are still exotics among us. We do not give ourselves up to these flowers of civilization, as they do in the despotic countries of Europe, and even in England. In France, Germany and Italy, the active intellect of the people having no opportunity to exercise itself in politics is driven to art for an outlet, and the men who might be senators and political leaders, are forced to become painters, sculptors, architects and musicians. These arts, therefore, are rewarded by the Government and honored by the people, and a degree of attention is bestowed upon them which is here unknown. Since the "Art Treasures" exhibition was opened in Manchester the leading English journals have abounded with criticisms on the works exhibited, ponderous essays on the various schools of art have been published, and an exhibition of paintings is made an object of national interest, in which as much attention is bestowed as we give to the Constitution of a new State, or a radical change in our laws. A grand performance of the great oratorios of HANDEL has been projected to take place in London in 1859, and the rehearsals have already commenced; the public have been admitted to one of the rehearsals of the Messiah, and forthwith the English papers are filled with long articles on HANDEL and criticisms on the performances of his music. The space allotted to the subject by the daily Press, indicates the tastes and sympathies of the people. HANDEL, though a native of Germany, was essentially an Englishman; it was in England that he composed his great works, it was there he spent the greater part of his life, and gained his great renown. England now honors his memory and the performance of his great oratorios is regarded as an event of national interest. But we have as yet no Handels to honor, and, if we had, we have too much business of greater importance to attend to. We are too busy with our great plans for improving the country; we have too many new States to organize, too many roads to build, too many forests to level, too many bad laws to mend, and too many good ones to make, to stop in the midst of our great material progress to dally with the fine arts, which serve only to amuse and embellish life. Such arts as are necessary to the subjugation of the wilderness, to our protection from external enemies, and to insure the solid comforts of life, we give our mind to in earnest; but it will be a long time, if ever, before we shall be able to rely upon the home production of our musicians and ornamentalists. We can supply Russia with railroad engineers, and raise her sunken ships, as well as build her frigates; but when we want an artist to decorate the walls of our National Capitol, we send an invitation to France, to HORACE VERNET, to come over and assist us.

JACOB BARKER'S CASE.—In the report of Mr. BARKER's case in the Court of Claims, which appeared some days since in our columns, it was intended to present merely the case before the Court, not historical reminiscences generally, although highly interesting in themselves, of Mr. B.'s financial achievement.

Mr. BARKER's share of the loan was taken in May, 1814, at 88 per cent. The additional two and a half millions were taken in August, of the same year, at 80 per cent., but in depreciated paper. The holders of such original stock, of May, by the terms of their loan, were entitled to all the difference. They received only the difference of per centage, in supplemental stock, but under protest, as even with reference to that difference there took place a good deal of departmental juggling, and the settlement, or payment, even so far, was not a fair one, or satisfactory to the claimants. It was made, however, in a way, by special direction, we believe, of President MADISON, to save all their rights to future redress.

The history of that settlement is, all of it, interesting, and we should be glad if space permitted us to enter upon it, as given, with comments, at length, in the Report of 1854 to the House, and in Mr. BARKER's elaborate briefs, to which we refer readers desirous of financial explorations.

But, in his pending application to the Court, Mr. BARKER waives (for the present only, perhaps) all but the claim accruing from, or founded upon, the the payment to Government of the depreciated bank paper. With the other matter, therefore, we had nothing to do in making our report of his case.

WALKER'S MEN.

Sentiment of the Wabash Fillibusters—Disposition of the Sick—Was Walker Competent?—Was he Cruel?—What the Ladies think of him and the Cause—The Heroines of Rivas—Mule-meat without Salt, and Sundry unsavory Experiences.

The Wabash lay at anchor off the Battery during the whole of yesterday, and was visited by a large number of persons, relatives of the unfortunate members of WALKER's ill-fated army who had arrived in her from Aspinwall. From the hour of noon, or thereabouts, however, only the sick and wounded were to be found on board—those who were sound in limb, though emaciated in person, having landed, and sought such quarters as their own funds or their friends' assistance could provide them with. Those quarters, it may well be believed, in the case of the rank and file of the army, were very humble indeed. Of the sick and wounded, some were afterwards transferred to the City Hospital, and the rest to Bellevue Hospital, where they will be properly cared for. What could be done on board the Wabash to alleviate their sufferings, their friends may rest assured was done, but a ship crowded with such objects of suffering, destitution and misery as were landed yesterday on our piers, was a place ill suited for the administration of even the simplest comforts which men in their situation require.

It is difficult to describe the condition of the remnant of WALKER's army. Such words as skeleton and scarecrow fall short of the reality. The skin covered the bones like tight parchment, and the sun of Nicaragua had tanned that parchment brown. Large feverish eyes protruded over hollow spaces that once were cheeks, but now were cheeks inverted—cups, and not protuberances. All was in match, noses pinched, like thin, chins lean, and arms, legs, chest and whole "body corporate" corporate with that ghastly physiognomy. There were some a little superior to this in appearance, but they were few in number. We still speak of the rank and file. The officers either had not suffered so much or bore their sufferings better.

And the dresses of these unfortunates corresponded with their physical appearance. Many had shirts coarse as sackcloths, but not a few were without shirts. Stockings formed no part of their wardrobe. Their shoes were mostly beyond mending. A thin, ragged coat, and a pair of canvas pants completed their attire. Of woe-begone men we never saw such specimens before, and yet they were men to be proud of notwithstanding. To be proud of, because there was not one among them who would not have scorned to sit down by the roadside and beg. To be proud of, because, after the endurance of suffering and disappointment that would appal most hearts, they had not lost a particle of native courage, but had the hardihood in them to strive again, when they had recruited their strength, in a cause that they considered good, under the command of a man whom they accounted competent.

WAS WALKER COMPETENT?

Our reporter had earnest conversations with many of them on that point—Was WALKER competent? They were unanimous in their opinion that he was incompetent. He failed not so much in heart as in head. He lacked ability. He was unable. BUONAPARTE said to his officers, "Impossible? Ne dites moi cette sottise d'un mot. Never mention to me that blockhead of a word. There is nothing impossible to the man who dares." To General WALKER very much was impossible. His failing, in his soldiers' opinion, was incompetency—not lack of bravery, for they gave him full credit for courage, but he wanted that which, in a General, is of as much importance as courage, tact. Poets are born, and so are Commanders-in-Chief. WALKER was not born, and could not be made, either one or the other. The opinions of his army, as gained from the Wabash remnant, though not exactly so expressed, amounted to just this, and nothing more: The cause was a good cause. They believed in the cause.

Under the right sort of man, they had, much as they had endured, no objection to embark in it again. For Nicaragua was such a glorious country, that under an able commander, it would be a hero's death to die fighting for it. "Would you return again under WALKER, if he were to fit out a new Expedition?" our reporter asked one of them. The answer was, "I would sooner leap into the river and drown there than serve under him another six months, whatever the end might be." He asked another, and the reply was much the same—"I would not go out with him if I was sure he would conquer the country in a month." It must be borne in mind that the men who thus responded were disappointed, sickly, ragged, and penniless, and that their opinions and testimony should be received with such caution as their condition may suggest. But they are unanimous against WALKER's competency.

WAS WALKER CRUEL?

No. The same men testify, that for the leader of an army, he was not cruel. The ogre stories of his ordering men out to be shot because they went in search of food, are lies made out of whole cloth. If a man persisted in going beyond the lines under pretence of hunger, or from other cause, he would be punished for insubordination merely, but unless a soldier was actually caught deserting, or endeavoring to corrupt his fellow-soldiers with British gold, obtained from the Costa Ricans—as was more than once the case—putting him to death was a punishment never resorted to. Opinions were divided in regard to WALKER's humanity. Some said he was commiserative to the sick; others said he took no more notice of them than if they were diseased dogs.

MULE'S FLESH FOR FOOD.

But, of his want of generalship, there was no dispute. When he and his army were in Rivas, and the enemy commenced to advance upon them from Obrsje, he had ample time to procure provisions for the garrison, for four or five months, or even a longer period. He did not do it. He did, nothing; but knowing that he was unprovisioned for a siege, stolidly, not stoically, awaited the enemy's arrival, and supplied his fighting men, and the women and children, with scanty rations of mule meat, and two plantains a day. And the mule they had to eat without salt. Now, the fibre of the mule's flesh partakes of the nature of the animal. It is as tough and unyielding to molars and incisors as the mule itself is stubborn under the yoke or lash. It is unsavory also. When the enemy attacked Rivas, there was no better food than stubborn mule flesh within, but the stubbornest mule, the soldiers thought, was the General who, when he might have well stocked their quarters with food, refused to do so, and devoted them to starvation rations.

WILL WALKER SEND HIS SOLDIERS HOME?

Our reporter, in conversing with these ill-fated men, at first found a difficulty in gaining their confidence. They owned that they were afraid to speak, lest their names should be published. He assured them that due secrecy should be kept. Then they told what they thought of WALKER, and his generalship, their reasons for silence being explained in this wise: WALKER, they had been promised, would, when they arrived in New-York, give them money to send them to their homes, and as they were destitute, even that was a mercy to be grateful for. Hence they were afraid to speak their mind about him, lest he should be offended, and refuse them this essential aid. Many of them live at New-Orleans, and most of them are from the Southern States. They are penniless. Will WALKER send us home, they ask, or, instead of giving us a dinner, will his admirers and partizans turn the money to better account, and feed us hungry, as we are, and clothe us, naked as we are, and restore us to our homes, who have been maimed, and ruined, and widowed, and orphaned, in his cause?

WHAT THE LADIES THINK OF WALKER AND THE CAUSE.

Not the least brave in WALKER's camp—nor the least faithful to him, were the wives of his officers. Fair fillibusters every one of them, who stood the siege at Rivas, and the deprivations, and the dangers, and the mule meat without salt, and did not flinch or frown. Mule meat and two plantains a day, and no grumbling, though they all testify that WALKER, if he had been the General he ought to have been, would have stocked his garrison with the fruits and other provisions that were actually rotting without the camp. When they left Rivas, just a week before the capitulation, on their way to St. George, they arrived at the quarters of General ZAVALA, of the Costa Rican army. He spoke French and English fluently, and affably conversed with them. He and his officers set great entertainment before the ladies, including claret and champagne. He told them he was educated in New-York, and liked American women.

"Were you not," he said to one of them, (we omit her name at her own earnest request,) "frightened when we poured in the twenty-four pound shots among you?"

"American women," she answered, "are never frightened. We kept every shot you fired. They only ventilated our quarters, and having done us that service, we recast them in our furnace, and mean to return them to you in the shape of six-pound balls."

"Your furnace? You would play with me, with your furnace. A furnace in Rivas for melting twenty-four pound shot? Phew!"

The General thought the American lady was bamboozling him. She quietly replied that what she had said was true. The General whistled, and appeared thoughtful.

"What can I do for you?" he said. "Is your husband in Rivas?"

"He is, and these ladies husbands also."

The General asked whether he should send them refreshments. The ladies replied:

"If our husbands fall into your hands, give them soldiers' deaths—shoot them; but do not hang them."

"By Heaven, I will do neither," exclaimed General ZAVALA, "if they fall into my hands. But if the soldiers take them I can answer for nothing. They will, perhaps, tear them in pieces. For WALKER, if we catch him, there is no escape. He will be strung to the nearest bough. The provisions of no treaty can insure his life."

Those twenty-four pound shots did considerable damage in Rivas, notwithstanding the ladies' heroism. One of them struck the roof of the house occupied by WALKER, and sent a rafter pitching down upon the pillow of his bed from which he had just risen.

Our reporter, conversing with these ladies, found them fillibusters indeed. Nicaragua must be American, they said. The cause was good, but it needed for a leader a humane and provident man, who understood how to propitiate the people. The Costa Ricans had no enmity to the Americans, but they were disinclined to yield to bullying and force. The climate at Rivas was excellent. At Granada, it was unhealthy, and in parts near Greytown.

At Castello Viejo, these American ladies were allowed to visit the fort, though their male friends were excluded. They saw there some old Spanish cannon, valuable for the silver which entered into their composition, and which WALKER, when they were in his possession, had intended to send to New-Orleans, to be melted up, and exchanged for new cannon. They were retaken by the Costa Ricans, Colonel HENNINGSEN having neglected to throw them into the Lake, as he ought to have done. The Wabash remnant of the army, and the ladies alluded were to not enthusiastic in praise of HENNINGSEN. They thought highly of him at one time, they said, but have since had much occasion to change their opinions.

Some of the poor penniless fellows told our reporter yesterday, that they arrived at WALKER's camp with several hundred dollars in their pockets, and that the officers made speedy friends of them, borrowed their money, treated them harshly afterwards, and never repaid them. But their camp life had worse hardships than the loss of loaned money, useful as a moiety of it would be at this present juncture.

For the rest, our reporter, though he met with several who had had enough of fillibustering, did not discover much faint-heartedness. The cause was good, these men maintained, if there was only the right man for a General. Some of them thought the right man would be found yet. And all of them insisted that the country was worth striving for, and ought to belong to the United States.

Personal.

Commissioner DENVER, of the Land Office, received a letter the other day which he could not read; so he sent back the following pithy note: "I have to acknowledge the receipt of a letter supposed to be signed by you; and, after reading a portion, guessing at a portion, and passing by the remainder as unintelligible, have referred it to the Secretary of the Interior."

Some wretch, who is described as destitute of front teeth, has excited consternation in Virginia, in the region of Fredericksburg, by holding abolition converse with the negroes, under cover of selling them contraband articles.

HEAVY DAMAGES FOR VIOLATING CITY ORDINANCES.—A case came off yesterday before Justice MERCH, at the Jefferson Market Police Court, in which the Health ordinances had been violated. Cellars Nos. 106 and 108 Bowery, were in a condition prejudicial to the public health. Health Warden WOOD, of the Fourteenth Ward, served introductory notice on the occupant, J. HASSON, to abate. The notice was not regarded. Warden WOOD then served a special requisition. HASSAN still failed to abate the nuisance in the time specified. The Health Warden then, in accordance with instructions from the City Inspector, placed the matter in the hands of the Corporation Attorney, who prosecuted the same. Judge MERCH imposed a fine of $100, with $12 cost of suit.

FREE ACADEMY.—The Free Academy Examinations, to which all citizens are invited, commenced yesterday, and continue daily, Saturday and Sundays excepted, to July 6th. The programme of yesterday was for the

Sophomores—Logic, and Moral Philosophy, numbering 29, by Dr. WEBSTER, and Assistant Professor HUNTSMAN.

FIGHT AT HUDSON GROVE.—A dreadful riot took place at Hudson Grove, near Spuyten Duyvel Creek, between a German Club, who had there assembled at a pic-nic, and a gang of Irishmen, and several on both sides were badly injured, though none fatally, so far as learned. No arrests were made; neither do either of the Police captains of the Twelfth Ward allude to the matter in their returns.

SCAVENGER ATTLEBERGER.—A subscription has been opened at the City Inspector's Office in aid of the widow and children of Scavenger ATTLEBERGER, who entered a sink in West Forty first-street and from the impure air therein lost his life. The widow is poor. The subscription is in the hands of the Clerk to the Superintendent of Sanitary Inspection, No. 1 Centre-street.

DEAD HORSES IN THE STREETS.—Thirty-nine dead horses, during the week ending June 29, have been found in the streets. All dead animals are promptly removed from the City limits by the dead animal contractor, on receiving notice of their whereabouts at the City Inspector's office or at the Station houses.

DEAD DOGS.—The Dead-Animal Contractor, at the foot of Forty-fifth-street dock, North River, has received during the week ending June 29, 664 dead dogs, most of them killed at the public Pound, in accordance with the City Ordinances. They were all sent to Barren Island.

FIRE IN CANAL-STREET.—A fire broke out in the frame dwelling (occupied by several German families) No. 112 Canal-street, at 11½ o'clock Sunday night. The flames spread to the roofs of the two adjoining buildings, damaging each considerably. The entire loss is estimated at $2,000.

OPENING OF NEW LAND OFFICES.—We learn that the necessary measures are being taken by the General Land Office to open at the earliest practicable period the new land offices in Minnesota Territory, one of which is located at Ojihwa, on the Mississippi, and the other at Buchanan, on Lake Superior. The instructions for the officers are being prepared for transmission, in order that those officers may familiarize themselves with their duties by the time the lands are subdivided, and in order that preëmption claimants may not be delayed in proving up their rights and securing their homes. It is believed that several townships will be surveyed and subdivided by early in the Fall.—Union.

WHO OWNS IT?—Private-watchmen MARCETT and JOHNSON found nearly 800 pounds weight of bagging the other night in an open lot in Beekman-street, whither it had been removed only a short time before by some thieves, who made good their escape. Messrs. MARCETT and JOHNSON took charge of the property.

THE STREETS.

Mr. Morton's Progress—Prospects Improving Vastly—Review of the Waste Dirty Field—Broadway to be Machine-Swept—Lining the Five Points.

Since the streets have been in the hands of the City Inspector something has been done towards their renovation, though much yet remains to be accomplished. During the four days they have operated on them 14,776 loads of dirt have been removed, but, in consequence of the scarcity of carts, it will be some time before the City is made as clean as it should be. The work, however, is progressing, and there is a very perceptible improvement in portions of most of the Wards under his direction. The City Inspector suggests, that if the citizens on each block, instead of having the street-dirt swept to the middle of the street as is the usual custom, will see that it is heaped on the sids of the street twice a week—say Tuesday and Friday—before 9 o'clock A. M., he will furnish the carts for its removal.

We have compiled the following tables of the amount of work done in the four days ending Saturday, June 27, from the reports of the Street Inspectors for the several Wards:

Ashes only. No dumping-place for dirt and garbage has yet been procured, although a negotiation for one is now pending, on the strength of which it is understood that a force of street-sweepers will to-day be put on.

The following streets have been gone over once, and the surface dirt has been removed. Another application of the shovel and hoe will have to be given them before the brooms can be effectually used. In many of the streets the solidity of the dirt was such that picks had to be brought into requisition:

First Ward—Broad-street, from Front to South; South, from Whitehall to Coenties slip; Maiden-lane, north side, from South to the Junction; Battery-place, from Bowling-green to West street; Old-slip, from Pearl to Front; Broadway, from Liberty to Bowling-green; South-street, from Coenties-slip to Maiden lane; Wall-street, from South to Hanover; Front, from Wall to Maiden lane; Washington, from Liberty to Rector; Greenwich, from Liberty to Morris; West, from Battery-place to Morris; Morris, from Broadway to West; Washington, from Rector to Battery-place; Greenwich, from Battery place to Morris: Rector, from Broadway to West; Thames, from Broadway to Greenwich; Albany, from Greenwich to West; Trinity place, from Liberty to Tinpot-alley; Coenties-slip, from South to Pearl; Bridge, from Broad to State; Pearl, from Broad to State; State, from Bowling-green to Whitehall; New-street, from Beaver to Wall; Pine, from Broadway to William; Broadway, from Liberty to Bowling-green; Whitehall, from Bowling-green to South Ferry.

Second Ward—The whole Ward has been cleaned once, and the workmen are engaged on it the second time.

Third Ward—Cortlandt, from Greenwich to West-st.; Dey, from Greenwich to West; Fulton and Vesey, from Broadway to West, and Barclay, from Greenwich to West.

Fifth Ward—White, Lispenard, Walker, Franklin, Thomas, Anthony, Church, West Broadway, and part of Duane.

Eighth Ward—Laurens and Thompson, from Spring to Houston; Sullivan, from Houston to Broome; McDougal, from Houston to Spring; Clark, from Spring to Broome.

Ninth Ward—Downing, Carmine, Clarkson, Bedford, from Hammersley to Carmine; Morton, Cornelia, Barrow, Leroy, from Hudson to West; Amos and Bleecker streets.

Fourteenth Ward—Elizabeth, from Houston to Grand; Mott, from Houston to Broome; Mulberry, from Canal to Grand; Baxter, from Canal to Grand; Elm, from Howard to Spring; Mulberry, from Broome to Grand, and Spring, from Marion to Mulberry.

Fifteenth Ward—14th street, from 4th to 5th avenues; 13th street, from 6th-avenue to University-place; 13th, from Broadway to 4th-avenue; 12th, from 4th to 6th avenues; 11th-street, from Broadway to 6th-avenue; 10th street, from 4th avenue to Broadway; 9th-street, from 4th to 6th avenues; 8th-street, from 6th-avenue to MacDougal; Waverly-place, from 6th avenue to MacDougal.

Twentieth Ward—Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth-streets between Seventh and Eleventh avenues. The ashes have been removed throughout the entire Ward.

The Street Inspector of the Sixth-Ward says that the streets in that District present a cleaner appearance now—particularly in the neighborhood of the Five Points—than they have before in many years. Lime is to be furnished from the Department to whitewash thoroughly the gutters before the 4th of July. Last night they commenced cleaning Chatham-street for the second time. The immense traffic on this street prevents any sweeping in the day time. By the way, who and where is the contractor for paving that street with the Belgian pavement? He has paved the east side, but the west side, from Pearl-st. to Mulberry is so full of ruts and holes that vehicles can scarcely pass, and a constant blockade is the consequence.

The Seventh, Tenth, Eleventh, Thirteenth, Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth and Twenty-first Wards remain still in the hands of the contractors.

Mr. Buss has the Sixteenth, and it is in exceedingly good condition. The Sixteenth is under the care of Mr. KECKHEISER, and that, too, is in good order. The rest are in passably fair condition, with the exception of the Eighteenth. The City Inspector might profitably give the contractor of the Eighteenth Ward, Mr. KELSE, a raking down for the filthy condition in which he permits it to remain. The Health Warden, Mr. G. H. ADAMS, reported, last Saturday, that the gutters on the corner of Avenue B and Fifteenth-street were very filthy—the garbage being all "on a crawl," with maggots.

The City Inspector has engaged Mr. SMITH, the proprietor of the street-sweeping machines, to clean Broadway twice a week at a cost of $120 per week.

ORGANIZATION OF THE DEMOCRATIC REFORM GENERAL COMMITTEE.—The "Union" alias "Reform," alias "Anti-Wood" Democratic General Committee, met and organized last evening at Tammany Hall. There was a full attendance. After the necessary formal business, the Committee proceeded to ballot for permanent officers. Several candidates were named for Chairman. On the first ballot EDWARD COOPER, ELIJAH F. PURDY and Alderman HEALY, of the Fourth Ward, received votes in the order in which their names are given.

When the result was announced, Mr. HEALY withdrew his name, and another ballot was had, the result being—

For COOPER.....491 For PURDY.....43

There being still no choice, another ballot was about being ordered, when PURDY arose, and declined being considered a candidate any longer. He took advantage to make a good-natured and characteristic little speech, in which he said that honors enough had been thrust upon him. He felt abundantly satisfied in feeling that he had contributed to the glorious movement that night inaugurated—a movement calculated to work a reform where a reform was needed, and to unite and harmonize the noble Democracy, too long disunited by the wiles and plots of wily and designing men.

These remarks were received with favor.

A motion was then made that Mr. COOPER be declared Chairman by a unanimous vote; and this motion was put and carried without dissent.

Mr. COOPER arose, when the cheering had subsided and returned his thanks.

The other officers were then elected as follows:

Treasurer—ISAAC BELL, Jr.

Secretaries—BENJAMIN HART, RICHARD G. WALMELEY.

The Committee then, at 11½ o'clock, adjourned subject to a call from the chair.

Concerning the Street Commissioner.

THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

The Board of Aldermen met last evening, Alderman CLANCY, President, in the Chair. The Report of the Committee non-concurring with the Board of Councilmen in the reorganization of the Croton Water Department, and creating a new bureau, was called up, and after some amendments, was adopted.

The Report reorganizing the Law Department was adopted.

THE STREET COMMISSIONER.

The following preamble and resolution, relating to the Street Commissioner, were offered by Alderman WILSON:

Whereas, A controversy has arisen between DANIEL D CONOVER and CHARLES DEVELIN, in reference to the office of Street Commissioner for the City of New-York, and

Whereas, CHARLES DEVELIN, having been regularly appointed to such office, with the consent of the Board of Aldermen, and having duly taken the oath of office, and given an official bond according to law, has been and is recognized by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of the City of New-York, as lawfully entitled to hold and exercise the duties of the office aforesaid, and

Whereas, The said CONOVER has adopted measures to compel a delivery to him of the books, papers, maps, records and documents connected with such office, and

Whereas, Such books, papers, maps, records, and documents belong to the said Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York, and are the private property of such Corporation, and

Whereas, Such Corporation has not been made a party to the proceedings by said CONOVER, to obtain possession of such property, and

Whereas, It is the duty of such Corporation to maintain and defend its title to such property; therefore

Be it ordained, That the Counsel to the Corporation of the City of New-York, as the agent of such Corporation, for the purpose forthwith take possession of all the books, papers, maps, records and documents, connected with the office of Street Commissioner for the City of New-York, and that he retain such possession until otherwise directed by the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York, but that said Counsel keep such books, papers, maps, records and documents, in the rooms now assigned and occupied as the Street Commissioner's offices or apartments, and that he permit said CHARLES DEVELIN to have the use of said offices or apartments, and of such books, papers, maps, records and documents, for the purpose of discharging his duties as Street Commissioner aforesaid, but for no other purpose whatever.

Alderman TUCKER opposed their passage. It was by such conduct that the City had been brought to a state of anarchy. The whole subject was in the hands of the Courts, and he hoped it would be let alone until decided. He had no objection to the counsel to the Corporation, but he thought it was wrong to take the head of one department and put him in possession of another.

After the failure of several motions to refer, the preamble and resolution were adopted.

The following was received from the Comptroller and ordered to be printed:

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, June 29, 1857.

In presenting to the Common Council an exhibit of the operations of the Surveyor, the contractor and the Street Commissioner, under a 70 per cent. contract for regulating and grading Fifty-fifth-street from the Third to the Fifth avenues, as shown in a subsequent part of this communication, I beg leave to avail myself of the occasion to invite the serious consideration of the Legislative Department to the great importance of organizing the Bureau of Surveying on such a footing as will secure skill and uprightness in the administration of that important branch of public service.

The head of the Bureau should be a practical engineer and surveyor, and all specifications and estimates for contracts should be reviewed and approved by him before making the contract; and all certificates for the payment for work on the contract should be subjected to his scrutiny and approval before any money is paid on the contract. The contract provides that payment shall be made as the work progresses, on the certificate of the Surveyor and Street Commissioner. The Surveyor for the job is selected by the Street Commissioner; and thus, between them, they in effect, by the terms of the contract, hold the key to the treasury. If the Comptroller, finding that the estimates of work for which payment is demanded greatly exceed the original estimates made before the contract was entered into, withholds payment for the purpose of testing the accuracy of the estimates for work done, it is regarded as an impeachment of the Commissioner and Surveyer, and as working a great wrong to the contractor.

It is important, therefore, that measures should be adopted at once for procuring full and accurate surveys and estimates, to be made by competent persons, before a contract is advertised. Copies of this estimate, duly signed by the persons who made it, and approved by the Head of the Bureau, should be filed with the Street Commissioner, and a duplicate of this estimate should accompany the contract, which, by the new Charter, is required to be furnished to the Finance Department.

The particular case to which I now desire to direct the attention of the Common Council, is as follows, viz.:

On the 11th day of July, 1855, an ordinance was passed by the Common Council directing "Fifty-fifth-street to be regulated and graded from Third to Eighth avenues, where not already graded or under contract."

On the 21st day of November, 1855, estimates were opened by James Furey, Street Commissioner, for "regulating Fifty-fifth street from the Third to the Fifth avenues and from the Seventh to the Eighth avenues." The specifications stated that "The estimates of work for which the bids will be tested are as follows: About 62,400 cubic yards of earth to be furnished; about 110 running feet of culvert; 2,900 yards of rock cutting." Under this specification bids were opened, and a list of the bids is annexed marked "A." By this statement it will be seen that the lowest bid was that of W. Prior.

The contract for the work was made by Joseph S. Taylor, Street Commissioner, on the 5th day of May, 1857, with Oscar Taylor, under the ordinance of Dec. 30, 1854. Seven certificates for 70 per cent. advances have been made by Franklin Vidal, City Surveyor, beginning July 24, 1856, and the last one of April 28, 1857. Advances were made on six of these certificates to the amount of $15,450 74. On the presentation of the last certificate, the Comptroller deemed it necessary, before further advances, to have a complete examination of the work done; and accordingly selected Messrs. J. S. Serrell and Daniel Ewen to survey the street. A copy of their report is annexed, marked "B."

Mr. Ewen's report the following facts are shown, and the particulars given in detail in statement C annexed. The specification calls for 62,400 cubic yards of earth-filling. Messrs. Serrell and Ewen show but 44,480 cubic yards actually required to be done, leaving an excess of work stated in the specification of 17,920 cubic yards.

The rock excavation called for in the specification was 8,900 cubic yards, of which but 6,813 was necessary by their report, making the specification exceed, in this particular, 2,087 cubic yards.

The culvert estimated for was 110 feet; the report states 230 feet to have been necessary—leaving a deficiency in the specification of 200 feet. The report further shows that Mr. Vidal has certified to 25,979 cubic yards of earth filling to have been done more than has been found done by Ewen and Serrell; to 3,974 cubic yards of rock more than is actually done, and 135 feet more of culvert. Under this statement of the Surveyors, the amount of excess of work paid for would be as follows (if the last certificate had been paid):

2,974 cubic yards rock, 50 cents	1,987 00
135 feet of culvert, $20	2,700 00
Total	$7,025 11

Of this there has been actually paid for over what has been actually done:

2,707 cubic yards rock	1,353 50
51 feet culvert	1,020 00
Total	$4,175 14

The certificates given by Mr. Vidal show that had the work therein stated actually been done, there would have been 2,764 cubic yards of earth-filling in excess of that required by the report of Ewen & Serrell, 1,888 cubic yards of rock excavated in excess, 486 feet of culvert more built than required, and the whole work finished and completed besides.

The average bid for culvert, as will be seen by the statement annexed, is from $3 to $1 50 per foot.

Had the original specifications stated the correct amount of culvert required, the bids of John Quin, W. Lambert, J. Lee, J. Moore and W. Prior would have each been lower than Taylor's. It will be further seen that the large amount of culvert certified as built forms the most important item of the advances, as follows:

Earth-filling paid for	$3,715 47
Total	$7,432 47
Culvert alone	$10,248 00

The number of feet of culvert paid for above the amount estimated as necessary by Ewen & Serrell is 486, which at Taylor's price is $8,504. Had the whole amount of culvert notified to by Vidal (916 feet) been paid for, we would have paid $9,720 more than was actually deemed necessary by Serrell & Ewen. The amount of the contract under the report of Serrell & Ewen would be $14,009 70. Mr. Taylor has been paid $15,450 74. Making an over-payment on the whole contract, according to the report, of $1,441 04, and the contract is still incomplete. It will be seen by the report of Messrs. Ewen & Serrell that there remains yet to be finished 23,315 cubic yards of earth-filling, and 2,086 cubic yards of rock-cutting.

The foregoing facts show, in regard to all work to be done of this character, the indispensable necessity of having accurate and minute surveys and specifications made before advertising or letting out any work to be done under contract, and also the necessity of careful measurements and estimates as the work progresses.

All which is respectfully submitted.

A. G. FLAGG, Comptroller.

[B.]

NEW-YORK, June 15, 1857.

TO A. C. FLAGG, ESQ., COMPTROLLER, &c.—Dear Sir: Pursuant to your instructions we have surveyed Fifty-fifth street, from the Third to the Fifth avenues, and from the Seventh to the Eighth avenues, to ascertain how much work, in our judgment, was originally necessary to be done to regulate and grade the street between these points, agreeably to the printed specifications for the same, dated 15th November, 1855, and signed "James Farey, Street Commissioner;" also, to ascertain how much work had been done on the same, pursuant to the contract dated 5th May, 1856, between Joseph S. Taylor, Street Commissioner, and Oscar Taylor, Contractor: also, to report to you our opinions on the manner in which the work has progressed; and we respectfully report as follows:

6,813 cubic yards of rock to be blasted and deposited in embankment;
230 feet running measure of culvert to be built.

Our estimate of the amount of work done on the 8th inst., when our survey was made, is:

21,326 cubic yards of earth filling furnished:
4,497 cubic yards of rock blasted and deposited in embankment;
661 feet running measure of culvert built and building, leaving yet to be done:
23,315 cubic yards of earth filling to be furnished;
2,066 cubic yards of rock to be blasted and deposited.

2,087 cubic yards less of rock to be blasted 230 feet running measure of culvert more to be necessary.

There has certainly been already built and building 574 feet of culvert more than was estimated for in the specification of 10th November, 1855, and 351 feet more than we considered necessary; and the contractor claims that one culvert is 63 feet longer than we measure between its visible ends, on account of the curvatures of it which we cannot see by reason of its being covered by embankment, while the size of it does not admit of our passing through it; for, although the specification calls for culverts 2½ feet wide and 4 feet high in the clear, we have been unable to find an average greater than about 2 feet 6 inches square in the clear.

We remain very respectfully yours,
DANIEL EWEN, } Surveyors.
JOHN J. SERRELL, }

The Board then adjourned to the first Monday in July.

THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

The Board of Supervisors met yesterday afternoon. In the absence of President STERRS, Supervisor TUCKER occupied the Chair. Supervisor CLANCY remarked that in accordance with the requirements of the act passed April 13, 1857, it became the duty of the Board to define the new limits of the Assembly Districts. In consequence of the increase of population the City of New-York was entitled to seventeen members—an increase of one; and as the City had been divided into seventeen Aldermanic Districts, he proposed by resolution to make the Assembly District boundaries the same as the Aldermanic. He offered the resolution and it was adopted.

In accordance with an act of the late Legislature and the petition of the Directors, the Board decided to appropriate the sum of $20,000 to the New-York Juvenile Asylum.

The Board then adjourned to the first Monday in July.

THE PORT WARDENS' BILL.

Opinions of Messrs. Cutting, Lord and Evarts, as to its Constitutionality.

The following questions were recently presented to Messrs. CUTTING, LORD and EVARTS by the Board of Underwriters and their opinions requested in writing:

The Insurance Companies of New-York City employ Inspectors and Surveyors. The duties of the Inspector are to examine goods damaged by causes insured against, ascertain the nature and extent of the damage, the amount of loss sustained, whether the claim of the insured can be compromised, acceptance of abandonment and decision as to disposition of the goods; and if required by their employers or parties interested, they certify to the facts before them and their opinion upon those facts. The Surveyors examine damaged vessels, decide upon the extent of damage, amount of loss, accept abandonment, &c.; certify as to nature and amount of damage, decide between owner and underwriter, and perform duties similar to those prescribed for the Port Wardens by Sec. 3 of the accompanying act.

The duties of the Inspector and Surveyor combined, (as they often are in the same person,) are precisely those of the Port Wardens as defined in Secs. 3 and 4 of the accompanying act.

We have now to request your opinion upon the validity and operation of the inclosed Port Wardens' Act, as to the following points:

1. Are Secs. 3 and 4, and 5 and 6, or either, or what portions of them constitutional and binding?

2. Are the exclusive powers conferred by this act constitutional and legal so far as to prevent the future employment of Inspectors and Surveyors by the Underwriters for the performance of the duties above named?

3. Is the provision of sec. 5 as to commissions to be paid Port Wardens before sales of damaged goods, vessels, &c., constitutional and obligatory upon owners of such goods not requiring the attendance of the Port Wardens upon such sales?

4. Can the auctioneer selling such damaged vessels, materials or goods, successfully resist the payment of the commissions of ½ of 1 per cent. provided by sec. 5 in cases where the Wardens are not required to attend the sale, or in any cases and in what, if any?

5. Will the Underwriters under this act be compelled to employ Wardens in place of their Inspectors and Surveyors to examine and certify in cases of vessels or their cargoes arriving damaged at this port or damaged while lying in the port, and will the Inspectors and Surveyors of Marine Companies be liable to the penalties provided by the act if they continue to discharge the duties above described?

6. If the assured on vessel or goods damaged agree with his insurer to select any other person than a Port Warden to examine and appraise the insured property, would it be a violation of the law for that person to perform that duty when so requested? The Warden not having been notified or requested, by either party in interest, could the contracting parties under a policy of insurance be debarred the privilege of settling the damage in any manner they may deem best for their mutual interest? Will it make any difference whether the underwriters and their assured, or either, employ a person to survey or examine the particular case, not in the annual employ of the Underwriters?

In addition to the above we ask your opinion as to the constitutionality and validity of the Auction tax, or duties imposed by the State upon goods sold at auction.

We wish particularly to know whether the payment of those duties can be enforced in the law.

Very respectfully, A. B. NEILSON,
President of the Board of Underwriters.

NEW-YORK, May 7, 1857.

The answers submitted to these questions were substantially the same. We select the following, since it is the shortest:

THE OPINION OF F. B. CUTTING, ESQ.

I have examined the various provisions of the recent act of the Legislature of this State, "to reorganize the Wardens' office of the Port of New-York;" and in answer to the questions proposed to me by the Board of Underwriters, am of opinion that:

I. All those parts of the act which attempt to compel parties interested in vessels or merchandise, arriving in the port of New-York, to employ the Wardens of the port to act as Inspectors of their vessels and goods, and to perform the various official acts and services therein mentioned; and which impose upon such parties an obligation to pay fees, commissions and rewards to persons whose services are not needed or requested by them; and those parts of the act which attempt to prohibit the employment of any person other than a member of the Board of Wardens, to inspect damaged vessels or goods, under the pains and penalties prescribed by the act, are void, because

1. They are not enactments of a Municipal character merely, or which concern only the internal police of the State, but they are regulations of commerce, and, as such, interfere with the power vested in the Congress of the United States, "to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States." Congress has already legislated upon the subject of the appraisement of damage to goods; the mode of ascertaining the same; the inspection of vessels, and the mode of ascertaining their condition and seaworthiness, as far as it has deemed expedient and proper. See Act of 1793, Ch. 22, Sec. 52, 60; Act of 1799, Ch. 29, Sec. 3; Act of 1840, Ch. 48, Sec. 12, 13, 14; Act of 1850, Sec. 6; Act of 1848, Sec. 7; Act of 1852, Ch. 106, Sec. 9.

2. The Constitution of the State of New-York prohibits the creation of any office for the inspection of any merchandise, produce, manufacture, or commodity whatever, except for the purpose of protecting the public health, or the interests of the State in its property, revenue, tolls, or purchases, or of supplying the people with correct standards of weights and measures.

At the time of the adoption of the Constitution, the office of "Inspector of damaged goods" existed in this State. Those parts of the act which in effect revive this inspection law, by attempting to confer upon the Wardens the power in right of their office, to act as Inspectors of damaged goods, are, in that respect, in conflict with the fundamental law of the State, and are void.

In answer to the remainder of the first question submitted to me, I am of opinion that those parts of the Act which require the Wardens to perform certain official acts, when employed or requested by any of the parties in interest, are free from objection.

II. The Insurance Companies of the City of New-York have the right, notwithstanding the recent act, to continue to employ Inspectors and Surveyors, to examine the vessels and goods damaged by perils or causes insured against; to ascertain the nature and extent of such damage, the amount of loss sustained thereby, and to perform such other services as they may deem necessary or expedient in the prosecution of their business.

III. The provisions of the fifth section of the act, which attempt to confer upon the Board of Wardens the absolute right to levy a tax or commission of one-half of one per cent. on the gross amount of the sales of all vessels when condemned, vessels' materials and goods in a damaged state, which shall be sold at public auction in the Port of New-York, by reason of such damage, for the benefit of owners or underwriters, or for account of whom it may concern, and which require that such sales shall be made by auctioneers, under the direction and by the order of the wardens, are attempts to regulate commerce, and are void as against the owners or parties interested in such property, unless when they shall have requested or required the attendance or official action of the Wardens upon such sales.

IV. The Wardens are not entitled to levy any tolls or commissions upon the proceeds of sales by auction of damaged goods or vessels, in cases when the owners or parties interested in the goods, or their agents, do not employ them or request their official action, and in such cases the Wardens are not entitled to recover from the auctioneers any part of the proceeds of such sales.

V. The Underwriters of the City of New-York, notwithstanding the recent act, cannot be compelled to substitute the Wardens of the Port in place of their own Inspectors or Surveyors, to inspect vessels and cargoes arriving damaged in this port, or damaged while lying in the port, and to report the result of their inspection of such vessels and cargoes. As far as the act attempts to force such compulsory employment of the Wardens upon them, it is unconstitutional and void for the reasons before mentioned. The Inspectors and Surveyors of the Marine Insurance Companies are not liable to the pains and penalties attempted to be created by the act, by discharging their ordinary duties as heretofore.

They have not, however, the right to assume to act as Port Wardens, or to exercise official duties as public officers.

VI. The assured on vessels or goods may, by agreement with his insurer, select any individual, though not a Warden of the Port, to examine and appraise the insured property, and such selection and employment, either of the regular Inspector or Surveyor of an Underwriter or of any other person employed by the parties in interest for the particular occasion, will not be a violation of law either on their part, or on the part of the person who shall upon request make the examination and appraisement. The parties to the contract of Insurance have the right, notwithstanding the recent Act, to settle all claims arising from damage to the subject insured, in any manner they deem most conducive to their mutual interest.

VII. The general inquiry whether the laws of the State of New-York, which impose a tax upon the goods sold by auction, are valid, is not presented by the Act to reorganize the Warden's office; as respects the right of the Wardens to demand and receive commissions on the proceeds of vessels and goods sold by auction, when not employed or requested to attend by the parties interested therein, I have already expressed my views.

Amusements.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The experiment of a Summer season of Italian Opera is a dangerous one in the present depressed condition of all kinds of amusement, but the inauguration, last evening, seemed to promise success. The house, although not uncomfortably full, displayed a fair array of paying faces, and was animated and fashionable. There are strangers enough in the City at this present time to support this Metropolitan luxury, if they will but awake to the fact that they have an opportunity of rare moment to enjoy it in its greatest perfection. Mlle. LA GRANGE is one of the the few truly great singers of the world, and she is supported in an unexceptionable way by Messrs. BAGNOLI, AMONRO and COLETTI.

BELLINI'S Opera of the "Puritans" has been given here before with the same cast. We have consequently but little to say concerning its performance, except that it was on the whole smooth and satisfactory. Signor TORIANI, the new conductor, manages his bâton with skill, and marshalled his forces with promptness and vigor—perhaps a little too much vigor in the brass department. He is an old member of MARETZEK'S company, in which, for the last few years he has been chorus master. His graduation to the higher duties of the conductor's chair is therefore legitimate and proper. With care, and a proper regard to his pp's, he will succeed.

No opera will be repeated during the season. By this arrangement a great opportunity is offered of making a passing acquaintance with six standard works in a very brief space of twice. The fact that they have been played often by the same company insures a respectable completeness in the ensembles, and for the solos the very best talent is at hand. We hope that Mme. LA GRANGE (who deserves much) will have a successful campaign. The chorus last night was unusually good.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—A distinguished danseuse, Mlle. THERESA ROLLA, (from a multitude of European theatres,) made her debût here last night in the grand Ballet of "Paquita," and achieved a gratifying success—in her first pas accumulating a quantity of bouquets and a hat. We are not versed in the technology of Terpsichorean art, and are therefore compelled to write plainly on a subject which certainly possesses encouraging opportunities for a more learned course of procedure. Miss ROLLA dances gracefully, lightly and well—particularly well on the tips of her toes. She possesses youth, beauty, and their attributes, elasticity and grace. In the pantomimic business she is about as intelligible as any artists we have ever seen—that is to say, you have to "make her out" in your own way, and trust to the hook for the rest. In a word, Miss ROLLA seems to possess those characteristics which are best adapted for transporting the devotees of the Ballet into the Heaven of their brightest visions. We presume this is saying enough.

To add to the attractions of the Garden, Mr. NIBLO has engaged a very superior Comedy Company to precede the danseuse. The little Comedy of "Sketches in India" was the piece given last night, and was most admirably rendered.

Miss ROLLA will make her second appearance on Wednesday. An artiste so young and talented deserves all the success she can achieve.

NEW OLYMPIC.—Messrs. MEIGHAN and CHANFRAU (the first a journalist, and the second a famous delineator of eccentric character) initiated a bold experiment last night with success. It consisted in transforming Buckley's Hall into a Vaudeville theatre, thus supplanting negro minstrelsy by an article far more expensive, but not more popular. The theatre was crowded to suffocation, and streams of people irrigated the side-walks in Broadway. This success was deserved, for the lessee, although charging a low price for admission, has secured a good company, and gives an amount of entertainment which is really appalling in these hot days. Four pieces were played last night, introducing Mrs HOWARD, Mr. CHANFRAU, Mr. HARRY HALL, and other popular artists. There was some dancing also, and a quantity of music under the direction of Mr. A. REFF, Jr., late of the Pyne and Harrison troupe.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—The indefatigable manageress of this handsome establishment treated her patrons to another new piece last night. It enjoys the title of "A Romantic Idea," and appears to be something between a burlesque and a pantomime. Its fun is of the broadest kind, and seldom rises above buffoonery. In hot weather, buffoonery is particularly acceptable. The physical exertion it requires is refreshing to those who look on, and who prefer to laughs without inquiring the reason why.

There is very little plot to the piece. A young German student in search of an idea, takes up his quarters in an old ruin that is said to be haunted. Here he falls asleep and has a dream of the olden times, in which all sorts of absurdities pass before his heated imagination as realities. The intention of the author seems to be to satirize the blood-and-thunder tendencies of a certain school of dramatists, who sketch the manners and customs of a past age with the point of a dagger.

The piece is excellently exaggerated by the various artists employed in the cast, and is funny enough for an afterpiece. Mr. WHEATLEIGH and Mr. BURNETT, as usual, have most of the work to do, and do it well. It was preceded by the excellent piece, "Nature and Art."

E. H. LUDLOW, Auctioneer.

POSITIVE SALE OF "CLERMONT" OR THE ELEGANT COUNTRY SEAT OF THE LATE MONTGOMERY LIVINGSTON AT CLERMONT, COLUMBIA CO., N. Y., AT AUCTION.—E. H. LUDLOW & CO., will sell, at auction on WEDNESDAY, July 1, 1857, at 2 o'clock P. M., at the mansion house (on the premises) in pursuance of a judgment in partition. The property consists of about 200 acres of land. On it is a mansion house, built of brick and stone, in the chateau style of architecture. The rooms are celebrated for their beauty and proportion. The property is so well and favorably known, having been the residence of Chancellor LIVINGSTON, and afterwards of Mr. ROBERT L. LIVINGSTON, that a particular description is unnecessary. The lawn is bounded on its eastern side for a distance of nearly half a mile by the Hudson River. Along the river bank clumps of fine old forest trees break the river into a variety of picturesque landscapes. On the opposite side of the river, and in the background of several pretty villages, are the Catskill Mountains. The view at these mountains from this place is surpassingly beautiful. The location is perfectly healthy. Its lawns, (for it has three) even now and trees, (it is believed) are unequaled in this country. The soil is of the very best. The garden excellent; a gardener is now working it. There are large orchards, with great varieties of fruit trees. It lies about 1½ miles north of the Railroad station at Tivoli, Dutchess County, to which the train runs in about 3 hours, and where the trains stop. Persons can leave New-York by one or more trains in the A. M., and attend the sale or inspect the premises and return in the afternoon. The Library, consisting of some 2,000 volumes of choice works, will be sold at 10 o'clock A. M. The celebrated Ghobelin Tapestry Hanging in the drawing-room will be sold immediately after the property. For further particulars, inquire of

TO MARRIED MEN, WIDOWS, AND THE PARENTS OF YOUNG UNMARRIED FEMALES.—The advertiser, a medical practitioner of many years' standing in Continental Europe, and of some years' practice in this country, forcibly struck by the many evidences of the almost total want of the knowledge of certain physiological facts, among even the educated and intelligent, and having, in his limited practice here, been instrumental in doing much real good by simply imparting certain secret-like but important facts to those who have a legitimate right to know them—here publicly offers to make known these facts, by means of anonymous correspondence, to all who may desire to become acquainted with them. To divest this announcement of all suspicion of empiricism, the advertiser asks simply a fee of one dollar to defray expenses of advertising, postage, &c. Those wishing the information, can address a line to C. F. N ZABRONSKI, New-York General Post-Office, over an anonymous signature, receiving in return a letter conveying knowledge positively essential to the well-being of all persons embraced in the above category. The advertiser expects to receive some remuneration for his time thus given from those who recognize that they have been essentially benefited, and from no others. May be also consulted confidentially as above.

DR. MAGNIN'S LUCINA CORDIAL, OR ELIXIR OF LOVE.—This delightful and positive invigorant of the human system is fast superseding all other remedies; in fact, when its virtues become fully known, it will be the only remedy in use. Its action on the nervous system and reproductive organs is most extraordinary; allaying all over-excitement, and infusing into the nervous organization that degree of tension which is requisite to give the human system the enjoyment of its full powers, both mentally and physically. As an appetizer, it is equally remarkable; assimilating with the gastric juices of the stomach, it assists them in more readily dissolving all nutritious substances, and converting them into pure and wholesome blood; thus the digestion is improved and the whole framework of man moves on in a more vigorous and harmonious manner thereby. Price, $3 per bottle, or two bottles for $5. Principal office, No. 208 Fulton-st., New-York. DR. MAGNIN.

RICORD, VELPEAU, CIVIALE, ACTON, COWLING, and the Venereal Hospital Practice of Paris and London.—Dr. LARMONT'S PARIS AND LONDON MEDICAL ADVISER AND MARRIAGE GUIDE—20th edition, 400 pages, 100 electrotype pictures; cloth, $1.

Among its contents is the anatomy of the sexual organs of the male and female, all their diseases and weaknesses; latest discoveries in reproduction; quacks, their recipes and specifics; the author's unequaled Paris and London treatment of Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Syphilis, primary and constitutional, Emissions, Impotency, &c., at No. 82 Mercer-st., corner Spring, opposite St. Nicholas Hotel, New-York, from 10 A. M. till 9 P. M. Address letters to Box No. 844 New-York Post-Office. We commend Dr. LARMONT to the afflicted.—Courrier des Etats Unis, Staats Zeitung, Democrat, Day Book, Mercury, Atlas, Police Gazette, &c.

RICORD'S PRACTICE.—C. D. HAMMOND, M. D., pupil of Drs. Carnochan and Mott, and Ricord, of Paris, (the first living surgeon for diseases, &c., of the urinary, seminal and sexual system,) has removed from No. 516 Broadway to No. 61 Bleecker-st., half a block east, where he may be consulted, in English or French, personally or by letter; hours, 8 to 1 o'clock, and 6 to 9 o'clock evenings. Dr. H. tenders to all afflicted positive assurance of relief; and those who have been abused by "specifics," antidotes, little books, "no mercury," and like effusions of the numerous medical charlatans of the day, may rely on having their cases treated effectually, no matter how complicated they may appear. Chronic and nervous complaints also treated.

PRIVATE CONSULTATIONS.—DR. WATSON has for a long series of years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated not less than twenty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. The remedies are mild, and there is no interruption to business or change of diet. Dr. Watson is in constant attendance, from 7 in the morning until 9 at night, at his consulting rooms and residence, No. 55 Walker-st., a few doors west of Broadway. The consulting rooms are separate.

WM. WATSON, M. D.,
Formerly Surgeon to the Lock Hospital.

DR. WARD'S UNFORTUNATES' FRIEND is the SE PLUS ULTRA OF VENEREAL MEDICINES, and but requires to be known to meet with a universal approbation, and to stamp Dr. WARD as the greatest benefactor of the day. Dr. WARD hereby offers a reward of $5,000 to any physician who can cure private diseases with equally uniform celerity, ease, safety and cheapness. Remember, all ye that have been lingering, that by calling on Dr. WARD you may, in a few days, feel that "Richard is himself again." 50 Canal st., 3 doors east of Broadway.

DR. HUNTER'S RED DROP CAN BE HAD at the old office, No. 8 Division-st., and no where else; all others are malicious counterfeits of this, the most valuable discovery in medical science, it being the only thing on earth that will really cure and root out of the human system the rank and poisonous virus of the venereal disease; $1 per vial. Beware of a bandbill stating Dr. HUNTER has removed. It's a deception.

DR. RALPH'S OFFICES FOR THE TREATMENT of all diseases and abuses of the sexual and urinary system, stricture, debility, gleet, nervous and seminal weakness, piles gravel, dispepsia, and all chronic and constitutional diseases. Recent cases of disease quickly and radically cured. Hours till 1 and after 8 o'clock, Sunday excepted. No. 784 Broadway, corner 10th st.

STREET COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE.

MR. FIELD'S REPLY.

THE ARGUMENT CLOSED.

NO DECISION.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.—June 29.

Before Hon. Justice Peabody.

In the matter of the application of Daniel D. Conover to have the books and papers of the Street Commissioner's Office delivered to him.—This case was continued yesterday.

Mr. Brady stated that he had inadvertently omitted to refer to a section of the act of 1849, which he would therefore now cite. It was section 471 of that ordinance, which provided that "if a vacancy occur in the office of any of the heads of departments to be appointed by the Common Council, as prescribed by sec. 465, the Mayor, by and with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen, shall appoint a person to fill the same, who shall hold the office for the unexpired term of the person in whose place he shall be appointed."

Mr. Field then arose, and after thanking the Court and Mr. Brady for their courtesy in allowing him to proceed with his argument yesterday, instead of Saturday, proceeded as follows:

MR. FIELD'S CLOSING ARGUMENT.

The material facts upon which this application is to be decided are these, as the application contends:

Joseph S. Taylor was elected to the office of Street Commissioner of the City of New-York in November, 1853, to hold for three years; he went into office on the first day of January, 1854, and continued in office till the 9th of June, 1857, when he died.

On the 13th of June, 1857, Daniel D. Conover was appointed by the Governor to fill the vacancy, and received his commission in the name of The People, bearing the great seal of the State, and the signatures of the Governor and Secretary of State.

On the 13th, Mr. Conover took the oath of office and filed it in the office of the Mayor. He also executed an official bond, in the penalty of $10,000, with two sufficient sureties, and went to the Mayor's office for approval. The Mayor had heard that morning of his appointment, and had been to Mr. Turner, the late Deputy Street Commissioner, to instruct him to retain Mr. Conover, and to hold the office till he received instructions to the contrary from the Mayor. When Mr. Conover appeared at the Mayor's office, the Mayor was informed of his presence and the object of his visit, and though he waited nearly two hours, during which time other persons passed in and out of the private office, Mr. Conover was kept without, and the Mayor refused to see him. He then went to the Comptroller's office, and filed the bond with the Comptroller, who received it, and marked it—"filed June 13, 1857."

It was then 3 o'clock, and Mr. Conover went directly to the Street Commissioner's apartments in the Hall of Records, and there exhibited his commission, claimed the office and entered upon its duties. Turner disputed his authority, but no other clerk did it; and Mr. Conover remained in the inner apartment appropriated to the Street Commissioner's person, and behind the rail, at the usual desk, till 4 o'clock, the ordinary time of closing the office.

On Monday morning, the 15th, Mr. Conover went to the office at 9 o'clock, the hour of opening, and remained in possession till 4 o'clock, when he was seized by a captain of the Mayor's Police, heading a party of policemen and others, and forcibly ejected from the apartments.

On Tuesday morning Mr. Conover again returned, and remained for some time in possession, and transacted some business as Street Commissioner, when he was again seized by the same captain of Police, with his men, and forcibly ejected from the building. Since then he has not been permitted to remain in the building, though he retains the keys of the desk.

On the evening of Tuesday the Mayor nominated to the Aldermen Charles Develin as Street Commissioner, and they confirmed the nomination. He was escorted into the Street Commissioner's apartments by the Mayor's Police and several Aldermen, and now remains in those apartments, keeping the books, papers, maps and documents, though he is not recognized by the Comptroller, the fiscal officer of the City and the head of the Department of Finance, and no payments can be made on his requisition.

The books, papers, maps and documents which Mr. Conover seeks to obtain by this proceeding are public records belonging to the office of Street Commissioner, without which it is impossible for him to discharge its duties.

Upon these facts the following POINTS in behalf of Mr. Conover are submitted, in reply to the points and arguments on behalf of Mr. Develin.

First Point.—The criticism which has been made upon the words "officers of this State," in the act of February 3, 1849, is altogether illusory. The office of Street Commissioner is one of the officers of this State. Every public officer who holds his authority under this State as sovereign is an officer of the State. If it were not so, the Mayor need not take the oath to support the Constitution of the United States, for that Constitution only requires that officers "both of the United States and of the several States" should take the oath to support it (Art. 6, sec. 3.) So the State Constitution (Art. 12) requires "all officers, executive and judicial," to take the oath. If this does not include City officers, the Mayor need not swear to support the State Constitution. The Revised Statutes (1 R. S. 120, sec. 24, sub. 6; 131, sec. 33, sub. 6) include City officers among the officers of the State.

Equally illusory is the criticism upon the words of limitation which the same act contains, upon the time during which the ad interim incumbent shall hold. Mr. Conover can, in no event, hold longer than Mr. Taylor could have held, and, if the office had continued elective, as it was last year, he could have held only till the 1st of next January. The words "until the commencement of the political year next succeeding the first annual election after the happening of the vacancy at which such officers could be by law elected," are words of limitation upon the continuance of the vacancy. The language might have been in this form, with the same meaning.

Whenever a vacancy exists in any office in this State, the Governor shall fill it for the unexpired term; except that if the office be elective, the electors shall fill it at the first annual election, and the Governor's appointment shall be good only till then.

Second Point.—Indeed, the discussion which has been had in this case has narrowed the questions down to two: first, had the Mayor the right to fill the office; and second, did the Mayor, by refusing to decide upon Mr. Conover's bond, defeat his right to the possession of the papers of the office? The constitutionality of the act of July 2, 1849, its applicability to the vacancy in question, and the appropriateness of this proceeding to obtain possession of the papers, are too well settled or too clear for further argument.

Third Point.—Had the present Mayor the right to appoint a successor to Mr. Taylor, the late Street Commissioner? The right of a Mayor, elected under the new Charter, to appoint a Street Commissioner under that Charter, need not be disputed. The dispute is whether a Mayor, elected under the repealed Charters can now, before the terms of the old officers are expired, appoint a new Street Commissioner to hold under the new Charter. We say that he cannot.

1. The new Charter was passed on the 14th of April, and took effect as a law on the 1st of May. But there are some parts of it prospective, and others present in their operation. For example, when the second section declares that the legislative power shall be vested in a Board of Aldermen and a Board of Assistants, it refers to future Aldermen and Assistants. So the 3d, 4th, and 5th sections refer to future officers only, and the 21st section refers to future officers.

2. Take now the 19th section, which is in these words:

"The Mayor, Comptroller, and Counsel to the Corporation, shall each be elected by the electors of the City; the Mayor for the term of two years, the Counsel to the Corporation for the term of three years, and the Comptroller for the term of four years. The Comptroller shall be voted for upon a separate ballot. The other heads of departments shall be appointed by the Mayor, with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen. The Board of Aldermen shall have the power to confirm or reject all nominations of officers made by the Mayor; and whenever any person nominated by the Mayor shall be rejected by the Board of Aldermen, the Mayor shall immediately nominate another person."

It is perfectly certain that the Comptroller and Counsel to the Corporation mentioned in this section are not the present Comptroller and Counsel. They were elected in 1856 for three years each. If the present Comptroller and Counsel are not included, in what rule of construction can it be thought that the present Mayor and the present heads of departments, other than the Comptroller and Counsel, are included?

3. When the departments are not re-organized, the charter says thus expressive: "there shall continue to be an Executive Department," &c.—as in the 24th and 25th sections, referring to the Croton Aqueduct and Almshouse Departments.

4. A distinction is made by the act, between officers created by the Charter, and those holding offices under it. The 49th section declares that the Grand Jury may present any officers created by or holding offices under this Charter. The government of the City, up to the first of January next, is wholly carried on by officers created by the Charter. After that period it will be carried on by officers wholly elected by the people or appointed by the Mayor, and holding under the Charter—though as to the offices of Comptroller, Counsel, Street Commissioner, City Inspector, and of the Croton Aqueduct Department, it will still be carried on by officers created by the Charter, until the first day of January, 1860, when the whole machinery of the City government will be worked by officers elected and appointed, and holding under the Charter.

5. The 21st section provides for carrying on the City government through these several periods:

"The Mayor, Aldermen and Councilmen provided for in this act, shall be elected at the first election for charter officers to be held after the passage hereof, which election shall take place on the first Tuesday in December, 1857. All persons who shall have been elected to the several boards, commissions affecting the election of charter officers, and shall be in office at the time of the passage of this act, shall continue in office until the officers elected under this act shall take their office, and no longer, except that the officers of Commissioners of Repairs and Supplies and of Commissioners of Streets and Lamps are hereby abolished, and except that the persons now filling the several offices of comptroller, Counsel to the Corporation, Street Commissioner and City Inspector, and the officers of the Croton Aqueduct Department, shall continue in office until the expiration of their several terms, and shall not be removed from office during such term, except for the cause and in the manner provided for in sections 20 and 49 of this act; and all other persons now filling all school officers, and each Governor of the Almshouse, whose term of office may extend into the present financial year, shall also be elected on the day before provided for by this section."

6. At the death of Mr. Taylor, on the 9th of June, the office which he held was held solely under the new Charter. The old Charters under which he had been elected were all repealed. He could exercise no authority under them. His power was derived solely from the new act, and this act made him a Street Commissioner, and his office a statutory office, to expire on the first of January, 1860. In truth, there is not a single city office now held under the authority of the old Charters from 1830 to 1857. Every officer, high or low, must justify his acts by the new Charter, or he cannot justify them at all.

7. It follows clearly from these considerations that the present Mayor cannot appoint or remove any head of a department until 1858, and that the Mayor then elected cannot appoint or remove a Street Commissioner, City Inspector, or officer of the Croton Aqueduct Department, till the expiration of the terms for which they were elected under the old Charters.

8. The notion that the Mayor has now the power to fill the vacancy by virtue of the old ordinances has no support.

(1) The language of section 32 is limited and guarded. It is that "until the Common Council shall otherwise direct, the existing exclusions shall apply to the departments herein mentioned, so far as the same are applicable thereto, and are not inconsistent with this act." The words "apply to the departments herein mentioned" do not mean that they shall determine who are to hold the departments, or how they are to be appointed, but how they shall exercise their functions when appointed.

(2) The old ordinances are inconsistent with the new Charter in this respect—that the latter takes from the Mayor all right of control over, or interference with the Street Commissioner's office till 1860, while the former gave it to him in certain contingencies.

(3) The words "until the Common Council shall otherwise direct," suppose that the Common Council has control over the subject of the ordinances, and reserve to the Common Council the right to continue them, to re-enact them, to alter them, or to repeal them. It was clearly not intended to give to the ordinances any extraordinary authority, but to prevent the confusion which might arise before new ordinances on the same subject could be passed. What the Common Council could not now ordain, is not retained as an ordinance of the past.

(4.) The ordinance of 1849 on the subject of vacancies in the Street Commissioner's Department is but a repetition of the act of 1849, and copied with the ordinance for convenience, just as parts of the Constitution of our State are copied into the Revised Statutes. (1 R. S.) But they derive no force from being thus copied; and, when the original from which they were copied falls, the copy falls with it. The Charter of 1849 is specially repealed by the present Charter. It should seem then most natural to conclude that the Legislature has retained copying the ordinance, while it has intended to repeal the original statute, and has manifested such intention in the most pointed language.

Fourth Point.—By refusing to decide upon the sufficiency of Mr. Conover's bond, the Mayor did not defeat his right to take possession of the papers of the Street Commissioner's office.

1. The commission issued by the Governor in the name of the people, under the great seal of the State, constituted Mr. Conover the successor of Mr. Taylor, and thus brought him within the terms of the act under which this application is made.

2. No question is made regarding Mr. Conover's oath of office. If there had been, it would have been unavailing, for his oath was duly taken and duly filed. (Constitution, art. 12; 1 R. S., sec. 22; New Charter, sec. 39.)

3. The objection as to the bond, if it can be considered at all, amounts to this, that because the Mayor did not examine it, and so did not approve it, it is insufficient. The first answer to this objection is, that there is no statute which prescribes what security is to be given, or by whom executed, or by whom approved. The only statute referring to the subject is the new Charter, which in sections 30 and 45 declares that the Common Council shall require from all disbursing officers sufficient security, which shall be annually renewed. Until the Common Council act, by ordinance passed after this Charter, no security can be required from the Street Commissioner; and the law, 1 R. S. 120, section 26, which declares that "when any officer is required by law to execute any official bond, he shall cause the same to be filed in the proper office within the time prescribed for filing his oath of office, does not apply to this office." In the sense of this statute Mr. Conover was not required to execute an official bond.

5 If, however, a new ordinance was not necessary, and the old ordinances might be resorted to, by force of section 32, "so far as the same are applicable," and "not inconsistent" with the new Charter, the ordinance of 1849, the only one upon the subject, is inconsistent with the new act. The words of the ordinance are that:

"The Street Commissioner, before entering upon the duties of his office, shall execute a bond to the Corporation, with at least two sureties, to be approved by the Mayor, and filed in the office of the Comptroller, in the penal sum of $10,000, conditioned for the faithful performance of the duties of his office."

This ordinance contemplates one bond for the whole official term—the new Charter requires an annual bond.

6. If, however, the old ordinance were not inconsistent with the new act, and were applicable to the office in question, it must be deemed unreasonable and void. All by-laws or ordinances of corporations must be reasonable. (Angell & Ames on Corporations, § 347, 357; Davis vs. Mayor, in the Superior Court.) This by-law is not only unreasonable but positively unlawful. If it be valid, the Common Council can nullify any appointment of the Governor.

This very ordinance could enable the Mayor to prevent an appointee of the Governor from ever executing the office. A mandamus to the Mayor would do no good—for, although it might require him to decide upon the sufficiency of the sureties, it could not require him to approve them. If this ordinance be valid, the Common Council might pass one that the Street Commissioner appointed by the Governor, before entering upon the duties of his office, should execute a bond approved by the Common Council, or by the former Deputy Street Commissioner, or by any other person whom the Common Council should designate, and in that way defeat the appointment and obstruct the execution of the law. The ordinance made the law inoperative, and must, therefore, be illegal.

7. But if the ordinances of 1849 be in force, be applicable, be consistent with the new Act, and be in all respects legal and valid, it does not create a condition precedent to the right of Mr. Conover to have the books and papers of the office. It is directory upon the officer, and at most amounts to a condition subsequent. So the Revised Statutes expressly provide in respect to all cases of this kind. 1 R. S., 121, sec. 31.

"If any person shall execute any of the duties or functions of any office without having executed and filed in the proper office any bond required by law, he shall forfeit the office," &c.

8. If the execution and filing of the bond were a condition precedent, the approval of the bond is not so. The language of the section of the Revised Statutes just quoted, is, "without having executed and filed" the bond required by law. The bond required by law has been executed and filed. The certificate of the Mayor's approval would be only evidence of its sufficiency, which is abundantly proved by other evidence. Without such certificate the bond is valid and binding on Mr. Conover and his sureties.

Suppose, however, the bond approved by the Mayor be a condition precedent, the performance of that condition has been prevented by the Mayor, who, in this respect, is the agent of the State; and the performance of any condition is excused if it be prevented by the act of the sovereign imposing the condition, or any of his agents or servants. To this point there are numerous authorities—(3 Cowen, 297, The People vs. Manning & Condit; 12 Wend. 589, Carpenter vs. Stevens and others; 3 Hill, 579, The People vs. Bartlett.)

10. The conduct of the Mayor was fraudulent and contumacious. He is the party who seeks to defeat a rightful appointment by the Governor. To nullify the appointment and obstruct the operation of the law, he refuses to examine the bond, that he may gain time; he keeps out Mr. Conover by force, and puts an intruder in his place, seeking thus to retain possession of the office and its patronage by an incumbent de facto, who cannot be ousted by the ordinary action of quo warranto, till the autumnal elections are over. To allow such conduct to succeed, would be to bestow a premium upon fraud and violence.

If Mr. Conover's appointment were legal, no language can be too harsh for the conduct of the Mayor. And this question of the sufficiency of the bond can be examined on the assumption that the Governor had the power to appoint, and the Mayor had none. Looking at the Mayor's conduct in this point of view, it was as bad as it should be unavailing.

11. But if every one of our previous positions upon this head are untenable, the objection that there was an insufficient bond, or no bond at all, would still be unavailing to Mr. Develin, because no party but the State can take advantage of a failure of an officer to file his official bond. In a quo warranto against Mr. Conover the State could urge that objection, and in no other proceeding could it be urged, and when urged in that way it would be a sufficient answer on the part of Mr. Conover that he had done everything on his part required, and that the only delinquency was a grave delinquency on the part of an officer, agent, or servant of the State.

Mohawk and Hud. RR., 19 Wend., 142; Cheneango Firs Ins. Co., 19 Wend., 636; People vs. Fisher, 24 Wend., 215; Greenleaf vs. Law, 4 Iren., 170; Weeks vs. Ellis, 2 Barb. 324; U. S. "If an officer be created by letters patent he is a complete officer before he is sworn or before any investiture."

Mr. Field, in conclusion, referred to the recent City troubles, as teaching a lesson which should lead the people of New-York to take a more direct interest in their municipal elections. He thought a day of reckoning would come for those persons whose course has led to anarchy and confusion.

Mr. Brady inquired how soon a decision might be expected. His Honor promised to give the matter his earliest attention, but after some conversation it was thought that it would not be rendered before Wednesday, the 8th of July. The Court was then adjourned.

SAFETY IN THE WATER.—We have often called attention to BUNKER'S Life Preserving Shirts, but until yesterday we had no idea of their great value. We saw them in operation in the river on the Jersey side, in the afternoon, and feel convinced that they are the only life-preserving articles worthy the attention of the public. The sea-shirts are a beautiful affair, and are so constructed as to be worn without the slightest inconvenience. They can be adjusted for use at an instant's notice, and they will bear the wearer safely up in the roughest waters, or in the most fearful storm. They should be used by every person liable to an accident upon sea or river. Mr. BUNKER'S Life-Preserving Bathing Shirt is elegant. It is impossible to be sunken or overthrown, or in any way damaged or embarrassed with one of these garments on. Attempts were made yesterday, to plunge a boy who wore one, under the surface of the water, but without avail. Three strong men could not do it, although they added their weight to their strength. The bathing-shirt can be worn as an ordinary garment. One singular thing is, that after it is inflated you may stick it full of fine holes, and the air will not escape. The following letter, however, tells all about these life-preserving shirts:

TOMS RIVER, June 25, 1857.

C. J. BUNKER, Esq.—Dear Sir: I have examined your Life-Preserving and Bathing Shirts, and to-day I gave them an experiment at the wreck of the Bremen ship Minerva. Two young men put them on, and went down the side of the ship into the ocean, in the midst of the breakers, and they endeavored to put themselves under the water, but failed. One of them then threw himself in the water, and made no endeavors to save himself, but he came ashore as safely as though the ocean was as calm as a millpond. One of the young men before spoken of when coming across the Bay, fell overboard, and lay on the surface of the water, and told me, while lying there, he could go to sleep with all ease.

From the experiment tried to day, I am satisfied a person could live in the water (unless a fish should destroy him) until he starved to death; therefore I shall recommend to the Secretary of the Treasury to have ten for each station on the coast of New-Jersey.

I am, with respect, SAM'L C. DUNHAM,

MONDAY, June 29—P. M.

Decrease in Loans	$104,156
Decrease in Specie	1,889,454
Decrease in Circulation	88,735
Decrease in Undrawn Deposits	1,504,335

The decrease, it will be noticed, is general and consistent. The difference in the Specie line, for a last week, is not unexpected, and answers very nearly to our own estimate of this morning. The California remittance of June 5 went into Bank to-day, and the new week opens on a rising average, the Banks probably closing this afternoon, with the aid of California, $1,852,000, and the Sub-Treasury disbursement $140,000, on at least twelve and a half millions. There will be a further disbursement from the Sub-Treasury to-morrow, we understand, of $250,000 on account of the principal of the Public Debt. The export demand for Bullion this week will be mainly confined to about $350,000, to go by express to-morrow afternoon for shipment by the Boston steamer. This is the only sum that we can learn, on inquiry, is likely to go forward. There has been a further decline of ⅛@¼ ℔ cent. to-day in English bills, the business thus far for the market on Wednesday being done at 109⅝@109¼ ℔ cent. The Money Market is generally active to-day at the rates of last week, but no pressure is yet felt among either Street borrowers or parties applying for discounts. The preparations for the 1st and 3d of July, (Friday the 3d being the heaviest day for mercantile payments,) have been well provided for. The shipment of eighteen millions of Specie from this port and Boston in May and June has so sensibly relieved the export demand that the Custom Duties to be paid into the Sub-Treasury after the 1st of July will fall much lighter upon the Bank reserve than was calculated upon.

Including the Sub-Treasury statement of Saturday and the Clearing-House operations of the week past, the following is the general comparison of the Bank and Specie movements:

COMPARATIVE RECAPITULATION.

Specie	17,069,687	10,901,091	12,790,545
Circulation	8,260,289	8,505,065	8,593,800

The Stock Exchange was irregular to-day, though at the close, as well as in the general temper of the dealings through the day, denoting the turn in favor of the Bulls. The attacks of the opposite party upon New-York Central and Reading, however, were fierce, and in the main successful in establishing a decline of 1¼ ℔ cent. on each Stock. A failure in Philadelphia among the buyers of Reading, reported by telegraph, caused the Stock to fall as low as 67 ℔ cent. on the Street between the Boards. It closed at 67¾ in the afternoon, as against 69¼ on Saturday. New-York Central was done as low as 75¾ ℔ cent. cash and 76 ℔ cent. cash. The sales of this stock were something over 4,000 shares, and yet the certificates on the Street have not accumulated, and the deliveries of the day were made with some difficulty. New-York and Erie shares were firmer, selling at 27⅜@27⅝, at the close of business, cash, and 26¼@26⅜, seller 30 days, after the same options had been put on at 25 ℔ cent. in the forenoon. Michigan Southern finally rose 4 ℔ cent. on the lowest cash price of Saturday. The fluctuations of the day were 38@39¼@38@41@40¾. The resignation of the Treasurer on Saturday has opened the way to the restoration of harmony inside the office, and although his successor has not yet been indicated, there appears to be little doubt of a better state of feeling in the management. The Bears sold 600 shares of Panama at the early board at 90, seller 30 days, with the dividend on. The cash stock at the afternoon board was not offered under 92 per cent. An advance of 4@5 per cent. was established on La Crosse and the same on Milwaukee and Mississippi. Both stocks sold as high as 50 per cent. against 44@45 on Saturday, and left off at about 49c. cash. There was nothing done in Illinois Centrals. The shares of the Rock Island, Cleveland and Columbus, and Galena and Chicago were all lower. Michigan Central steady. The general market firm at the close. There seemed to be a check to the hostilities of the speculators for a further decline, as against New-York and Erie and Southern Michigan. The transfers of the latter close to-morrow at 3 o'clock, until the morning of 20th July, to prepare the books and certificates for the new registration at one of the leading banks or Trust companies. The amount of Erie stock now standing in the name of Wall-street brokers is reduced below 7,000 shares, out of 110,000 shares constituting the capital; the smallest amount known for seven years past.

The Havana steamers to-day bring $40,000 in Gold. The Exchanges in that market have turned in favor of the United States. At New-Orleans the exchanges are in favor of New-York by ½ to 1 ℔ cent.

We understand the withdrawal of Sugars from Public Store will be large for reexportation this week and next, but very light for consumption. The withdrawals of raw Wool will be considerable, but the duty under the new tariff is made almost nominal.

All the Coupons on the State Debt of Missouri are paid this year by the Bank of Commerce. The Coupons of the County of St. Louis, although payable on their face at the Phenix Bank, will be paid by the Bank of Commerce.

The following City Bank dividends, half-yearly, have been declared: Importers', 4 ℔ cent.; Commerce, 4 ℔ cent.; Grocers', 4 ℔ cent.; Hanover, 3½ ℔ cent., and State Bank of Troy 5 ℔ cent.
